——— ss. 9, 58, 74—Introduction into Calcutta of spirituous liquor manufactured elsewhere—Limits fixed by Collector—Additional punishment—Alternative sentence of imprisonment.—The provisions of s. 74 of the Bengal Excise Act as to additional punishment, where there has been a "previous conviction for a like offence," contemplate merely the case of the offender having been already convicted of an offence punishable with a fine of R200 or upwards, and being again convicted of another offence punishable with the same punishment: it is not necessary that he should have been previously convicted of the same offence. The accused were sentenced by the Presidency Magistrate, under ss. 58 and 74 of the Bengal Excise Act, to a fine of R200 each, in default to three months' imprisonment, and in addition to six months' imprisonment, which was the maximum term that could be awarded under s. 74. Held that the sentence of imprisonment was not in excess of the powers given to the Magistrate by s. 12 of the Presidency Magistrates Act, the imposition of the additional sentence of imprisonment not affecting the Magistrate's powers as regarded the original sentence under s. 58. No limits with regard to any distilleries in Calcutta having been fixed under s. 9 of the Act within which spirituous liquor manufactured otherwise than in that particular distillery shall be introduced or sold without a special pass, and the fixing of such limits being necessary to a conviction of an offence under s. 58, the convictions in this case were set aside. ——— s. 45 and s. 353—Powers of Chairman, Delegation of—Prosecution for obstructing drain.—The proviso to s. 45 of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884, cannot be considered as altogether overriding the body of the section, and relates only to specific acts in which an express or implied consent may have been given or held to have been given. It cannot be held to apply to a general authority, verbally given by a Chairman to a Vice-Chairman to institute prosecutions under the Act, as such power can only, under the body of the section, be delegated by a written order. In a prosecution instituted by a Vice-Chairman for obstructing a drain, where it appeared that the Chairman had some months previously verbally given the Vice-Chairman general authority to institute all such prosecutions under s. 353 of the Act, and it appeared that a conviction had been obtained before a Bench of Magistrates, and that on appeal to the Magistrate the conviction had been upheld, the Magistrate himself being the Chairman and hearing the appeal with the express consent of the accused, and where it was contended in revision before the High Court that, although there was no written order by the Chairman delegating his powers, it must be taken upon the facts proved and the circumstances of the case that the prosecution had been instituted with the express or implied consent of the Chairman obtained both previously and subsequently, within the terms of the proviso to s. 45:—Held that the proviso did not apply to the case, that the prosecution had not been properly instituted, and that the conviction and sentence must be set aside. ——— ss. 113, 116—Persons occupying holdings—Liability to assessment—Municipal Commissioners, power to tax—Assessment to tax.—The word "liability" in the second paragraph of s. 113 of Bengal Act III of 1884 means liability apart from the question of occupation, and must be taken to refer to the liability to assessment or rating of a person who is the occupier of a holding. The same restricted meaning must be placed upon the word "liability" in s. 116, which section has no application to a dispute as to whether a person assessed to a tax does or does not occupy a holding, and a suit brought to set aside an assessment on the ground that the person assessed does not occupy a holding is not therefore barred by the provisions of s. 116. The sum payable in respect of the license was received, and the license asked for by C was granted to him, and at the same time the statement was sent to an overseer of the Municipality for verification. On the 7th May the overseer reported that C had in his possession eight ponies and one horse. On the 8th May the Chairman of the Municipality passed an order directing C to be prosecuted for making a false statement in the schedule to his statement regarding the number of animals in respect of which he applied for the license. On the 9th May C presented a petition asking that the tax on the three animals might be received, and stating that he did not think he was liable to take out a license for them, as they were old and diseased and unfit for work. On the 13th May the Chairman passed an order on this application that he had no power to interfere, as the prosecution of C had already been ordered. Meanwhile on the 9th May a paper was sent to the Magistrate headed "List of municipal cases under Act III of 1884" in which C appeared as charged with an offience under s. 199 of the Penal Code for "filing a false statement, that is to say, putting down in the schedule six ponies only instead of eight ponies and one horse." On the 12th May the Deputy Magistrate directed a summons to issue to C, returnable on the 23rd. On the 18th May the District Magistrate passed an order to the effect that the Municipality could not institute a prosecution under the Penal Code, but that the Deputy Magistrate had power to do so, and that he should consider the provisions of ss. 182 and 417, read with s. 511, of the Penal Code as applicable to the facts of the case. On the 19th May the summons was issued, and the case was heard on the 23rd and 24th May and 19th June, on which date formal charges under ss. 199, 182, and 417—511 of the Penal Code were framed. Thereafter the hearing proceeded till the 16th July, when, on an application to the High Court, the proceedings were stayed, and a rule issued to show cause why they should not be quashed. It was contended at the hearing of that rule that the High Court should not interfere at that stage of the proceedings under its revisional jurisdiction. Held that the High Court has power to interfere at any stage of a case, and that, when it is brought to its notice that a person has been subjected, as in this case, for over two months to the harassment of an illegal prosecution, it is its bounden duty to interfere. Held, further, that it was quite clear that the Municipality had no power to institute the proceedings, and that, having regard to the provisions of s. 191 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it did not appear that the Deputy Magistrate, having no private complainant before him, had power of his own motion to institute them; but that, whether he had such power or not, the admitted facts of the case did not in law constitute any of the offences with which C was charged, and that the whole proceedings must be quashed. The Municipal Act is intended to be complete in itself as regards offences committed against the Municipal Commissioners, and there is no indication of any intention to render a delinquent also liable to punishment under the Penal Code. There is no penalty in the Act attached to the omission to make a return under s. 133, and no words in the Act constituting the making a false return a penal offence; and as there are no such words in the Act as are necessary to make the provisions of the Penal Code applicable, the Court has no power to import them. The Municipal Commissioners in such a case have the remedy provided by the Act itself. CHANDI PERSHAD v. ABDUR RAHMAN [I. L. R., 22 Calc., 131

The object of s. 155 of that Act appears to be to prevent the crossing of passengers from one bank of the river to the opposite bank by a boat plying for hire without a license within the prescribed limits. Semble, therefore, that the mere crossing of the bar of a khal leading into the limits of a municipal ferry would not constitute a breach of the Act. A ferryman has no authority to demand tolls from persons who are merely passengers in an unlicensed boat. The remedy against the person who keeps a ferry-boat without a license plying within the prescribed limits is provided by s. 156 of that Act. GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL v. SENAYAT ALI I. L. BENGAL MUNICIPAL ACT (III OF 1884)—concluded.

Chairman of the Motihari Municipality, I. L. R., 17 Calc., 329, approved. A landowner on whose land a market had been held for some years previous, and which land lay within the bounds of a municipality, was prosecuted under s. 344 of the Bengal Municipal Act, and convicted and fined for using such market without having obtained a license under s. 338. He alleged that he had applied for a license, and that it had not been granted him, and that the neglect to grant it was due to the fact that his market interfered with a new market established by the Municipal Commissioners, and their desire to close his market. It appeared that some time previous to the institution of the prosecution, the Municipal Commissioners at a meeting passed a resolution "that the provisions of s. 337 of the Municipal Act (Bengal Act III of 1884) be extended to this municipality," and it was contended that by this resolution licenses became necessary to sell at any market any of the provisions mentioned in that section, and that selling without such license rendered the accused liable to prosecution and fine under s. 344. It appeared, further, that Part X of the Act, which includes s. 337, had been previously extended to the municipality by an order of the Government of Bengal. Held that the resolution of the Commissioners was not an order such as is contemplated by s. 337, as it was not sufficiently precise to convey any definite meaning, and purported only to do what the Bengal Government had already done some time previously. Held, further, that the conviction and sentence must be set aside, there being no proper order under s. 337. VIII of 1819, s. 13.*—The word "profits" in the 4th clause of s. 13 of Regulation VIII of 1819 means that which is left to the tenure-holder after payment of the rent of the tenure. A person who enters into possession of a tenure as mortgagee under the provisions of that section is bound in the first place to pay the rent due to the landlord out of the collections before applying the same to the liquidation of his own debt, and the defaulter is not to be liable for the rent of the tenure during the period of the possession by the person so holding it as mortgagee. ——— Assessment of land formerly occupied for Government salt-works.—Upon the relinquishment by the Government of lands, within the ambit of a permanently-settled zamindari, continuously used before and since the perpetual settlement of salt-works from the commencement of salt-making by the Government, until after the passing of Regulation I of 1824, the provisions of that Regulation are applicable to the mutual rights of the zamindar and of the Government. Such lands were held by the officers of the Salt Department, in terms of cl. 11 of that Regulation, "free of rent" and "under a perpetual title of occupancy," whether belonging to a permanently-settled estate or not. The force of the Regulation and the right of the Government to assess such lands are not affected by 'khalari,' payments having been made, among other compensations, by the Government to the zamindar; and cl. 11 appears to contemplate some such payment. On a settlement of the relinquished lands, 'khalari' payments, being "sums remitted to the zamindars and to be allowed in perpetuity" within the meaning of cl. 4 of s. 9 of Regulation I of 1824, must be continued to the zamindar; or, if a settlement should be made with others, he should be assessed only for the

On appeal it was contended that the suit was barred under s. 27 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, as not having been brought within one year from the date of the dispossession. Held that the suit involved a question of title, and that the limitation of a year prescribed by s. 27 of the Rent Act, therefore, did not apply. 16. ——— Suit for arrears of rent—Act XIV of 1859, s. 1, cl. 16—Pro formâ defendants—Limitation.—The plaintiffs sued the defendants, who were ijaradars of the property in which they were co-sharers, for arrears of rent extending over a period of six years. The suit was first brought in the Revenue Court, and as their co-sharers had not joined in the suit, the plaintiffs made them defendants, and their being defendants preventing the plaintiffs from continuing the suit in the Revenue Court, they instituted it afresh in the Civil Court after Bengal Act VIII of 1869 came into operation. The defendants objected that, under the limitation provided by s. 29 of that Act, no more than three years' rent could be recovered; but the Judge held, affirming the decision of the Munsif, that the case was governed by cl. 16, s. 1, Act VIII of 1859, and that six years' rent could be decreed. Held, on special appeal to the High Court, that the fact of the co-sharers being made pro formâ defendants did not alter the real character of the suit, which was to recover arrears of rent, and that, therefore, the provisions of s. 29, Act VIII of 1869, were applicable, and a decree for three years' rent only was given. BENGAL RENT ACT VIII OF 1869 (X OF 1859)—continued.

17. ——— Suit for arrears of rent—Limitation.—The period of limitation within which a suit for arrears of rent may, under Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 29, be instituted, must, in the absence of any special agreement, be calculated from the last day of the year following the expiration of the year for which such rent is claimed. 18. ——— Suit for arrears of rent—Limitation.—The last day on which a suit for the recovery of arrears of rent can be instituted under s. 29, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, is the last day of the third year from the close of the year in which the rent became payable. The word "arrear" in that section means "rent in arrear." Woomesh Chunder Bose v. Soorjee Kanto Roy Chowdhry I. L. R., 5 Calc., 713: 6 C. L. R., 49, overruled. 19. ——— Suit for arrears of rent—Suit against registered tenant.—A suit having been brought in 1284 for arrears of rent of a dar-patni for the years 1281-83 and part of 1284 against A as the widow and heiress of the former dar-patnidar, who died in 1256, A pleaded that she was not the representative of her husband, as in 1276 she had adopted a son. Whereupon, in 1285, more than three years from the time the rent of 1281 became due, the son was made a defendant. It appeared that from the time of her husband's death A had allowed her own name to remain on the sherista of the plaintiffs, and that the plaintiffs had no notice of the adoption. Held, reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court, that the claim for the rent for the year 1281 was not barred as against A and the tenure, but that no decree could be made against the son in respect of it. 20. ——— Suit for arrears of rent—Limitation.—It having been decided in a former case that the zamindar's claim against defendants for the rent of 1271, being a suit for arrears of rent recoverable upon a liability arising out of matters not within the cognizance of a Revenue Court, was not governed by the special limitation prescribed by s. 32, Act X of 1859, but by the ordinary law of limitation, Act XIV of 1859,—Held that the zamindar's present claim of a precisely similar nature against the same parties in respect of the year 1272 was not barred by the special limitation prescribed by s. 29, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, corresponding to s. 32, Act X of 1859. 21. ——— Suit for arrears of rent—Limitation.—Certain suits brought in the Collector's Court for rent of 1270 and subsequent years having been dismissed in consequence of the defendant's plea that the whole of the estate had been resumed, and that there was no distinct land for which plaintiff was entitled to any separate rent, plaintiff was obliged to bring a civil suit to establish his right to recover those rents. Having obtained a decree, he brought a suit for arrears of rent from 1271 to 1279, but obtained a decree for the rents of three years only, the cause of action for the years previous to 1277 having been considered to be barred. Held that this decision was right, as there was nothing to prevent the plaintiff from including in the civil suit which he brought, or any previous suit, a claim for rent as well as for declaration of right. 22. ——— Act X of 1859, s. 32—Suit to recover rent in cash and kind with declaration of plaintiff's right.—A suit to recover rent in cash and kind which comprehended a claim to have a particular share of the rent declared as the property of the plaintiff was held to be one which a Collector, acting under Act X of 1859, would have refused to entertain, and therefore to be governed not by the limitation prescribed by Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 29, but by the ordinary law of limitation. 25. ——— Act X of 1859, s. 32—Cause of action—Suit for enhancement of arrears of rent.—A suit for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate, brought more than three years after the rent had accrued due, was held to be barred by lapse of time under s. 32 of Act X of 1859, notwithstanding that it was commenced within one year from the date of a decree made in a suit brought in the Civil Court declaring that the plaintiff was entitled to enhance. The cause of action was the non-payment of the rent at the enhanced rate, and not the declaration of the Civil Court that the plaintiff had a right to enhance. The litigation lasted till 1276, when the plaintiff obtained a decree, which, however, was not executed, as the defendant paid the amount and costs within fifteen days. In 1276 the plaintiff brought this suit to recover the rents of 1272 and of subsequent years. Held that the plaintiff's claim for the rents of 1272 was not barred by the lapse of three years, under s. 32, Act X of 1859. 27. ———— Act X of 1859, s. 32—Sale for arrears of rent—Sale afterwards set aside—Subsequent suit for arrears of rent.—A, a zamindar, sold the rights of B, his patnidar, for arrears of rent under Regulation VIII of 1819. This sale was subsequently set aside at the suit of B for irregularity. A then sued B for the arrears under Act X of 1859, and B raised the defence that the suit was barred, more than three years having elapsed from the close of the year in which the arrears became due. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) that, upon the setting aside of the patni sale, the patnidar took back the estate subject to the obligation to pay the rent, and that the particular arrears of rent claimed must be taken to have become due in the year in which that restoration to possession took place, and plaintiff could sue within three years from the close of that year. 29. ———— Act X of 1859, s. 32—Suit for arrears of rent—Assignment of rent in payment of bond.—Plaintiff, a zamindar, being indebted on a bond, gave the bond-holder an assignment on the patnidars for the greater portion of the patni rent to be paid to the bond-holder until the debt was liquidated. The bond-holder, not receiving his money, sued the zamindar in the Small Cause Court, whereupon the zamindar brought this suit against the patnidars for the rent due. The lower Appellate Court, reversing the decision of the first Court, held that the claim for the rent of 1273 was not barred by limitation, because brought within three years from the time that plaintiff knew of the non-payment of the rent by defendants. Held, upon the principle of the decision of the Privy Council in Swarnamayi v. Shashi Mukhi Barmani, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 10: 11 W. R., P. C., 5, that plaintiff was entitled to recover the rent of 1273. MOHESH CHUNDER CHAKLADAR v. GUNGAMONEE DOSSEE . . . . . 18 W. R., 59

30. ———— Suit delayed pending final decision as to rent.—A previous suit was brought in 1859, which was not finally decided in appeal by the High Court until December 1855, the effect of which decision was to take the talukh then in dispute out of the class of those protected by s. 51, Regulation VIII, 1793, and to make it liable to enhancement. Held that the plaintiff's cause of action for rent did not accrue until ascertainment of the rent by that decision, and that her present suit for about five years' rent from 1st July 1859, having been brought within one year from the date of that decision, could be maintained. 31. ———— Act X of 1859, s. 32—Suit for arrears of rent.—Deduction of time when bonâ fide suing defendant as a trespasser.—A landlord can be allowed a deduction in respect of limitation for the time he is suing a tenant as a trespasser, only when he is acting under a bonâ fide belief that the tenant is a trespasser, and not in suits when, from the circumstances of the case, he must have known of the defendant's right to hold as a tenant. HURONATH ROY CHOWDHRY v. GULUCKNATH CHOWDHRY . . . 19 W. R., 18

32. ———— Tenancy in abeyance—Res judicata—Limitation.—A, the zamindar, granted a patni lease of certain talukhs to B, who assigned it to C and D. On B's death, C and D applied to the Collector for registration of the patni talukh in their names as assignees of B. A objected to the registration on the ground that the lease insured only for the life of B. A's objection being overruled, he instituted a regular suit to eject C and D, the present defendants, which was decided against A finally by the Privy Council in 1874. During the pendency of this litigation, the zamindar sued to recover the rent for the year 1868, not upon the basis of the patni lease, but for use and occupation, treating the tenants as mere trespassers. This suit was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff ought to have sued on the lease. In 1875 the plaintiff brought the present suit for the rent of 1868 on the patni lease. The defendants pleaded res judicata and limitation. The plaintiff contended that the suit was within time on the ground that the right to recover the rent was in suspense during the pendency of the litigation regarding the lease. Held that the suit, though not res judicata, was barred under s. 29 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. Swarnamayi v. *Shashi Mukhi Barmani, 2 B. enhancement of rent of certain lands for a specified year. On the dismissal of this suit, A, more than five years after the rent fell due, sued for arrears of rent for the same year. Held that A was not entitled to deduct the time occupied in the conduct of his enhancement suit from the period which elapsed since the rent first fell due in order to bring his case within the period of limitation prescribed for such last-mentioned suits by s. 29 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. 34. ——— Limitation—Holiday.—A rent suit under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 must be brought strictly within the term of three years prescribed by s. 29 of that Act, which contains the only law of limitation applicable to the case. Where, therefore, the last day of the term so fixed was a close holiday, and the plaint in such a suit was filed on the following day,—Held that, inasmuch as s. 29 contains no provision for relaxing the term fixed by it, such as is contained in the general law of limitation, the suit was barred. 35. ——— Limitation—Suit for arrears of rent.—After the expiration of the period prescribed by s. 29 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, a plaintiff suing for arrears of rent cannot insist on the pendency of another suit, brought by him for possession of the land, as preventing limitation from running, where there has been no time during which such rent could not have been recovered if he had acted on his right of suing for it. In Rani Surnomoyee v. Shoshee Mookhee Burmonia, 12 Moore's I. A., 244: 2 B. L. R., P. C., 10, the claimant of rent was, until the setting aside of the sale that had taken place, in the position of a person whose claim had been satisfied. The right to sue in that case had been suspended, and it was therefore distinguishable from the present. The plaintiff's ancestor purchased a talukh from the Government, subject to an ijara therein held by the defendants, which expired in 1866. A suit brought by the plaintiff in 1874 for possession was dismissed finally in 1876, the defendant's claim to remain in possession under another tenure being allowed. The plaintiff in 1876 sued the defendants for arrears of rent for the years 1866—1872. Held that the suit was barred under s. 29, notwithstanding the proceedings of 1874. This decree was, however, reversed on appeal on the 6th Srabun 1288, and their suit was dismissed. In a suit for arrears of rent from 1282 to 1288,—Held that the plaintiff was not protected from the operation of the law of limitation during the pendency of his suit to set aside the patni, and that his suit was barred except as to the arrears accruing within three years preceding the suit. Hurro Pershad Roy v. *Gopal Doss Dutt, I. 21. ———— Suit against agent for accounts.—A suit under s. 30, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, against a gomashta to obtain accounts after the agency has determined, must be brought within a year from such determination. The proviso in that section refers to suits for money, and under that proviso, where a fraudulent account has been given in by the agent, concealing the fact of the receipt of certain moneys, the zamindar has one year from the discovery of the fraud to bring his suit for such money. One of the conditions of the lease was that rent was to be paid harvest by harvest, otherwise the lessee would be liable to ejectment. On the 12th of September 1873, M obtained a decree against R for arrears of rent which became due in May. On the day following, M instituted a suit under cl. 5, s. 23, Act X of 1859, for the cancelment of the lease and the ejectment of R on account of the non-payment of rent when due, according to the terms of the lease. R paid into Court the amount of the arrear on the 18th of September, i. e., within fifteen days from the date of the decree, and in the course of the suit under s. 23, cl. 5. In special appeal the suit was dismissed, it being held that the circumstances of the case brought it within the operation of the provisions of ss. 21 and 78 of Act X of 1859, which were applicable in deciding it. Upon non-payment of rent for the year 1281, a suit for khas possession of the lands was brought against A and B. The defendants claimed an equitable right to prevent forfeiture by paying all arrears according to the terms of the dar-patni, together with all costs. Held that, whether or not the provisions of the Rent Law actually applied to the case, the Court was bound by the analogy of that law to apply in favour of the defendants an equity similar to the equity there given, and accordingly a decree was passed, that if the defendants should pay the whole of the rent due up to date, with interest according to the conditions of the dar-patni, together with the costs in the High Court and Courts below, they should be released from the effect of the forfeiture. Application for execution was made, in December 1877, against property other than that for which the rent was due; but was, in the first Court, opposed successfully by the judgment-debtor on the ground that the under-tenure should first be proceeded against, though such under-tenure had already been sold away in execution of another decree and the execution-proceeding was struck on the 15th March 1878, and the property released from attachment. The judgment-creditor appealed, and was successful both in the lower Appellate Court and the High Court, the latter decision being dated 26th February 1879. The costs awarded him in these proceedings, if added to the amount of the decree, would amount to a sum of more than ₹500. The next application for execution was made on 19th August 1879. Held that the costs of the appeals in the execution-proceedings should not be added to the decree, and, therefore, the decree being for less than ₹500, the provisions of s. 58, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, applied to it. Held, also, that the attachment having been removed in March 1878, the execution of the decree was barred under that section. ——— Suit for value of crops—Distraint—Jurisdiction—Small Cause Court.—The plaintiff made a complaint to the Magistrate against the defendant, his landlord, for forcibly carrying away his crops; whereupon the defendant was tried, convicted of theft, and punished. The plaintiff then instituted a suit against the defendant in the Munsif's Court, apparently under s. 95 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, and obtained a decree declaring the distraint to be illegal, and directing the crops to be given up to him. The defendant offered to give up a smaller quantity than was mentioned in the decree. The plaintiff refused to take the same, and brought a suit in the Small Cause Court to recover the value of the quantity he had claimed before the Munsif and something additional. Held that the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction, and that the suit ought to have been brought under s. 98 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. 24. ——— Special appeal—Co-sharer—Suit for rent.—The plaintiff, one of several co-sharers of a talukh, sued to recover her share of rent, making her co-sharers, who resisted her claim, defendants. The first Court raised and tried questions of title between the plaintiff, her co-sharers, and the raiyat, and decided in favour of the plaintiff. The lower Appellate Court, without expressing any opinion on the rights of the parties, dismissed the suit on the ground that it was not maintainable. On special appeal it was contended that no appeal would lie, as the amount of the claim was less than R100, and no question of title was determined by the judgment; but this objection was overruled on the ground that the decree of the lower Appellate Court, dismissing the suit, had the effect of deciding the question of title against the plaintiff. On appeal under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent,—Held that the judgment, rather than the decree, is to be looked at in applying s. 102, Bengal Act VIII of 1869. No appeal lay from the judgment of the lower Appellate Court, inasmuch as that judgment showed not only that no question of title was determined, but that the Judge did not even consider it. 37. ——— Special appeal—Rent suit under ₹100—Title.—A and B, both of whom set up a claim to certain land, brought separate rent suits against the tenants. In none of these suits did the amount claimed exceed ₹100. Subsequently to the institution of the rent suits, A sued B to establish his title to the land in dispute. The District Judge, before whom the rent suits came on appeal, allowed them to stand over until the decision in the suit between A and B. That suit was decided in favour of B, and the Judge then decided the rent suits instituted by B in his favour, and dismissed the suits instituted by A. Held that no second appeal would lie in the rent suits, as no question of title between parties having conflicting claims was decided in them. 38. ——— Special appeal—suit for rent below ₹100—Landlord and tenant.—In a suit for rent below ₹100, the defendant set up the title of a third person (the third person was, however, no party to the proceedings), and the lower Court, finding that relationship of landlord and tenant existed between the parties, and that the rent was unpaid, decided the suit on that ground in favour of the plaintiffs. The defendant appealed to the District Judge, who decided that the defendant had paid the rent, and reversed the decision of the Court below. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court, but were met with the objection that no special appeal would lie. Held that s. 102 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 prohibited the appeal, the case being one between landlord and tenant, and there consequently being no question relating to title as between parties having conflicting claims. 2. ——— Landlord and Tenant—Suit for rent—Enhancement of rent—Enhancement of rent by a registered kabuliat within fifteen years from a previous oral agreement to pay enhancement of rent, Effect of.—By an oral agreement in the year 1885 the tenant defendant agreed to pay an enhancement of rent, and he paid rent at that rate until subsequently he executed in the year 1893 a registered kabuliat, by which he agreed to pay a further enhancement of rent which was more than two annas in the rupee. Upon a suit for rent by the landlord based on the registered kabuliat,—Held that, inasmuch as the enhancement of rent in s. 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act refers to enhancement after the promulgation of the Act, if in this case the enhancement which was made in the year 1885 was before the Act came into force, it would not bar an enhancement during the period of fifteen years from the date thereof as contemplated by cl. (3) of s. 29. But if the said enhancement was made after the Act came into force, it would also not bar a subsequent enhancement within fifteen years from the date thereof, as the previous contract was only an oral one and was not effectual and binding upon the defendant. Held, also, that having regard to cl. (b) of s. 29, as the enhancement was more than two annas in the rupee, the registered kabuliat was bad in law, if the rent then agreed to be paid was an enhanced rent. The kabuliat would also be bad in law, if the rent agreed to be paid is partly enhanced and partly increased rent. Held, further, that having regard to prov. (1) of s. 29, as also the provisions of s. 27, the plaintiff would at any rate (i.e., failing the kabuliat) be entitled to recover rent at the rate paid by the defendant for more than three years. 1. —— Record of rights—Presumption from twenty years' uniform payment of rent—Raiyats holding at fixed rates.—In a proceeding for record of rights under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), it having been found that certain raiyats were holding their lands at rates which had not been changed during twenty years before the institution of the proceeding, the Settlement Officer recorded them as "raiyats holding at fixed rates." In second appeal, held that, under s. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the Settlement Officer was right in giving effect to the presumption that the raiyats were holding at fixed rate of rent and in recording them as "raiyats holding at fixed rates." Bansi Das v. *Jagdip Narain Chowdhry, I. A tenure-holder granted a usufructuary mortgage of certain lands within his tenure to A, and directed the tenants to pay their rents to him. Subsequently the superior landlord brought a suit for road cess against the tenure-holder, and in execution of his decree sold the tenure under s. 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. A then brought a suit against one of the tenants for arrears of rent, and contended that all that passed under the auction-sale was the right, title, and interest of the tenure-holder, and that his rights under the mortgage were unaffected by the sale, and that he was still entitled to the rent. Held that Ch. XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act must be read with s. 65 of the Act, and that, having regard to the definition in cl. 5 of s. 3, "rent," as used in that section, includes road cess payable by the tenant, and that the sale was a sale of the tenure, the purchaser acquiring the property free from the incumbrance created by the tenure-holder in favour of A, it not being a registered and notified incumbrance within the meaning of s. 161 of the Act. The depositaries executed and delivered a receipt to the Amin. Some time after, the ticcadar made an application to the Collector in order to obtain his share of the produce; but, on a representation being made by one of the depositaries that the crops (with the exception of a small portion) had been destroyed by rain, the Collector declined to grant any relief to the ticcadar. The ticcadar then brought this suit against the depositaries for recovery of the value of the crops deposited. Held that the receipt executed and delivered to the Amin established privity between the plaintiff and the defendant so as to enable the former to maintain the suit. Held, also, that the suit was maintainable in the Civil Court. The application was opposed by the proprietors of another indigo factory who had taken under leases from the raiyats the greater part of the lands of the village, including the holdings within which the plot in question was comprised. The Collector of the district had certified under s. 84 that the purpose for which the land was required was reasonable and sufficient. The Munsif tried the matter as a disputed question of fact, and held that the purpose alleged was not reasonable or sufficient, and declined to authorize the purchase. The District Judge on appeal reversed the Munsif's finding and authorized the compulsory acquisition of the land. Held that there is no appeal against an order passed by a Civil Court under s. 84 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that the order of the District Judge was without jurisdiction and must be set aside. Held by PRINSEP and AMEER ALI, JJ. (PETHERAM, C.J., dissenting)—That the Collector's certificate under s. 84 is not conclusive as to the reasonableness and sufficiency of the purpose for which the land is sought to be acquired; that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is not confined to giving effect to the Collector's certificate, but the Court is to hold a judicial enquiry to determine the reasonableness and sufficiency of the purpose and all matters coming within the section, and is competent to consider the grounds upon which the certificate was granted: that the appointment of a European manager and the necessity for erecting buildings for his comfort and convenience are insufficient

One of the defendants appeared and pleaded that the tenure had been some time previously divided by the principal plaintiff (who was the kurta of the family and collected the rent), and that after the division he had paid ₹7-8 per annum, being the rent in respect of his half of the tenure, to the kurta; in support of such payments, he produced dakhilas or rent receipts signed by the kurta. The suit was dismissed by the Munsif, but on appeal the Additional Judge gave the plaintiffs a decree for the amount of rent claimed less the amount proved to have been paid by the defendant, who contested the suit, as shown by the dakhilas. He held that the division had not been proved, and that the dakhilas did not amount to the written consent required by s. 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Held, on appeal to the High Court, that the dakhilas or rent receipts did not amount to a written consent as required by s. 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that the decree of the lower Court must be upheld. 2. ——— and ss. 95 and 99—Common manager—Minor co-sharers—Court of Wards—District Judge, jurisdiction of.—On the 8th June 1891 one of the co-sharers in an estate applied for the appointment of a common manager; but on objection taken by the other co-sharers, this application was withdrawn. On the 4th March 1891, the same co-sharer applied to the Court to the effect that "proceedings might be taken under s. 93 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that the management of the estate might be taken over by the Court of Wards." The other co-sharers and the representative of certain minor co-sharers objected to the appointment of a common manager, but consented to the estate being made over to the Court of Wards. On the 30th March 1892, the District Judge, without satisfying himself as to the necessity of the appointment of a common manager, ordered that the estate should be made over to the Court of Wards. The Court of Wards took over the estate, but subsequently refused to act, and the Board of Revenue directed that the estate should be released. On the 13th August 1892, the District Judge issued notices on the co-sharers under s. 93, calling on them to show cause why a common manager should not be appointed. All the co-sharers appeared and objected to the appointment of a common manager, but one of them and the representative of the minor co-sharers stated that they had agreed to appoint a private person manager of their shares. The District Judge therefore appointed such person temporarily as a common manager of the entire estate until the co-owners should take steps under s. 99 to satisfy the Court that they were in a position to manage the estate, and on the 24th March 1893 passed two orders on separate applications made by two of the co-sharers for the release of the estate, refusing to release it, as he was not satisfied that the management of the estate could be conducted without injury to the rights of the minor. Held that these orders of the 24th March 1893 were ultra vires. He applied under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act for the measurement of the estate and the preparation of a record-of-rights, and the Revenue Officer deputed for these purposes found that a portion of the estate held by the defendant was mal land, though it was held as lakhiraj under certain sanads, and as he also found that no rent had ever been paid for it, it was entered on the record-of-rights as mal land held under those sanads as lakhiraj. The Special Judge, on appeal by the plaintiff, held that the land, having been found to be mal, should have been entered as mal land unassessed with rent. In a suit to have the land assessed with rent, it was found that the sanads, under which the defendant claimed to hold, were granted not by any predecessor in title of the plaintiff, and were of a date anterior to the Permanent Settlement. Held (reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court) that the Special Judge had no jurisdiction to determine whether the land was mal or lakhiraj, and that his judgment as to its being mal did not therefore operate as res judicata. Secretary of State for India v. *Nitye Singh, I. 1. ——— and ss. 38, 52, sub-s. 2, cl. (c), Ch. X, s. 101, sub-s. 2, cl. (a)—Ancient holdings—Additional rent for excess lands—Onus of proving lands in excess of area originally let—Permanent deterioration—Liability to additional rent—Duty of Settlement Officer.—S. 104, sub-s. (2,) of the Bengal Tenancy Act is subject to the provisions of s. 52 of the Act. The mere fact that on a measurement made by a zamindar under the authority of Government, given under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it is found that the tenants generally are in possession of lands in excess of the areas entered in his zamindari papers and their rent receipts, does not necessarily prove that he is entitled to additional rent for the excess areas. Where settlements or holdings are of very old date and lands are let out by areas ascertained without any accurate survey, but as contained within certain recognized boundaries, for instance, by reference to other holdings, it is incumbent upon the zamindar seeking enhancement of rent very many years after the original settlement to show that the lands held by the raiyats are in excess of the lands originally let to them in consequence of some encroachment or some alluvial increment, or that the settlement was made on the basis of measurement and the rates of rent as applied to the area then determined, while on a fresh measurement made by the same length of measure it has been found that he is entitled to receive additional rent which by carelessness or neglect or some other cause he had hitherto lost. A liberal interpretation should be put upon the word "permanently" in s. 38, sub-s. (1), cl. (a), and the word construed with reference to existing conditions. It cannot be said that a deterioration is not permanent, only because by the application of capital and skill it might be removed. In determining the liability to additional rent the Settlement Officer is by s. 52, sub-s. (2), cl. (c), bound to consider the length of time during which the tenancy has lasted without dispute as to rent or area. Although only an occupancy raiyat can bring a suit under s. 38, the principles laid down in that section ought to be taken into consideration in all proceedings for settlement of rent, whatever be the status of the raiyat. ——— s. 120, sub-s. 2—Record of proprietor's land as private land—Grounds for determining land to be private—Evidence.—In enacting sub-s. (2) of s. 120 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the Legislature had before it the attempts which might be expected on the part of landlords to frustrate the intention of the Legislature, as asserted in the draft Bill laid before the Council for consideration, to extend the occupancy-rights of tenants before the measures then declared to be in contemplation became law; and therefore the particular date, the 2nd day of March 1883, the date on which the draft Bill was published in the Gazette, and leave was obtained to introduce the Bill into the Council, was declared to be the latest date on which there should be free action on the part of zamindars to assert their private rights, so as to prevent the accrual of special tenant rights. From the wording of that sub-section, it was intended that, in determining whether land is the private land of the proprietor, regard should be had to any declaration made before the 2nd March 1883 by the landlord, and communicated to the tenants, in respect to the reservation of the proprietor's right over the land as his private land: the words "any other evidence that may be produced" in that sub-section mean, therefore, any other evidence tending in the same direction that may be produced to show the assertion of any title on the part of the proprietor and communicated to the tenant before that date. BENGAL TENANCY ACT (VIII OF 1885)—continued.

Before the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885 came into operation, a decree for rent was obtained under Bengal Act VIII of 1869. After the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885 had become law, the tenancy in respect of which the rent had become due was attached in execution of such decree. A claim was subsequently put in to the attached property by a third person, which claim was disallowed as being forbidden by s. 170 of the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885. Held that the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885 were applicable to the proceedings in execution; the term "proceedings" in s. 6 of Act I of 1868 not including proceedings in execution after decree. 5. ———— and s. 162—Setting aside sale—"Decree," Meaning of.—The word "decree," in s. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, no doubt primarily refers to the decree of which execution is sought for; but if in the meantime, that is to say, before the sale is actually held, the decree of the first Court, of which execution was applied for, is modified in appeal in favour of the judgment-debtor, then necessarily "the decree" must be the decree of the Appellate Court. So where a decree for rent was passed by the first Court on the 11th January, and in execution of the decree the defaulting tenure was sold on the 5th June, but in the meantime the decree had been modified by the Appellate Court on the 18th May,—Held that the judgment-debtor could set aside the sale by depositing within 30 days from the date of sale the amount covered by the decree of the Appellate Court, together with a sum equal to five per centum of the purchase-money. The plaintiffs, who were some only of the co-sharers in a zamindari, instituted a suit to enhance the rent of a tenure within the zamindari and to recover their share of the rent at the enhanced rate for a specified period. Of the tenure-holders, some were co-sharers of the plaintiffs in the zamindari, and the remainder were not interested therein. It was admitted that the plaintiffs collected their share of the rent of the tenure separately from their co-sharers, who were sharers in the tenure. The plaintiffs alleged that they had requested the latter to join them in instituting the suit, but that they had declined to do so, and they accordingly made them defendants in the suit. Held that the plaintiffs could not maintain the suit, having regard to the provisions of s. 188 of the Act. 10. ——— Co-sharers—Suit by one co-sharer entitled to collect rent separately, for additional rent for land brought under cultivation, payable in terms of lease—Joint landlords—Suit for rent—Collection of rent separately.—A tenant held 19½ bighas of land under a kabuliat granted by three joint landlords, which provided, inter alia, that rent was to be paid at the rate of Rl·8 per bigha in respect of 8 bighas only, and that the remaining 11½ bighas, which were then unculturable, should, when they became fit for cultivation, be assessed with rent at the same rate. One of the co-sharers, who was admittedly entitled, under arrangement, to collect his share of the rent separately, instituted a suit against the tenant, joining his co-sharers as defendants, to recover arrears of his share of the rent for a specific period, and claimed to be entitled to recover rent in respect of the whole 19½ bighas, on the allegation that the 11½ bighas had then become fit for cultivation, and were therefore liable to be assessed with rent at the rate mentioned in the kabuliat. The tenant objected that, having regard to the provisions of s. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the suit would not lie at the instance of the plaintiff alone. Held that the suit did lie. It was clearly not one for enhancement of rent in the sense in which that term is used in the Bengal Tenancy Act, nor was it one for additional rent for excess land within the meaning of s. 52 of that Act, and as the plaintiff was entitled to collect his share of the rent separately, there was no reason why he should not be entitled to claim separately the rent payable, not upon any fresh adjustment of the rent inconsistent with the continuance of the old tenancy, but upon an ascertainment of the rent payable in accordance with the terms of the original letting. Guni Mohamed v. *Moran, I. Plaintiff brought this suit for the whole of the rent, claiming only his own share of it, making those co-sharers defendants who did not join as plaintiffs. The terms of the defendant's pottah were that, the whole of the lands being brought under cultivation, the landlords would be at liberty to measure the lands of the ganti, and, if the land be found greater in quantity than 150 bighas, the tenant would pay rent at the rate of 10 annas per bigha. The lands being found greater than the said quantity, the plaintiff prayed for a decree for rent at that rate for the whole area. The defendant pleaded inter alia that the plaintiff, as a fractional sharer in the landlord's interest, could not sue him alone. Held that the suit was maintainable at the instance of the plaintiff alone, and that it was not a suit to alter the rent under the provisions of s. 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Ram Chunder Chukrabutty v. *Giridhur Dutt, I. 12. ——— Right of fractional co-sharer to maintain a suit for enhancement of rent—Agreement with fractional co-sharer to pay rent separately, Effect of—Joint landlords.—A fractional shareholder cannot bring a suit for enhancement of rent. Under the provisions of s. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, where there are several joint landlords, they must all join in bringing a suit for enhancement of rent; an agreement in a kabuliyat by one tenant to pay an enhanced rent to some of the landlords, if, on measurement, the jama of his jote is increased, does not create a right to maintain such a suit by those landlords. Such a suit cannot be brought otherwise than under the terms of the Bengal Tenancy Act. An agreement by a tenant with some of several joint-landlords to pay his share of the rent separately, does not create a separate tenancy. Gopal Chunder Das v. *Umesh Narain Chowdhry, I. L. When, therefore, the plaintiffs, who are joint landlords, have, in suits separately instituted by them against the defendant tenant, asked for apportionment of rent and for recovery of rents due on such apportionment, and all the parties interested have been made parties to the suits, there is no reason why the plaintiffs should not have the rent apportioned; and the apportionment may take place in respect both of the arrears alleged to be due and the future rent. This suit was dismissed on the 29th June 1881; but, on appeal to the High Court, this decision was reversed on the 11th May 1883, and khas possession was given to the plaintiff. On appeal, the Privy Council, on the 24th July 1886, reversed the decree for khas possession, and declared the plaintiff entitled to a decree, fixing the extent of the excess lands and assessing rent therefor in terms of the kabuliat, such rent to be payable from and after the 28th March 1878, and remitting the case for a finding as to the extent of the excess lands. The Subordinate Judge, to whom the case was remitted, gave the plaintiff a decree on the 21st March 1887 for increased rent in respect of 2 kanis 7 gundahs 2 cowries of excess land. On the 14th July 1887, the plaintiff instituted a suit to recover excess rent for the years 1878 to 1886, and for rent at the old rate plus the excess rent for a portion of the year 1887. Held that the suit, so far as the rent for 1878 to 1883 was concerned, was barred by limitation. 5. ——— Limitation—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 184—Suit for arrears of rent—Bengal Regulation VIII of 1819.—A landlord, to recover arrears of rent for the year 1297 B.S. from the patnidar, filed a petition on the 1st Bysack 1298 (13th April 1891) in the Court of the Collector, under the provisions of Regulation VIII of 1819, praying for the sale of the patni talukh. The talukh was sold and was purchased by the landlord on the 1st Jeyt 1298 (14th May 1891). The whole of the arrears not being realized by the sale-proceeds, the landlord brought an action on the 14th May 1894 for the balance of the patni rent to the end of 1297 B.S. (12th April 1891). The defence was that the suit was barred by limitation. Held that the suit was governed by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act, s. 184, and sch. III, art. 2 (b); the period of limitation in a suit for rent provided by that article is three years from the last day of the Bengali year in which the arrear falls due, and as in this case the arrear fell due in the Bengali year 1297, which ended on the 12th April 1891, and the suit was not commenced until 14th May 1894, more than three years from the last day of the Bengali year in which the arrear fell due, it was barred by limitation. It was intended by that enactment to provide for all suits to recover possession of land brought by an occupancy raiyat, and to limit the period previously allowed by the Courts for suits to recover possession by reason of a title set up and provided by the plaintiff, and not to provide only for suits of a possessory nature such as were previously dealt with by s. 27 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. The judgment-debtor applied, under s. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code, for a re-hearing of the rent suit, and on the day fixed for the sale applied for stay of execution; the sale was stayed, and the Court of its own motion and for its own convenience directed the execution case to be struck off the file "for the present." BHOOTAN DUARS ACT (XVI OF 1869).

——— Schedule and rules under Act—Bhutan Duars' Repealing Act (Bengal Act VII of 1895), s. 3—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), application of, to Bhutan Duars—Minors, Fraud against—Suit to obtain relief against fraudulent transfers effected, and entries made in the record-of-rights under Act XVI of 1869, during one's minority.—The plaintiff's father died, possessed of a 4-annua share in a jote in Bhutan Duars. During their minority their elder brothers sold that jote to the first three defendants in fraud of the rights of the plaintiffs, and the purchasers took possession of the jote accordingly and had entries made in their own names in the record-of-rights. The plaintiffs brought this suit under Act XVI of 1869 against the defendants to recover their share in the jote. The lower Appellate Court, without going into the merits, dismissed the case as not cognizable in view of the provisions of Act XVI of 1869 and the Repealing Act VII of 1895. On appeal therefrom,—Held that the notification extending the Civil Procedure Code to Jalpaiguri had not the effect of introducing the Civil Procedure Code to the Bhutan Duars, although the latter are a part of Jalpaiguri, inasmuch as Act XVI of 1869, which was then in force in the Bhutan Duars, excluded that jurisdiction in express terms. But the effect of the repeal of Act XVI (without any qualification) by Bengal Act VII of 1895 has left the Civil Procedure to be administered in the Bhutan Duars. That the plaintiffs are not precluded by the entry in the record-of-rights from obtaining relief against the defendants. An entry in a record under Act XVI of 1869 in order to be conclusive evidence of any right, interest, or other matter must be one which has been honestly and fairly obtained. 3. ——— Divorce among Rajput Gujaratis in Khandesh—Penal Code, ss. 494 and 109—Marrying again during the lifetime of husband—Deed of divorce by husband—Validity of divorce.—A member of the caste of Ajanya Rajput Guzars residing in Khandesh executed a deed of divorce to his wife. The Court held on the evidence that the deed was proved, and that in this caste a husband was for a sufficient reason, such as incontinence, allowed to divorce his wife; that the deed in the present case had not been executed for a sufficient reason; and that, consequently, the parties entering into a second marriage were guilty of an offence under s. 494 of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860); and that the priest who officiated at that marriage was an abettor under ss. 494 and 109. Mere consent of persons to be present at an illegal marriage, or their presence in pursuance of such consent, or the grant of accommodation in a house for the marriage, does not necessarily constitute abetment of such marriage. 10. ——— Marriage with Mahomedan—Mahomedan Law—Marriage—Penal Code, s. 494.—The petitioner, originally a Hindu woman and the illegitimate offspring of Chattri parents, was duly married according to Hindu rites to D, who was also by caste a Chattri. Subsequent to the marriage, the petitioner became a convert to Mahomedanism and married a Mahomedan. She was charged with and convicted of an offence under s. 494 of the Penal Code. It was contended on her behalf that (1) the marriage between her and D was invalid under Hindu law by reason of her illegitimacy and the consequent difference of caste between the contracting parties; (2) the marriage between her and D became dissolved under the Hindu law on her conversion to Mahomedanism; and (3) the second marriage was not void under the Mahomedan law by reason of its taking place in the lifetime of D, and that the conviction was therefore erroneous. There was no evidence of any notice having been given to D previous to the second marriage calling on him to become a Mahomedan. Held that illegitimacy under Hindu law is no absolute disqualification for marriage, and that, when one or both contracting parties to a marriage are illegitimate, the marriage must be regarded as valid, if they are recognized by their caste people as belonging to the same caste. Held, also, that there is no authority in Hindu law for the proposition that an apostate is absolved from all civil obligations, and that, so far as the matrimonial bond is concerned, such a view would be contrary to the spirit of that law, which regards it as indissoluble, and that accordingly the marriage between the petitioner and D was not, under the Hindu law, dissolved by her conversion to Mahomedanism. Rahmed Beebee v. Rokeya Beebee, 1 Norton's Leading Cases on Hindu Law, p. 12, dissented from. Held, further, that, as the validity of the second marriage depended on the Mahomedan law, and as that law does not allow a plurality of husbands, it would be void or valid according as the first marriage was or was not subsisting at the time it took place; that no notice having been given to D as required by Mahomedan law previous to the second marriage, and no recourse having been had to the Courts for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that the former marriage was dissolved, and as British India cannot be held to be a foreign country for the purpose of rendering such notice unnecessary, the previous marriage was not dissolved under Mahomedan law, and the subsequent marriage was therefore void. Held, accordingly, that the conviction was right. 11. ——— Mahomedan law—Marriage—Child marriage—Option of minor of repudiating marriage on attaining puberty—Want of ratification after puberty—Penal Code, s. 494.—B, a Mahomedan girl whose father was dead, was alleged to have been given in marriage by her mother to J some years before she attained puberty. Prior to her attaining puberty, J was sentenced to a term of imprisonment for theft. While he was in jail, B, after she had attained puberty, contracted a marriage with P. The marriage with J was never consummated. On J being released from jail, he proceeded to prosecute B and P for bigamy and abetment of bigamy, and also charged P with adultery. It appeared that, before taking proceedings, J requested B to return to him, but she refused to do so. The marriage between B and J was sought to be proved by the evidence of J, B's mother, and two witnesses who were said to have been present. B and P were both convicted. Held, on appeal, that the evidence of the marriage between B and J was insufficient to justify a conviction in the absence of proof that a Molla was present at the ceremony, or that the sigha required to be recited at the marriage of minors was recited, or the akd performed. Held, further, that, assuming B to have been given in marriage to J when a mere child by her mother, she had the option of either ratifying or repudiating such marriage on attaining puberty. Under the Shia law, such a marriage is of no effect until it has been ratified by the minor, and under the Suni law it is effective till cancelled by the minor. Under bothsc hools of law, the minor has the absolute power, on attaining puberty, to ratify or cancel an unauthorized marriage, though under the Suni law ratification is presumed if the girl remains silent after attaining puberty and allows the marriage to be consummated. Held, on the facts of the case, that the circumstances afforded sufficient indication, even assuming the girl to be governed by the Suni law, that she never ratified the marriage. Held, also, that a judicial order was not necessary to effect the cancellation of the marriage. The bill fell due on December 3rd, 1870, which was a Saturday, and on that day the plaintiff sent his jemadar to C N & Co., the acceptors, to present the bill for payment. The bill was taken by A, one of the members of the firm of C N & Co., who gave a cheque for the amount, and took a receipt from the plaintiff's jemadar, striking out the signature of C N & Co. as acceptors, but without the plaintiff's consent. The plaintiff's jemadar took the cheque immediately to the bank, but the bank was closed. Thereupon he returned to C N & Co., and informed them that the bank was closed and demanded cash. The plaintiff alleged that it was then stated that the cheque would be honoured on Monday. The plaintiff's jemadar then went and informed the gomashta of the plaintiff of what had been done. The plaintiff's gomashta sent him to the defendant's firm to give him notice of what had taken place. It was alleged that at this interview the defendant's liability was admitted in case the cheque was not honoured, and the plaintiff's jemadar was advised to wait until Monday, the defendant stating that he also had a cheque for R7,000 from C N & Co. This was denied by the defendant. On Monday, 5th December, the cheque was presented to the bank for payment, and was dishonoured. The plaintiff's gomashta went to the defendant's koti, and gave notice of the dishonour of the bill and cheque, and asked him to pay the amount of the bill. The defendant asked for the bill, and the plaintiff's gomashta went to C N & Co., and brought back the bill, with the name of C N & Co., which had been struck out, replaced. The defendant, seeing the bill was overdue, refused to pay the amount. The cheque was thereupon returned to C N & Co., and the bill retained by the plaintiff, who, on 6th December, caused written notice of dishonour to be given to the defendant. Held that the cheque must be taken to have been merely a conditional payment, and when it was dishonoured, the liability of the original bill revived. Held, also, that reasonable notice of dishonour was given, whether the bill be taken to have been dishonoured on the Saturday or on the Monday. In May 1876, A, by letter, agreed to execute a mortgage of a certain portion of his property, consisting of a share in a Privy Council decree, to B, and in the meantime to hold such property at the disposal of B, his successors and assigns. In the month of June 1876, A became unable to meet his liabilities, and in the month of August following executed a conveyance of all his property to the Official Trustee upon trust for the benefit of A's creditors. The bank assented to and executed this deed after it had been assented to and executed by some of the other creditors. The deed did not contain any composition with or release by the creditors, nor any covenant on their part not to sue A. In a suit by the bank against B as acceptor of the bills,—Held that B was not precluded by the provisions of s. 132 of the Contract Act and s. 92 of the Evidence Act from pleading that he was an accommodation acceptor only; but held that the letter of May 1876 constituted a good equitable mortgage, and that B was not thereafter entitled, as against the bank, to the equitable rights of an accommodation acceptor. Held, further, that the trust did not impair the "eventual remedy" of B, and that therefore he

8. ——— Suit on bill by indorsee for value against acceptor—Sale by indorsee of goods against which bill drawn—Acceptor entitled to credit for amount of proceeds of sale.—J consigned goods to defendant, and for the price drew on the defendant two bills of exchange, each for the sum of ₹1,406-4-0, payable thirty days after sight, which were duly accepted by defendant. J indorsed the bills for value to the plaintiffs, who, in default of payment by defendant, sold the goods and credited him with the amount realized. After giving him credit for the amount, there remained due by the defendant to the plaintiffs, in respect of the said bills, a sum of ₹1,017. The plaintiffs abandoned ₹17 of this amount, and sued the defendant for ₹1,000 in the Small Cause Court at Bombay. In that suit the defendant pleaded that the goods, in respect of which the bills were drawn, were damaged, and that he had, therefore, refused to accept them as he was entitled to do. The Judge thereupon dismissed the suit on the authority of Shortt v. Abdul Rohiman, 6 Bom., O. C., 53, holding that the plaintiffs could not, under the circumstances, give the defendant credit for the goods, and that the claim was not, therefore, within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. The plaintiffs then brought the present suit in the High Court upon the bills of exchange, alleging that they held the proceeds of the goods for the consignor. The defendant contended that in no case could the plaintiffs recover from him more than the amount of the bills, less the proceeds of the goods. Held that the defendant was entitled to credit for the net proceeds of the sale of the goods. The plaintiffs had by the sale already realized part of the amount due to them; and to allow them now to recover from the defendant the whole amount due on the bills would be to permit them to realize this part of their claim a second time: in that case they would be bound to hand over the amount so realized to the drawers. But the drawers, when they negotiated the bills with the plaintiffs, got all they were entitled to, and would have to account, in equity, to the defendant for anything further obtained by them. Held, therefore, that the defendant was exonerated to the amount of the proceeds of the goods, but was liable for the remainder of the sum claimed by the plaintiffs. AGRA BANK v. ABDUL RAHIMAN . . . . I. L. R., 6 Bom., 1

And where the money realized by the sale was wrongfully applied by the agent, it was held by the Judicial Committee (affirming the judgment of the Court at Calcutta) that the remitter was entitled to recover the value of the bills in assumpsit, upon an indebitatus count from the purchaser of them, who had notice of the purpose for which they were remitted, and the misapplication of the proceeds by the agent. For the New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited. To the New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited, Bombay." E sent the bill by registered post to Bombay addressed to the plaintiff. During its transmission it was stolen. On the 18th May it was presented by some person to the defendant's Bank in Bombay bearing a forged endorsement in blank of the plaintiff, and it was paid by the Bank. The plaintiff, as soon as he heard of the loss of the bill, made inquiry at the Bank, and was told that the bill had been paid. On being shown the endorsement, the plaintiff pronounced it to be a forgery, and demanded payment of the bill, which the Bank refused. He thereupon filed this suit against the Bank as drawers of the bill. Held (1) that the document was an "ambiguous instrument" within the meaning of s. 17 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), and that the plaintiff had elected to treat it as a bill of exchange. The plaintiff shipped for conveyance from Hong-Kong to Bombay certain goods on board a steamer of the defendants in packages which were proved to be insufficient. These goods, in accordance with a condition to that effect contained in the bill of lading, were transhipped at Galle. On their being landed in Bombay, it was found that all the packages were broken, and in a much more damaged condition than is usual in the case of such goods carried from Hong-Kong to Bombay in similar packages. The contents had to a large extent escaped from the packages, but were otherwise uninjured. Held that, under a bill of lading in the above form, the onus of proving that the packages were insufficient and that the injury which they had sustained was the consequence of such insufficiency lay upon the defendants, but that, when the result of the evidence on both sides was to leave it in doubt whether the injury was caused by negligence or was the consequence of the insufficiency of the packages, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. The plaintiff shipped certain goods in the defendants' steamer, in packages which, though in fact insufficient, were packages of the kind ordinarily used for the conveyance of such goods from Hong-Kong to Bombay. On their being landed in Bombay, it was found that the packages were more or less broken, and the contents were in some instances injured, and had to a small extent escaped from the packages. In an action brought to recover damages in respect of such injury, it was held that evidence of mercantile usage or of custom would be admissible to show that the words "insufficiency of package" should not be taken in their ordinary sense, but as meaning insufficient according to a special custom of the China trade. Held, also, that the evidence of those packages being ordinary China packages, and of such packages having always been carried by the defendants without objection, was not sufficient, in the absence of proof of negligence, to fix the defendants with liability for damage done to them, there being no proof that it had been the practice either of the defendants or any other ship-owners protected by a

7. ——————— Carriers by sea—Liability for damage to goods.—Negligence.—A steam navigation company was employed by plaintiff to carry cargo from Calcutta to Rangoon and to deliver it into the receiving ship, or to land it at the consignee's expense, their liability ceasing as soon as the goods were free from the ship's tackle. When the ship arrived at port, the consignee not having had his own boats alongside, the goods were put into other boats, one of which, through the negligence of the boatmen, was swamped and the contents damaged. Plaintiff sued for damages. Held that, as defendants were not shown to have neglected the duty of taking reasonable and proper care in the selection of boats, they were not liable for the loss incurred. 8. ——————— Exemption from damage occasioned by neglect of Company's servants—Suit to recover goods destroyed—Contract Act, s. 151.—The plaintiff shipped two plate-glass show-cases from Calcutta to Rangoon by a steamer of the defendant company, and signed a bill of lading which contained the following clause:—"Carried and delivered subject to the conditions after mentioned . . loss or damage for any act, neglect, or default whatsoever of the pilot, master, or mariners or other servants of the company, etc., excepted." In landing the two cases, one of them was entirely destroyed owing to the carelessness of the company's servants. The plaintiff sued the company, setting out that the damage was occasioned by the negligence of the company's servants. The defendant company (who were not subject to the Carriers Act) relied on the abovementioned clause in their bill of lading. Held that the defendant company were protected by their bill of lading, the terms of which had been accepted by the plaintiff. 9. ——————— Liability of master—Negligence—Onus probandi—Estoppel.—The defendant, master of the steamer Scindia, signed a bill of lading, by which he agreed with C & Co. of London to deliver at Calcutta to them or their order four casks of brass wire, which were shipped on board the Scindia. The casks were described in the bill of lading as bearing a certain mark, beneath which was the word "Calcutta" as being the port of destination, and they were stated as being carried subject to the following exceptions:—"The ship is not liable for obliteration or absence of marks, numbers, address or description of goods shipped: and expenses and losses by detention of ship or cargo, caused by incorrect marking, or by incomplete or incorrect description of contents, shall be borne by the owners of the goods. In case any part of the within goods cannot be found during the ship's stay at the port of destination, they are, when found, to be sent back by first steamer at the ship's risk and expense, and subject to any proved claim for loss of market. The ship shall not be liable for incorrect delivery, unless each package shall have been distinctly marked by the shippers before shipment with the port of destination." The bill of lading was endorsed by C & Co. to the plaintiff, a trader in Calcutta, who, on the arrival of the Scindia at that port, applied for delivery of the four casks; and it then appeared that they had been landed at Colombo. In a suit to recover the price of the goods,—Held the defendant was estopped from alleging that the casks were not marked as stated in the bill of lading. It was open, however, to the defendant to prove that the casks did not on their arrival at Colombo bear the word "Calcutta," and thus to bring himself within the clause in the bill of lading exempting the ship from liability for obliteration or absence of marks; but on proof of this, in order to disentitle the plaintiff to succeed, the defendant must show that the absence or obliteration caused the landing at Colombo. It was found on the evidence that he had failed to do this, and a decree was given for the plaintiff. MADHUB CHUNDER DEY v. LAW . . 13 B. L. R., 394

10. ——————— Stowage—Negligence of the crew or other servants of the ship—Period of loading covered by the contract of carriage—Fitness or unfitness of the ship.—The plaintiffs shipped certain bags of sugar on the 11th and 12th November 1887, on board the defendants' ship the Byculla for conveyance to Bombay. There being a dispute as to the number of bags shipped, no mate's receipts were given, and no bill of lading was signed until the 28th November. The Byculla started on her voyage on the 15th November, and duly delivered the sugar in Bombay. The sugar, however, was found to be damaged by water, which was due to its having been stowed in immediate proximity to a quantity of wet timber. The plaintiffs sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court for the damage so caused. The defendants sheltered themselves under the terms of the exemptive clause in their bill of lading of the 28th November, which clause ran as follows:—"The act of God, the Queen's enemies . . . . . and all the perils, dangers, accidents of the sea, ... and accidents, loss, or damage from any act, neglect, or default whatsoever of the pilot, master, or mariners, or other servants of the Company, or from any deviation, excepted." The plaintiffs contended that a bill of lading did not relate to or cover the period of loading, and that, even if it did, the exception relied upon in this bill of lading related only to negligence subsequent to the commencement of the voyage. They also contended that the ship was not a ship "reasonably fit for the voyage" within the meaning of the rule laid down in Steel v. The State Line Steamship Company, L. R., 3 Ap. Ca., 72. In the Small Cause Court judgment was given in plaintiffs' favour. On appeal to the High Court on the case stated, this judgment was reversed. Held that this was not a case to which the rule laid down in Steel v. The State Line Steamship Company, L. R., 3 Ap. Ca., 72, applied, as there was no question here of any defect inherent in the ship. It was simply a case of negligent and improper stowage. Held, further, following Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Co. v. Baker, 7 Bom., O. C., 186, that the reasonable mode of construing the contract evidenced by a bill of lading was to hold the exceptions to be co-extensive with the liability, and that there was no evidence to be found in this bill of lading of any other intention. Held further that the goods were covered by the bill of lading from the time they were put on board to be loaded; consequently, the defendants were protected from liability under the exemptive clause. *The Duero, L. 12. ——— Liability for loss—Absence of negligence.—A & Co. at Madras shipped by the B. I. S. N. steamer Mahratta a box of coral, to be delivered to their Agent M at Bimlipatam. At the time of shipment they declared the value and paid enhanced freight on account of such value. By the bill of lading the company undertook to deliver the case in good order at Bimlipatam to the consignee M, subject to certain conditions annexed. By one of these conditions, if the consignee did not take delivery when the ship was ready to discharge, the goods might be warehoused at the merchant's risk, and the company's liability was to cease when the goods left the ship's side. The consignee did not take delivery at the ship's side, and the company's agent at Bimlipatam took the case to the Custom House, as he was bound to do by the regulations of the port. If the Superintendent of the Custom House had known that the case contained corals, it would have been placed in an inner room, but the company's agent did not know the contents of the case, and therefore was unable to give any such information to the Superintendent. While the case was lying at the Custom House, application was made on plaintiff's behalf to the company's agent for delivery of the case upon the usual guarantee. The agent refused to deliver the case without the production of the bill of lading. Afterwards the bill of lading was received from Madras, and the case was delivered up. At some time between its leaving the ship's side and delivery to the consignee the case was opened and a portion of the contents stolen. Held that the defendants were not liable. 13. ——— Declaration of value and nature of contents.—A was the consignee and holder of a bill of lading signed by B at Bombay, as master of the steam-vessel John Bright, for the safe carriage and delivery of a box addressed to A, which in fact contained diamonds of the value of ₹11,670, three rubies, and three emeralds, in all of the value of ₹15,940. On the face of the bill of lading was printed, "This bill of lading is issued subject to the following conditions." One condition was that a "written declaration of the contents and value of the goods is required by the owner, and must be delivered by the shipper to the owner's agents with the bills of lading. A wrong description of contents or false declaration of value shall release the owner from all responsibility in case of loss, etc., and the goods shall be charged double freight on the real value, which freight shall be paid previous to delivery." The declaration in this case was contained in the following letter from the shipper to the agent of the shipowner:—"Dear Sir,—Be good enough to give me an order for a small box containing diamonds to the value of about ₹14,000, to be shipped on board the steamer John Bright for Calcutta. Yours, etc." The box was lost by the negligence of B or his servants. In a suit by A to recover "the value of the goods, viz., ₹14,000,"—Held that all the shipowner was entitled to was that the shipper should make a declaration of what bonâ fide he believed to be the value. The declaration as to contents was not vitiated by the omission to enumerate all the different species of articles contained in the box. Upon the evidence, the declaration as to the value and nature of the contents was bonâ fide; therefore A was entitled to recover the value of the diamonds lost. 14. ——— Leakage—Breakage—Damage caused by leakage from other goods.—Piece-goods were carried from London to Bombay under a bill of lading, the exceptions in which protected the master from "leakage, breakage, rust, decay, loss, or damage from machinery, boilers . . . misfeasance, error in judgment, negligence or default of . . . persons in the service of the ship . . . and the ship not being liable for any consequences of causes therein excepted, however originating." The piece-goods, on their arrival in Bombay, were found to be damaged by oil and by chafing,—i.e., by rubbing against other goods in the hold,—but there was no evidence to show how such damage was occasioned. Held that the term "leakage" did not include leakage from other goods on to the piece-goods, nor did "breakage" include damage caused by chafing, and that, as no negligence was proved, the master was not protected by the exception "damage from negligence." water escaping, some of the bales were damaged. Held that the damage was within the exceptions of the bill of lading, and therefore that the defendants were not liable to make good the loss. Quære—Whether, notwithstanding the exceptions in the bill of lading, the defendants might not have been made liable in a suit on the implied warranty if it had been proved as a fact that the boiler was not reasonably fit for the voyage. 16. ——————— Exception in bill of lading—Seaworthiness—Suit for damage to goods by leakage while ship in dock.—The plaintiffs' goods were loaded in the defendants' steamer then lying in dock to be carried from Bombay to certain ports in East Africa. At the time of loading, the ship was apparently in a sound and seaworthy condition. Two days after the goods had been put on board, and when the ship was still in dock, it sprung a leak, and the water came into the hold and damaged the plaintiffs' goods. The ship was taken to the dry dock, the cargo was shifted, and the leak repaired. It appeared that the leak had arisen from the fact that one of the plates of the ship had been worn thin in one particular spot, so that, when the cargo was put on board, and the ship lay deeper in the water, the pressure became so great that a hole was made, and the water rushed in. The plaintiffs sued the defendants for damages. The defendants pleaded (1) that the ship was in a seaworthy condition when the goods were put on board; (2) that they were protected by the bill of lading, which contained the following exception :—viz., "Accident, loss and damage from vermin, barratry, jettison, collision, fire, machinery, boilers, steam and all the perils, dangers and accidents of the sea, rivers, land carriage and steam navigation of whatever nature and kind and accident, loss or damage from any act, neglect or default whatsoever of the pilot, master or mariners or other servants of the Company or from any deviation excepted." Held that the defendants were liable. While the ship was in dock, it was not seaworthy, and the exception in the bill of lading did not limit the implied warranty of seaworthiness. The steamer, on arriving at the port of discharge, came alongside the wharf, and commenced unloading at the custom-house godowns without giving the consignees the option of landing the goods from the ship's tackle. The consignees, however, did not object to the goods being landed at the godowns, and they paid, also without objection, a sum for the wharfage of a part of the goods in their godowns. Held that the ship-owners, if the goods placed in the godowns were in their possession as carriers, were protected under the clause of the bill of lading providing against fire, as much as if the fire had occurred on boardship; and on the other hand, if the goods were in the possession of the ship-owners as wharfingers, they were not liable for the loss, inasmuch as the goods were destroyed by fire without any default on their port. 20. ——————— Delivery in dock—"Landing or cranage charges"—Practice of dock to recover from consignee—Liability of ship-owner.—Certain boilers consigned to the plaintiff in Bombay were shipped at Liverpool in two steamers belonging to the same owners, under two bills of lading in these terms: "Shipped in good order and condition, etc., to be delivered, subject to the exceptions and conditions hereinafter mentioned, in the like good order and condition, from the ship's tackles (where the ship's responsibility shall cease) at the aforesaid port of Bombay," etc. One of the exceptions and conditions above referred to was as follows:—"The ship-owner shall have the option of discharging in dock, and of making delivery of the goods

under the bills of lading either over the ship's side or from lighters, or a store-ship, or custom-house, or warehouse, at merchant's risk." Freight was prepaid in Liverpool. On their arrival at Bombay, the two steamers went into the Prince's Dock, belonging to the Port Trust, and discharged the boilers, by means of the Port Trust cranes, on to the dock wharves. The plaintiff subsequently sent to remove the boilers, but was not allowed by the dock authorities to do so until he had paid to them various sums, amounting in the aggregate to ₹930, on account, as stated in the bill furnished him by the Port Trust, of "landing charges" for the said boilers. The bills also contained certain additional charges for "wharfage." These the plaintiff was ready to pay, but the "landing charges" he paid only under protest, and in order to get possession of his goods, and now sought to recover the same from the defendants, who represented the ship-owners. It was the practice of the Port Trust to recover these charges in all cases from the consignees of goods discharged in their dock, and the charge was said to be levied on all goods landed on the wharves of the dock, whether by the dock's cranes or by the ship's own tackles. The charge was incurred the moment the goods touched the wharf. In their rates, sanctioned by Government, which by their Act the Port Trust were entitled to charge, this charge was called, not a "landing charge," but a "dock and cranage" charge. Had the plaintiff been given delivery of these goods in the stream, and afterwards himself landed them at any wharf belonging to the Port Trust in the Port of Bombay, the Port Trust would have sought to have made the same charge for allowing the goods to be landed, whether that was done by their appliances or not. Held that the ship-owner, and not the consignee, was bound to pay these charges, they being in reality charges for work and labour done in and about the landing of the goods—an operation which, under the bills of lading, was within the duty of the ship-owner. Per LATHAM, J.—The ship having elected to discharge in the dock, it was her duty to land the goods on the wharf. Every charge which had to be incurred before that could be done was a charge antecedent to delivery, and one, therefore, which must be paid by the ship-owner. SCOTT v. FINLAY . . . I. L. 21. ——— "Weight, contents, and value unknown"—Act IX of 1856, s. 3—Assignee of bill of lading for value.—A bill of lading purporting to be for 50 tons of coals and containing a printed clause, "weight, contents, and value unknown," and similar words written above the signature of the master, does not amount to an admission by the master that he has received 50 tons of coal on board. Upon the true construction of the Bills of Lading Act (IX of 1856), s. 3, a bill of lading in the above form is not, in the hands of a consignee for value, conclusive evidence against the master of the shipment of 50 tons. measurement—Measurement at port of delivery—Discrepancy in measurements—Evidence—Burden of proof—Suit by consignee for excess freight.—K V at Moulmein consigned to the plaintiff at Bombay 135 logs of teak timber shipped on board the defendant's ship. The bill of lading, which was signed by the defendant, described the logs as marked K V, and measuring tons 115-12-10, and it provided for the payment of freight thereon at Bombay, at the rate of ₹17 per ton of 50 cubic feet on right delivery. The last clause of the bill of lading was in the handwriting of the defendant, and was as follows:—"Marks, number, quantity, and measurement unknown: all other conditions as per charter-party." The charter-party was expressed to be between the owners of the ship and Messrs. B of Rangoon as charterers of the whole ship, and provided for the payment of freight "at the rate of ₹18 per ton of 50 cubic feet for all timber, one rate throughout, except 100 tons broken stowage at half freight, by intake measurement." On arrival of the ship at Bombay, the plaintiff, as consignee of the timber and holder of the bill of lading, paid the defendant (the captain of the ship) ₹1,500 on account of freight, and took delivery of the 135 logs. On measuring them he found that, according to his method of measurement, the total measurement of the 135 logs came only to tons 58-27-11-6, and not tons 115-12-10 as mentioned in the bill of lading. He claimed, therefore, to be chargeable with freight only on the smaller quantity (viz., ₹995-8), and to recover from the defendant the difference (viz., ₹504-8) between that sum and ₹1,500 paid on account as for an overpayment of freight. It was proved that all the timber on board had been measured at Moulmein by an employé of the charterers acting apparently as agent of all the different shippers, and that the measurements in the bills of lading were supplied by this person to the defendant as the measurements of the different consignments. It was also proved that the 135 logs received and measured by the plaintiff in Bombay were the same logs that were shipped under the bill of lading, and that the plaintiff's measurement of them was correct according to the mode of measurement which he adopted. There was no evidence as to what was the mode of measurement followed at Moulmein, nor, except the statements in the bill of lading, as to what was the actual intake measurement of the timber there. Held that the effect of the last clause in the bill of lading was to incorporate into that document the clause of the charter-party which provided that freight should be payable on the intake measurement; that the burden of proving what the intake measurement actually was lay upon the plaintiff, who sought to recover back money which he alleged he had paid in excess of what was due; and that, in the absence of such evidence on behalf of the plaintiff, the statement of quantity contained in the bill of lading was primâ facie evidence of the intake measurement of the timber. 24. ——— Freight, Lien for, on cargo—Advances on account of freight—Master's lien for freight—Charter-party.—By a charter-party made in London, the ship W was chartered to carry a cargo from Liverpool to Calcutta, where she was to load from the factors of the charterer a full homeward cargo to be carried by her to Europe. Freight for the whole round, out and home, was made payable on safe delivery of the homeward cargo, but at so much per ton of the outward cargo delivered in Calcutta. The master was to have a lien on the cargo for freight, etc.; cash not exceeding £800 was to be advanced to the ship in Calcutta on account of freight, but subject to insurance; and £600 was to be advanced by the charterer's acceptance at three months, or in cash under discount, at charterer's option, on the sailing of the vessel from Liverpool, less five per cent. for insurance. The charterer himself loaded the ship, and the master signed a bill of lading which declared the cargo to be shipped by the charterer to be delivered at Calcutta, as the agents of the charterer might direct, unto order or to his assigns, freight to be paid as per charter-party. In the margin of the bill was written, "Received in advance of the within freight, £600 as per charter-party." The £600 had been paid, not in cash, but by the charterer's bill at three months. The charterer became bankrupt and the bill was dishonoured, and the fact of the bankruptcy and dishonour was known in Calcutta when the ship arrived there. On the ship's arrival in Calcutta, J O & Co., who were the holders for value of the bill of lading, demanded delivery of the cargo. The master claimed a right of lien, and refused to deliver unless J O & Co. would pay the £600 bill which had been dishonoured, and would further advance £800 for the ship's use, and load a homeward cargo, according to the terms of the charter-party. Held that J O & Co. took the bill of lading with notice of the charter-party, but that, under the circumstances, the master had no lien, and was bound to deliver the cargo to J O & Co. OGLE v. NASHHOLM salt at party's option, or so near thereto as she can safely get, to be at all times afloat and in safety, and then load for the charterer's agent a full and complete cargo of salt, not exceeding what the master considers sufficient cargo, which the charterers engage to ship, not exceeding what she can reasonably carry with her stores, provisions, and furniture, and being so loaded shall therewith proceed to Calcutta, or so near thereto as she may safely get, and there deliver as per bills of lading, and on being paid freight at the rate of twenty-three shillings per ton." The freight to be paid thus: "£500 by charterer's acceptance at two months on sailing, less 2½ per cent. insurance; or cash on sailing, less 5 per cent. interest and insurance, at charterer's option, and the balance in cash on delivery as master requires, at current rate of exchange; 2 per cent. commission to charterers in lieu of consignment." Held that "a sum of money payable before the arrival of the ship at her port of discharge, and payable by the shippers of the goods at the port of shipment, is not freight in the strict legal acceptation of the term, with all the incidents of freight in giving the ship-owner the right of lien, unless it is stipulated for." Such advances are not freight, but advances to be made under discount, and upon the security of the captain's bill on the freighter. Burden of proof—"Or otherwise," meaning of.—The plaintiff was the consignee of a large consignment of goods shipped from Bombay in bags on board the defendants' steamship Java for carriage to Zanzibar. On arrival of the Java at Zanzibar, the goods were landed by the defendant company and placed in the customs godown, where the plaintiff in due course demanded delivery. Some of the bags were not forthcoming, but the evidence did not show how the loss had occurred. The bill of lading contained the following condition:—"The Company's liability shall cease as soon as the packages are free of the ship's tackle, after which they shall not be responsible for any loss or damage, however caused. If stored in receiving ship, godown or upon any wharf, all risks of fire, dacoity, vermin or otherwise shall be with the merchant, and the usual charges shall be paid before delivery of the goods. Fire insurance will be covered by the company's agents on application." In a suit brought by the plaintiff for short delivery of goods,—Held that the defendants were liable. They did not show how the loss occurred, and as it might have occurred from causes not covered by the exception (e.g., from misdelivery), they did not bring themselves within the protection afforded by the exemption. The general words "or otherwise" contained in the tenth clause of the bill of lading could not be read so as to cover all possible losses, for that would make them include wilful misconduct on the part of the defendant's servants, and general words are not read with such an extended meaning. Nor would they include misdelivery, for that was provided for in the eighth clause. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO. v. RATANSI RAMJI

29. ——— Claim for short delivery—Place for preferring claim.—A bill of lading contained a provision that any claim for short delivery or for damage done to goods should be made at the port of Calcutta, and not elsewhere. Held that this clause did not affect the plaintiff's right of suit in the Court at Rangoon, and that, if the defendants meant to object that no claim had been made in Calcutta before the commencement of the suit, they should have done so in proper time, viz., in their written statement. An objection on that ground taken for the first time at the hearing of the appeal was disallowed. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO. v. IBRAHIM MOOSUM . . 8 W. R., 35

30. ——— Claim for short delivery to be made at a certain place within a certain time—Reasonable condition—Common carrier, Liability of—Carriers Act, III of 1865.—A stipulation by persons carrying on extensive business as carriers that they should be apprised of claims made on them for default on the part of their servants, at a specified place and no other, and within a time which will render enquiry likely to be attended with some result, is not unreasonable. The defendants were owners of a fleet of steam-ships plying periodically along the coast of British India, by which they undertook to convey for freight parcels of goods for all persons indifferently from and to specified ports. They stipulated in their bills of lading that claims for short delivery should be made at the port of Calcutta only, within one month after delivery, of any portion of the goods entered in the bill of lading. Held, in a suit against defendants for compensation for value of goods short delivered, that this was not an unreasonable stipulation, and that a claim made on the agents of the defendants, who were authorized only to retain the goods, receive freight, and give delivery, was not a sufficient compliance with the condition. Held, also, that defendants were common carriers, though not for the purposes of the Indian Carriers Act, and that their character of carriers continued so long as the goods remained in their hands and undelivered. 31. ——— Delivery of goods to consignee—Cargo unclaimed on arrival of ship—Rights of ship-owner to land goods—Damages by rain—Madras Harbour Trust Act (Madras Act II of 1886).—The defendant's steamship arrived at Madras on 4th December 1891, bringing bags of grain consigned to the plaintiffs under a bill of lading by which the defendants were to have the option of delivering the goods into a receiving ship or landing them at consignee's risk and expense, and their liability was to cease when the goods were free of the ship's tackle. The plaintiffs, on the date of the arrival of the goods, were not authorized to receive them. The plaintiffs set up a custom that cargo of this description ought to be landed on the beach; but as this could not be done in the absence of the consignees, the defendants landed it the same day on the pier and delivered it into the custody of the Madras Harbour Trust for storage, pending delivery to the consignees. On the 8th of December 1891, heavy rain fell, and on the same date plaintiffs learnt that the cargo had been delivered on the pier. When the plaintiffs came to take delivery on that day, a considerable portion had been damaged by rain, for which they now sued the defendants. Held (1) that where the consignees were unable to take delivery in the ordinary way on the beach, the master of a ship has the option of landing and warehousing the goods, and that delivery to the Harbour Trust for custody was not wrongful; (2) that in the absence of proof that the defendants were negligent, or that they failed to deliver the goods, the suit must be dismissed. A sale of a portion of a bhag, previously to the passing of Bombay Act V of 1862, amounts to a dismemberment of the bhag, and what remains in the bhagdar's hands continues to be a complete bhag, while the portion separated from it becomes a new bhag. In 1876 A and C sold their shares to the plaintiff. B and D protested against the sale as being a dismemberment of a bhag; and the plaintiff was called upon by the Collector, under s. 3 of the Act, to deliver the deed to be cancelled, but declined to do so, and applied that the sale should be recognized. By an order the Collector refused to grant his prayer. The plaintiff, therefore, brought a suit to set aside the order. Both the lower Courts rejected his claim. On appeal to the High Court,—Held, confirming the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the sale to the plaintiff, having been effected after the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862) had come into force, was void. A bhag, as contemplated by the Act, would seem to mean an aliquot share of a village subject to an aliquot portion of the total land-tax imposed on it, and not any subdivision by partition or otherwise. Bhai Shankar v. *Collector of Kaira, I. 2. ——— Sale of unascertained shares in an undivided bhag—Dismemberment—Physical dismemberment—Right to sue to set aside illegal sales.—S. 1 of the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862) does not prohibit the sale of an unascertained share of an undivided bhag. The object and intention of the Act is to prevent a physical dismemberment of a bhag, or recognized sub-divisions thereof, and not a mere increase in the number of persons who may from time to time be owners of the bhag. S. 2 of the Act does not bar the right of any person prejudicially affected by any illegal sale from suing to set aside the sale. Four brothers owned a bhag in common. In 1871 the right, title, and interest of three of the brothers in the bhag was sold in execution of decrees against them. The defendants were the auction-purchasers. The words "attachment or sale by the process of any Civil Court," used therein, were intended to prevent attachment and sale under simple money-decrees, and not to prevent the sale of mortgaged property in satisfaction of a valid mortgage. S. 3 of the Act has no bearing on sales by order of a Civil Court, but is intended to apply to unlawful sales and alienations of portions of bhags made out of Court, or by private individuals. 1. ——— s. 12—Inability of guardian to contract on behalf of infant ward, so as to bind him personally—Effect of Act VI of 1862 (Bombay), s. 12, in regard to a charge upon a talukhdari estate in the Ahmedabad District during the period of management.—A guardian cannot contract in the name of a ward, so as to impose on him a personal liability. Act VI of 1862 (Bombay), "for the amelioration of the condition of talukhdars in the Ahmedabad Collectorate and for their relief from debt," was intended to deal with all debts and liabilities which could possibly impose a charge upon the talukhdari estate at the end of the period of management; when the estate was to be restored to the talukhdar free of incumbrance, excepting the Government revenue. If debts amounted to more than the surplus of rents during the management, of which the maximum period was twenty years, they were not to be paid. A widow, as guardian of her infant son, the heir of talukhdari estate in the above district, validly transferred villages, part thereof, and in the deed of transfer to which her ward was, by her as his guardian, nominally a party, contracted to indemnify the purchaser in case the Government should claim and enforce a right to revenue upon the villages which she transferred as being rent-free. The deed purported to make both guardian and ward personally liable in this respect, and also charged the liability upon other parts of the talukhdari estate. The infant attained majority and the estate was then placed under management within Act VI of 1862. During the period of management the Government claimed and enforced payment of revenue upon the villages. Held that there was no personal liability on the part of the talukhdar created by the above; also that, if the charge on the estate had been validly made, it fell, at all events, within the terms of s. 12 of Act VI of 1862, absolving estates from liability for debts incurred, not only before, but during the period of management. 2. ——— and s. 20—Talukhdar's power of disposal over his landed estates after the expiration of the management by the Talukhdari Settlement Officer.—Under s. 12 of the Ahmedabad Talukhdars Act (VI of 1862), debts or liabilities incurred by a talukhdar during the management of the Talukhdari Settlement Officer are not enforceable against landed estates. His personal liability for the same remains unaffected by the Act. This personal liability furnishes a sufficient consideration for a subsequent obligation, so as to bind the landed estates by a contract made after the period of the management by the Talukhdari Officer had expired. From and after the expiration of that period, the talukhdar becomes, under s. 20, the absolute proprietor of his estate, and he is then at liberty to create a valid charge upon his estate for debts contracted during the period of the management. Accordingly, where a talukhdar had, after the withdrawal of the management by the Talukhdari Settlement Officer, encumbered his landed estate under several mortgage-bonds, passed partly in renewal of old bonds and partly in consideration of old debts contracted during the period of the management,—Held that the mortgage-bonds created valid and binding encumbrances upon the estate. 2. ——— and s. 17—Street—Court—Public right of way—Removal of erection.—The plaintiff was the owner of two houses and mortgagee of a third house out of a set of six which surrounded an open court in the town of Dhandhuka, and which, including the court, originally belonged to a single individual. The plaintiff built an "ota" or verandah, and put up a wooden bench in front of his house, which the municipality of the town ordered to be removed. In a suit by the plaintiff to have this order set aside, the District Court found that the occupant of each house had the right of way across the court, which was used as the means of access to the houses which surrounded it by persons having business with the house-holders. Held that such limited access by the public was not sufficient to show that the court ceased to be private property, and was converted into a "street" vesting in the municipality within the meaning of ss. 3 and 17 of Bombay District Municipal Act, VI of 1873; and that the municipality had not any right to interfere with the plaintiff's erection, whatever liability he might have incurred to an action by any of the other house-holders who occupied the court. On second appeal by the defendant, the High Court refused to interfere with the decision of the lower Court. 2. ——— and s. 33—Street—Authority of the municipality under s. 33—Civil Court's interference with the discretion given to public bodies.—The word "street" in s. 17 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) means and includes not merely the surface of the ground, but so much above and below it as is requisite or appropriate for the preservation of the street for the usual and intended purposes. The plaintiff proposed to make a balcony projecting over a public road. The municipality objected to the work as an encroachment on a public street. He therefore sued the municipality to establish his right to build the proposed balcony. Held that, so far as the column of space standing over the street was vested in the municipality, the plaintiff had no right to occupy it with a balcony, which by intercepting light and air would greatly impair the use of the area as a street. S. 33 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1873, gives the municipality a discretion to issue such orders as it thinks proper with reference to a proposed building. Civil Courts cannot interfere with that discretion, unless it is exercised in a capricious, wanton, and oppressive manner. The plaintiff was the owner of two houses on each side of the passage of a khidki, or open square, containing three or four other houses. He proposed to connect the two houses by building a story across the passage at such a height as not to interfere with the passage of those who were entitled to go to and fro. He applied to the local municipality for permission to build in the manner he proposed. The municipality forbade the work, on the ground that it was likely to interfere with the access of light and air to the neighbouring houses. The plaintiff thereupon sued the municipality to establish his right to build the proposed structure. It was contended for the plaintiff that the municipality ought not to have refused permission in the interests of the neighbouring house-holders, who were able to protect their own rights in case of injury. Held that the suit would not lie, as the order of the municipality refusing permission was not an unreasonable one under the circumstances of the case. Held, further, that the authority of the municipality was not in any way affected by the circumstance that the proposed erection might be an encroachment on private rights subjecting the plaintiff to an action by the persons injured. 3. ——— s. 21, cls. (1) and (2)—*Bombay District Municipal Act Amendment Act (Bombay Act II of 1884), s. 27, cl. A scheme of taxation drafted by the committee was subsequently adopted by the municipality, and it included a new house and property tax. The municipality then issued a notice with regard to this last-mentioned tax under the provisions of s. 21 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 setting forth the particulars of the proposed tax and requiring objections to be lodged within a fortnight from the date of the notice. A number of objections were received which were laid on the table for twenty-one days for perusal and consideration by the municipal commissioners. At the end of that time a special meeting of the Commissioners was held, at which it was resolved that the objections were invalid, and the scheme and the rules with regard to the levying of the tax were forwarded to Government and were sanctioned. The plaintiffs sued for an injunction restraining the municipality from levying the tax, contending that it was illegal, on the ground (1) that there was no municipality desirous of imposing the tax for any of the purposes allowed by the Act, inasmuch as the commissioners who passed the resolution to impose the tax did not know for what purpose the tax was to be imposed; (2) that the resolution imposing the tax was illegal because the notice calling the meeting of the commissioners which passed the resolution did not specify this tax as the object of the meeting; (3) that the notice given under s. 21 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 was bad, as it did not state the purpose of the proposed tax; (4) that the nature and the amount of the tax were not sufficiently stated in the notice; (5) that the notice ought to have stated the mode in which the valuation of property for the purpose of the tax was to be made; (6) that the objections of the rate-payers were not sufficiently considered; (7) that it did not appear whether the tax was to be paid in advance or not; and (8) that the assessment of the tax was made on a wrong basis. Held that the purpose of the tax was sufficiently known to the commissioners; (2) that the resolution imposing the tax was not invalid, although the notice convening the meeting did not specify the object of the meeting; (3) that the notice need not specify the purpose of the tax; (4) that as to the nature and the amount of the tax, the notice was sufficient, as it stated that the amount would depend on the valuation of the property; (5) that the notice need not define the mode of valuation; (6) that the objections were sufficiently considered; (7) that the tax was to be paid partly in advance; (8) that the assessment would not affect the validity of the tax, but would give a right of appeal to have the valuation set right. Held, therefore, that the tax was legally imposed. 3. ——— Notice of proposed building—Right of municipality to demolish building erected without permission to build.—On the 18th August 1890, plaintiffs sent a notice to the town municipality of Umreth, intimating their intention to erect a building on their land, and giving a rough sketch plan of the land intended to be built upon. In this notice plaintiffs did not expressly state their intention to build the wall in dispute. On the 28th August 1890, the municipality wrote to the plaintiffs, requiring them to furnish a plan showing the design of the proposed building with its measurements. On the 30th September 1890, the plaintiffs, without furnishing the plan as required, built a wall on their land. Thereupon the municipality gave a notice to the plaintiffs requiring them to pull it down, as it has been built without their permission. The plaintiffs having failed to comply with this notice, the wall was demolished, and its materials were carried away by the municipal servants. Thereupon the plaintiffs sued the municipality to recover damages for the wrongful demolition of the wall. Held that the plaintiffs had contravened the provisions of cl. 1 of s. 33 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, inasmuch as they had built the wall without giving any notice, or (if they did) gave notice without affording the information required by the municipality. The municipality were, therefore, justified in ordering the wall to be demolished. DAVE HARISHANKAR v. TOWN MUNICIPALITY OF UMRETH [I. L. R., 19 Bom., 27

5. ——— and s. 42—Discretion of municipality to take action under s. 33, cl. (3)—Court's power to interfere with such discretion.—A suit for an injunction to restrain a municipality from removing a certain building or construction is not an action "for anything done, or purporting to have been done, in pursuance of the Act" within the meaning of s. 48 of Bombay Act II of 1884. Such a suit can, therefore, be brought without giving previous notice to the municipality. Apart from the provisions of s. 33 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, it is only if the site of a building is vested in a municipality under s. 17 that this body is empowered, whether by s. 42 or by any other section, to take steps for the removal of the building. The discretion of taking action or otherwise under the 3rd clause of s. 33 is vested in the municipality, which alone can determine whether or not the removal of a building erected contrary to the provisions of s. 33 is or is not a measure likely to promote the public convenience. If the municipality adopt the proper procedure, no Court can review its

——— s. 36—Privy, power of municipality to order to be built by owner of a house—Such order not imperative, but permissive—Discretion of Court.—The terms of s. 36 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 are not imperative in requiring a municipality to call on the owner of a house to build a privy, but are permissive, leaving it to the discretion of the municipality to determine when the power conferred on them shall be exercised. Accordingly, where the plaintiff complained that the defendants had erected a privy so close to his house as to be a nuisance, and the lower Appellate Court found it to be a nuisance, but rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the defendants had erected the same under the orders of the municipality issued under s. 31 of the Act:—Held, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the municipality had no authority to order the defendants to erect the privy regardless of the plaintiff's right, and that the defendants, therefore, could not plead that they acted under the orders of the municipality. The High Court directed an injunction to remove the privy within three months from the date of its decision. JAFIR SAHEB v. KADIR RAHIMAN . I. L. R., 12 Bom., 634

(1), and ss. 48 and 75—Removal of obstruction in public street—Notice of removal—Corporate bodies—Practice—Suit for injunction.—Under the District Municipal Act (Bombay Act VI of 1873), a municipality has power to have all obstructions in a public street removed, whether the obstructions were placed there lawfully or not. The only distinction which the Act draws is between obstructions erected or placed before the Act came into operation and those which have been erected or placed since it came into operation. As to the former, s. 42, cl. (1), of the Act provides that notice should be given, and, if legally placed on the street, compensation should be awarded for their removal. As to the latter, the municipality can remove them under s. 48 even without giving any notice. The public have a right of passing over the whole of a street if it is a public street. The accused was the owner of a shop in a public street at Thana. The shop had planks attached to it in front, overhanging a public gutter. These planks had been in existence before the District Municipal Act came into operation at Thana. In April 1897, the planks were temporarily removed under the orders of the plague authorities. The plague having ceased, the accused replaced the planks in October 1897 without the permission of the municipality. The accused hired a house, and opened a shop for selling fruit within six hundred yards of the municipal market without obtaining a license from the municipality. The second class Magistrate convicted and sentenced each of the accused to pay a fine of R5. The District Magistrate, relying on the case of *In re Paba Khoji, I. L. ——— s. 73—Power of the municipality to suppress caste-feasts on the outbreak of cholera—Meaning of the words "take such measures as may be deemed necessary"—Penal Code, s. 188—Construction of statutes.—The City of Ahmedabad being threatened with an outbreak of cholera, the president of the local municipality, acting under s. 73 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, issued an order, in the form of a proclamation, prohibiting the holding of caste-feasts when over thirty persons were to assemble. After the promulgation of this order, the accused gave a feast in a private house to upwards of thirty people of his caste. He was thereupon convicted, under s. 188 of the Penal Code, for disobedience of an order duly promulgated by a public servant, and sentenced to pay a fine of R35. Held (reversing the conviction and sentence) that s. 73 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) did not empower the municipality to place an interdict on people meeting together to eat and drink in their own houses. The words in the section, "take such measures as may be deemed necessary to prevent, meet, or suppress the outbreak," imply in themselves something actively to be done by the municipality, rather than any limitation to be imposed on the private rights of the citizens in their relations of daily life. Special measures for the health of the town—such as sulphur fumigation, daily flushing of sewers, insistance on good house sanitation, isolation of infected districts, and other similar steps to be taken by the authorities themselves—fall naturally within the meaning of the terms of the section. —Magistrate's power to revise the valuation.—Under the rules passed under the Bombay District Municipal Act (Bombay Act VI of 1873) as amended by Bombay Act II of 1884, the Municipality of Wai estimated the annual letting value of a house belonging to the accused at R50 and levied a house tax of R2-8-0. A, a tax-payer, applied to the managing committee for a reduction of the tax, but his application was dismissed. Default having been made in payment of the tax, A was prosecuted under s. 84 of the Act before a second class Magistrate. He contended that the estimate made by the municipality was too high, and that his house would not let for more than 10 or 12 rupees a year. The Magistrate took evidence on the point, and found that the annual rental of the house would not exceed R12, and he ordered payment of 12 annas only on account of the tax. Held that the Magistrate had no power to go behind the estimate of value framed by the managing committee under the powers given to it by the rules. He ought to have accepted as conclusive the amount found by the managing committee to be the letting value of the house, and held the legal liability of the accused to pay the tax based on this amount to be proved. The remedy of the accused, if he considered his house assessed too highly, was to apply to the managing committee, and no other mode of redress was open to him. Municipality of Ahmedabad v. *Jumna Punja, I. 1. ——— s. 48—Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4 (b)—Water-rate—Land revenue—Percolation of canal water—Opinion of the canal officer—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—Where water-rate is levied under s. 48 of the Irrigation Act (Bombay Act VII of 1879), the question as to the jurisdiction of Civil Courts in a suit for the determination of the legality or otherwise of such levy depends upon whether the incidence of the rate is authorized by the provisions of the section. Under it, the condition precedent to levying the rate is not the fact ascertained by evidence whether the water in dispute has percolated from the canal, but the opinion of the canal officer that it has so percolated, he and not the Civil Court being made the Judge of such percolation for the purposes of the Act. Such water-rate falls within the denomination of land revenue. BALVANT GANESH OZE v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA . . I. L. R., 22 Bom., 377

2. ——— Leakage water—Rights of riparian proprietors—Water-course.—The Irrigation Department has no power under Bombay Act VII of 1879 to dam a stream or a water-course on the ground that it derives its supply of water by leakage from an irrigation canal. S. 48 of the Act only gives the department the special right of charging a water-rate on land which derives benefit from the leakage. Water which has leaked from a canal into the land of another person does not belong to the Irrigation Department, so as to give the latter the right to follow it up and claim it as their own. If the leakage flow was such that it itself had become in the eye of the law a canal or water-course, then the rights of the persons through whose lands it flowed would be governed by the law applicable to canals or water-courses. It was contended for the defendants as to these two plots of land that the plaintiffs had no right to cultivate them, as they had been made a part of a village site, and on that understanding they had not been numbered at the survey in 1863, and had been exempted from assessment for twenty years. As to the bed of the stream, it was contended that the stream was a public stream, and that the bed of the stream as it dried up belonged to Government, and not to the plaintiffs. It was held by the lower Appellate Court that s. 61 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code applied; that Government were competent to set apart a portion of the lands comprised in the sanad of the plaintiffs for a village site, and that, as these lands had not been numbered at the survey of 1863, and had been exempt from assessment for more than twenty years, the plaintiffs had lost their right to cultivate them. On appeal to the High Court,—Held (reversing the decree of the lower Court) that the plaintiffs were entitled to the declaration prayed for. Held, also, (1) that s. 61 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code did not apply. That section relates back to s. 38, and both refer only to lands the property of Government in unalienated villages or unalienated portions of villages. They do not empower the Government to confiscate any land belonging to an inamdar and to confer it on the persons living in his village. (2) That the mere omission to number the plots of land could not have the effect of turning them into a part of the village site or take away the right of the plaintiffs. Nor did the omission of Government to assess these lands deprive the plaintiffs of them, or make them the property of Government. But the three months' time does not begin to run until such acknowledgment has been received, so that, where a person is charged with thus appropriating his land, it is no defence to plead that the Collector, though he received the application, neglected to furnish the applicant with a written acknowledgment of the receipt of the application. Per RANADE, J.—Where the Collector has received the application and omitted to send an acknowledgment, the occupant need only wait for three months from the time of his sending in the application. Prior to this, however, the plaintiff and other tenants paid B rents for 1892—94. K then applied for and obtained from the Collector an order, under s. 86 of the Code, rendering him assistance in recovering these rents. The plaintiff, in August 1894, brought this suit to restrain K from recovering the rents and to avoid the order for assistance. The Subordinate Judge granted the injunction, but the District Judge reversed that decision and dismissed the suit on the ground that K was the registered occupant of the land, and that the order for assistance was valid, and that payment of rent to B did not discharge the tenants. On appeal to the High Court,—Held, reversing the decree of the District Judge and restoring that of the Subordinate Judge, that, the lands in question being alienated land, s. 71 of the Land Revenue Code did not apply, and K was not a registered occupant under the Code. Such villages fall within the description of "alienated holdings" as defined by the Code. When a talukhdari village is attached under s. 159 of the Code for arrears of land revenue, so long as the attachment subsists, an order of forfeiture under s. 153 is illegal. The plaintiff was the talukhdar of the village of K. At the end of the revenue year 1878-79, that is, on 31st July 1879, the plaintiff was a defaulter in respect of the assessment payable to Government for that year. In November 1879, a punitive police post was established in the village under s. 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867 on account of the turbulent conduct of the inhabitants. Between April and January 1880 the Collector sold certain property of the talukhdari for arrears of revenue, and realized by the sale a sum of Rs1,608, a sum more than sufficient to cover the arrears due for 1878-79 as well as the assessment payable for 1879, but the Collector, after deducting the arrears due for 1878-79, applied the rest of the sale-proceeds towards the payment of the cost of the punitive post. The assessment for 1879-80 having remained unpaid, the village was attached on the 1st July 1880 under s. 159 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879). The attachment was followed on the 6th January 1881 by an order declaring the village to be forfeited under s. 153 of the Code. In 1886 the plaintiff sued Government to recover possession of the village and for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal and ultra vires. The defendant contended that it was valid and legal. Held that the village having been attached for arrears of land revenue under s. 159 of Bombay Act V of 1879 on the 1st July 1880, the plaintiff had twelve years' time from the date of the attachment within which he could apply for the restoration of the village under s. 162 of the Act. The order of forfeiture of the 6th January 1881 was, therefore, null and void. Held (per BIRDWOOD, J.) that the Collector had no power, under s. 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867, to recover the cost of the punitive post from the talukhdar, (1) as he was not an inhabitant of the village, and (2) because the cost could only be defrayed by a local rate imposed on the inhabitants of the district in which the punitive post was established. In 1880 and 1881, the first defendant having made default in paying the assessment, plots Nos. 303 and 305 were sold by the revenue authorities and were bought respectively by defendants Nos. 2 and 3. In the latter year (1881) plot No. 304 was sold in execution of a money decree obtained by the mortgagee (defendant No. 1) against the mortgagor and was purchased by his (the first defendant's) undivided brother without leave of the Court. In 1892 the plaintiffs (heirs of the mortgagor) brought this suit against defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3 to redeem the said three plots of land from the mortgage of 1872. Defendant No. 1 pleaded that he had inherited plot No. 304 from his brother, who had become the owner of plot No. 304 by his purchase at the execution sale in 1881. He disclaimed all interest in plots Nos. 303 and 305. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 answered that they had become absolute owners by the purchase at the revenue sales. As to these latter, it was alleged that defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were in possession of the said two plots for the first defendant. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 contended that by

s. 182 of the Land Revenue Code the plaintiffs were precluded from raising this point. Held that, though s. 182 forbade the Court to entertain a suit against defendants Nos. 2 and 3 on the ground that they had bought the land for defendant No. 1, it did not debar it from entertaining a suit against them on the ground that subsequently to the sale they were holding on behalf of defendant No. 1 or against defendant No. 1 on the ground that he was himself really in possession through defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as his agents or tenants. The same principle of equity which would make defendant No. 1 a trustee for the mortgagors if he had bought in his own name would make defendants Nos. 2 and 3 trustees for them if subsequently to the sale they held the land on behalf of defendant No. 1, and would also make defendant No. 1 himself a trustee if subsequently to the sale the property came into his possession as beneficially entitled thereto owing to an agreement between him and the certified purchasers. It was plain that in cases falling within sub-cls. (a) and (e) of s. 216 of the Land Revenue Code, the inamdar's interest in the assessment would not be affected by the application of Chs. VIII to X of that Act. He would still get the old assessment in the alienated lands in the village in the former case and the same amount of assessment in the latter, and the same must have been the intention in cases contemplated by sub-cl. 1. ——— s. 8—Local cess—Landlord and tenant—Fraudulent collection of cess.—The plaintiffs sued to recover back from the defendant the amount levied by him as local cess on certain wanta lands belonging to the plaintiffs, the defendant claiming to be the superior holder of the village in which the lands were situated. The amount was levied by the defendant through the assistance of the mamlatdar under Bombay Act III of 1869, s. 8. The defendant contended that, in consequence of a demand from Government, he had paid local cess on the whole of his talukh, including the village in which the plaintiffs' lands were situated, and was therefore entitled, under ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), to recover from them the amount which he had paid to Government as a portion of the cess which rateably fell upon their lands. It was found that the defendant was not the proprietor of the lands held by the plaintiffs, and that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between them; also that defendant paid local cess for the plaintiffs' lands fraudulently and with the intention of thereby making evidence of title to their lands, knowing that he had no lawful or just claim to them. Held that the defendant was not the superior holder of the lands within s. 8 of Bombay Act III of 1869, and was, therefore, not entitled to the assistance of the revenue officers of Government to recover the cess provided by that section for superior holders as against tenants and occupants, although he might have paid the local cess due on the land in the plaintiffs' possession; and that, consequently, the aid of the mamlatdar was illegally and improperly given to the defendant for the recovery of the amount from the plaintiffs. Held, also that the defendant was not a person

——— s. 163—Compensation—Frontage land—Fifteen per cent. addition to compensation not allowed.—A certain mosque in Bombay was abutted on the north, west, and east by public streets. In December 1886, the Municipal Commissioner, pursuant to s. 166 of the Bombay Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878, required the trustees of the mosque to set back the building on the said three sides for the purpose of improving the public streets. It was contended that the amount of compensation to be paid to the trustees was to be measured by the loss of rent which they would have received for certain rooms which they had proposed to build on the land in question. Held that the words of s. 163 of the Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878 were intended to ensure compensation to the owner for every sort of damage, and not to restrict it to compensation for such damage as he might by his own arrangement reduce it to. Compensation becomes due under the section as soon as the Corporation takes possession, which is when the owner begins to build, and there being no words in the section to show a contrary intention, the compensation must be assessed according to the state of things then existing, and not upon the basis of what the owner may have it in his power to do towards diminishing the damage which would otherwise result to him. Held, also, that in cases of compensation granted under s. 163 of the Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878, the addition of 15 per cent. cannot be allowed. The plaintiff thereupon filed this suit, praying for an injunction against the Municipal Commissioner. The eaves in question projected to the extent of one foot eight inches. The width of the road in front of the buildings was about forty feet, and the length of the eaves varied from seven feet to nine feet two inches above the roadway. At the time this suit was filed there was an open drain or gutter, one foot three inches wide, running along by the side of the plaintiff's buildings and between them and the road. That gutter, however, subsequently to the filing of this suit, but before the hearing, was covered over, and so much additional width was thereby added to the road. Held that the eaves constituted an obstruction within the meaning of the above section, and that the Municipal Commissioner was entitled to remove them. Under the above section, the question to be decided is not whether there is a real practical inconvenience to the public traffic in the street. Those are not the words used in the section, and if that was the intention of the Legislature, it would have been expressed. Where an Act gives power to a municipality or corporation for the public benefit, a more liberal construction should be given to it than where powers are to be exercised merely for private gain or other advantage. (3) No sanction for drawback shall extend or apply to any floor on which trade or manufacture is carried on, or any goods are sold." The Commissioner having refused to sanction a drawback of the tax leviable on certain properties of the plaintiff on the ground that they did not fall within the terms of the above conditions, the plaintiff filed this suit. It was contended on his behalf that the second and third of the above conditions were bad, and that the Standing Committee could not by so-called general conditions limit or curtail the right given to tax-payers by s. 158. Held that the conditions prescribed by the Standing Committee were not ultra vires, and that the Commissioner was justified in refusing the drawback. 2. ——— and ss. 504 and 527—Land taken by the municipality for street improvement—Compensation for land taken—Dispute as to amount of compensation—Notice of suit—Limitation.—In 1891 the municipal authorities of Bombay gave notice to the plaintiffs under s. 299 of Bombay Act III of 1888 that they required 23·30 square yards of the plaintiff's land for street improvement. On the 14th December 1891, the plaintiff gave possession of the land to the municipality, and on 27th January 1892 claimed R60 per square yard as compensation, By letter dated 23rd February 1892, the Municipal Commissioner (without prejudice) offered R50 per square yard as compensation, and stated that, on the plaintiff producing the title-deeds and papers to establish his title, the necessary documents in connection with the payment would be prepared. Nothing further took place in the matter until the 14th February 1894, on which date the plaintiff wrote a letter to the Municipal Commissioner, in which, without mentioning any sum, he requested the payment of the amount which might be due to him as compensation for his land taken by the municipality. The Commissioner refused to pay the compensation, contending that the plaintiff's claim was time-barred. The plaintiff thereupon brought this suit claiming R1,165 (being at the rate of R50 per square yard) as compensation for the land taken by the defendant or in the alternative for that sum as damages for the breach of contract to pay purchase-money for the land. The defendant pleaded (1) that notice under s. 527 of the Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) was necessary before suit filed; and (2) that the suit was barred by limitation. The Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court found for the defendant with costs, and dismissed the suit contingent on the opinion of the High Court. On a case stated for the High Court—Held (1) that notice under s. 527 of Bombay Act III of 1888 was not necessary, that section not being applicable to suits brought to enforce payment of compensation under s. 301 of the Act; (2) that the suit was not barred by limitation. Per FARRAN, J.—A suit against the municipality of Bombay for compensation for land acquired by the municipality under s. 299 of Bombay Act III of 1888 is not an action of tort or quasi-tort, but a simple action for the price of land which the terms of s. 301 of the Act impose upon the Commissioner to pay. The obligation to pay that price is of the same nature, (1) whether the owner assents to the valuation of the land placed upon it by the Commissioner; (2) whether the value is determined by the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court; or (3) whether it is left undetermined. S. 527 does not apply to any of these three cases. In all of them the obligation to pay is imposed by s. 301, and does not arise from the manner in which the amount of the price to be paid is arrived at. S. 504 prescribes the only mode in which, in case of dispute, the value of the land can be determined. If the owner of land disputes the Commissioner's valuation, he must apply to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court within a year. If he does not do so, the result is that he loses the power of effectually disputing the Commissioner's valuation, but does not lose his right to the amount of the valuation. The owner of land has a remedy independent of the provision of s. 504. That section only deals with cases where there is a dispute as to the value of the land, and leaves untouched those cases where there is no such dispute, but where the Commissioner for some reason declines to pay. In such cases the owner is left to his ordinary remedy, no special mode of procedure being prescribed. Cases is which there has been a dispute, but in which the owner abandons his claim to dispute the valuation of the Commissioner, fall within the latter category. The building was completed in June 1893, and the notice was issued on 13th January 1894. R was prosecuted for not complying with this notice. He contended that the notice was time-barred, as it had not been given within three months after the completion of the building. In answer to this plea, it was urged, on behalf of the municipality, that the building could not be said to have been completed, unless and until such accommodations as privies and cesspools had been executed in accordance with the requirements of the Health Department, and that, therefore, the notice was within time. Held that the notice was time-barred. And though the section gives power to the Commissioner to require the owner of low ground to cleanse and fill up the same, it does not permit him to issue an order that an indefinite extent of low-lying ground shall be filled up, much less that it shall be filled up to some particular level, or filled up with sweet earth, or that it shall be sloped in a particular direction. The plaintiffs in this suit complained that in January 1891 the defendant by his servants dug a trench, 8 feet deep, along the whole length of the gully for the purpose of laying a drain pipe, and that the work was done so negligently that the plaintiffs' house was injured and became in such a dangerous condition that it had to be pulled down. The plaintiffs claimed R3,996 as damages. The defendant denied the negligence, and alleged that the work was not done by his servants or agents, but by a contractor. For the defendant it was contended that the notice of action given by the plaintiffs under s. 527 of the Bombay Municipal Act (III of 1888) was insufficient. The notice stated "that one S L, a contractor under you, and as such being your agent and servant, excavated a trench, etc." It was argued that this was not a good notice, as it only alleged a ——— Prescriptive right—Title by long possession.—The holder of a cocoanut oart in Bandora, in the Island of Salsette, in the Thanna district, paying an annual assessment of R39 to Government, built a bungalow upon it without the permission of the Collector, who, under the rule purporting to have been issued by the Government of Bombay on the 1st February 1869 in accordance with the provisions of s. 35 of Bombay Act I of 1865, damanded from him a fine equal to sixty times the assessment, and, on the plaintiff's failure to pay the fine, summarily attached the land under the provisions of s. 48 of that Act. Held that, by virtue of uninterrupted enjoyment for more than thirty years, the plaintiff had, under s. 1 of Regulation V of 1827, acquired a prescriptive title to the land, and had become its absolute proprietor. XXI of 1827, s. 60.*—The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant, a farmer of abkari duties on the manufacture of spirits, under s. 60 of Bombay Regulation XXI of 1827, a sum of money alleged to have been illegally levied by him as tax or rent through the mamlatdar in respect of certain cocoanut trees tapped by the plaintiff in 1877-78 and 1878-79. Held that the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to entertain such a suit. If the claim be held to be one in respect of land revenue, it falls within the exception contained in cl. (c) of s. 5 of Act X of 1876. If it is not, s. 4 of the Act has no application. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—The expression "land revenue," as used in Act X of 1876, does not include either the duties leviable, under Reg. XXI of 1827, on the manufacture of spirits, or the taxes on the tapping of toddy trees, the levy of which in certain districts was legalized by s. 24 of the Bombay Abkari Act, V of 1878. A farmer of duties on the manufacture of spirits is not authorized to levy a duty on any juice in trees, either under Regulation XXI of 1827, or Act X of 1876, or Bombay Act V of 1878. At the end of the revenue year 1878-79, i.e., on 31st July 1879, the plaintiff was a defaulter in respect of the assessment payable to Government for that year. In November 1879 a punitive police post was established in the village, under s. 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867, on account of the turbulent conduct of the inhabitants. Between January and April 1880 the Collector sold certain property of the talukhdar for arrears of revenue, and realized by the sale a sum of Rs1,608-12-8. This sum was more than sufficient to cover the arrears due for 1878-79 as well as the assessment payable for 1879-80, but the Collector, after deducting the arrears due for 1878-79, applied the rest of the sale-proceeds towards the payment of the cost of the punitive post. The assessment for 1879-80 having remained unpaid, the village was attached on the 1st of July 1880, under s. 159 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879). The attachment was followed on the 6th January 1881 by an order declaring the village to be forfeited under s. 153 of the Code. In 1886 the plaintiff filed the present suit against Government to recover possession of the village, and for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal and ultra vires. The defendant pleaded (inter alia) that the suit was barred under s. 4, cl. (c), of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), that it was also barred by limitation. Held, also, that the plaintiff's claim for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal was not barred by s. 4, cl. (c), of Act X of 1876, as the order of forfeiture could not be considered "a proceeding for the realization of land revenue." The proceeding authorized by law for the realization of land revenue, i.e., the attachment of the village, having been taken, no other proceeding could legally be taken, as against the plaintiff, till the expiration of twelve years from the date of the attachment. Held, further, that the claim for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal was not time-barred, as it was governed by art. 120 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). 3. ——— Service inam land—Suit for a declaration of title to trees thereon and for damages—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Hereditary Offices Act (Bombay Act III of 1874)—Hereditary officer—Officiator.—The plaintiff complained that he was prevented from cutting the trees growing on land situate in the village of Tungarli, belonging to certain persons who had sold the trees to him. He claimed damages and an injunction restraining the Collector from interfering with him. The defendant pleaded that the trees did not belong to the plaintiff's vendors, being on service inam land. The lower Court dismissed the plaintiff's claim, holding that the land, on which the trees were growing, was service inam land, and that the plaintiff's vendors had no title to them. On appeal, the High Court, on the evidence, upheld the lower Court's decision that the land was inam service land, but held that it did not necessarily follow that the trees upon it were the property of Government, and not of the vatandars. The latter might be the owners of the trees subject to a condition. The case was, therefore, remanded to the District Court for a finding on an issue as to whether the holders of service inam lands had a title to the trees on the lands, and, if so, whether they had the right to cut down trees without the permission of the Collector. On this finding the District Judge found in the affirmative. The case then came again before the High Court, when a preliminary objection was taken that under s. 4 of Act X of 1876 the Court had no jurisdiction. Held that, it having been decided that land in question was service inam land, the Court, under s. 4, cl. (a), of Bombay Act X of 1876, ceased to have jurisdiction over the plaintiff's claim against Government in respect of the trees growing thereon, as such claims related to property appertaining to the office of a village officer. 1. ——— Revenue survey—Entry of tenants in registers—Landlord and tenant.—The mere entry of the names of the tenants of a khot in the Government registers as occupants under the Revenue Survey Act, I (Bombay) of 1865, does not constitute an injury to the landlord of a tangible kind, of which the Civil Courts can take cognizance. The khot's rights as landlord, if they can be established, cannot be prejudiced by any proceeding under the Survey Act, there being nothing in that Act, or the rules framed under it, which affects the rights of subjects of the Government inter se. The utmost benefit which the tenants can derive, as against their landlord, from being entered as occupants under the Act, is a right to claim a deduction of the amount of assessment paid by them direct to the Government. If they deny his title, he can sue them either to establish his title and recover the full rent due to him under his contract with them, or to eject them as holding possession of his lands by a title which they themselves repudiate. 2. ——— Boundary dispute.—"Boundary dispute," as used in the Survey Act (Bombay Act I of 1865), means a contention between two neighbouring land-proprietors as to where a boundary line or boundary marks has or have been fixed by the survey officers. After the functions of the latter officers have ceased in a district, the Collector acting under Act III of 1846 is the proper officer to determine such a dispute, and fix the proper position of the boundary marks. But where a landholder claims to recover from a neighbouring holder land alleged to have been usurped or encroached upon by the latter, the person aggrieved must file his plaint in Court (which in the case of a claim for mere possession may be the Court of the Mamlatdar or the ordinary Civil Court), where the determination of the Collector as to the proper position of the boundary line or marks (although it of itself confers or withdraws no right of possession) affords valuable evidence in adjudicating upon the rights of the parties. ——— Power of Government to raise assessment—Bom. Reg. XVII of 1827, s. 4, cls. 2 and 3.—The words in s. 25 of Bombay Act I of 1865 confer upon Government no absolute power in all cases to fix any assessment they may please. But that section, as also s. 4, cl. 2, Regulation XVII of 1827, distinctly limit the power of Government to raise the assessment on land held partially exempt by right. Government, however, may set aside such limitations at their discretion by a legislative enactment, as provided by cl. 3 of the above Regulation. But Government can exercise this power only under "specific" rules. In Bombay Act I of 1865, s. 25, no such "specific" rules are to be found as would indicate that the Legislature intended to set aside the provisions of cl. 2, s. 4, Regulation XVII of 1827, and to enable the revenue officers to ignore all exemptions except those which they may themselves choose to recognize. Where plaintiff had enjoyed "Savai sut" or a remission of one-fourth for a period of more than thirty years with respect to lands on which assessment became leviable in 1805 A.D., he was held by the High Court to have established a prescriptive right to such a remission. The holder of a cocoanut oart in Bandora, in the island of Salsette, in the Thana district, paying an annual assessment of R39 to Government, built a bungalow upon it without the permission of the Collector, who, under the rule purporting to have been issued by the Government of Bombay on the 1st February 1869 in accordance with the provisions of s. 35 of Bombay Act I of 1865, demanded from him a fine equal to sixty times the assessment, and, on the plaintiff's failure to pay the fine, summarily attached the land under the provisions of s. 48 of that Act Held, first, that the Government of Bombay had no authority to make the rule of 1st February 1869, and that, s. 35 of the Survey Act providing no penalty for building without the Collector's permission, the attachment was illegal. Secondly, that the expressions "Government land" and "Land belonging to Government" in Bombay Act I of 1865 mean land of which Government is the proprietor, and do not apply to land in which the proprietary right in the soil vests in a private individual, whether or not it be subject to the payment of assessment to Government. Quære—Whether the amount of the

NATIONAL LIBRARY OF INDIA

2. ——— s. 5, cl. (1), para. (2)—Bombay Act I of 1865—Building-sites—Exemption from payment of Government land revenue.—On the 6th April 1836, the Collector of Ahmedabad demised by lease a building-site in that city to the plaintiff's grandfather for a term of ninety-nine years. No rent was reserved by the lease as then presently payable, but it contained a provision that the lessee should pay, in respect of the said site, such land tax as might "fall upon all." The lessee and his heirs held the site from the date of the lease down to 1878 without paying or being required to pay any land tax or rent to Government. In 1878, however, Government levied from the plaintiff R2-11-0 as land revenue assessed on the site. Plaintiff thereupon sued the Collector of Ahmedabad for recovery of the amount, on the ground that the assessment and levy were illegal. Held that the plaintiff's building-site was exempted from liability to assessment by Bombay Act IV of 1868, s. 5, cl. 1, para. 2, which enactment applied to the case. Held, also, that this exemption was not to continue beyond the term for which the site had been demised by Government, but that on its expiration it will be open to Government to resume the land altogether, or to re-let it on such terms as to assessment, or otherwise, as might be the pleasure of Government. The origin of Bombay Act IV of 1838 mentioned, and the provisions contained in it, relating to exemption from the payment of assessment, referred to and discussed. ——— s. 7—Lease to levy tolls—Lessee, Right of, to admit partners—Keeping two sets of accounts—False accounts kept to deceive Government.—A lessee from Government of the right to levy tolls admitted into partnership with him the plaintiff and two others. One of the conditions attached to the lease prohibited sub-letting. The plaintiff having brought a suit for his share of the profits realized in the transaction, the Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that the partnership was illegal, being of opinion that sub-letting and admitting a partner were identical. Held, reversing the decree, that the partnership was not illegal. Where in such a partnership two sets of account were kept, one true and the other false, held that such practice, however reprehensible, was not illegal under s. 7 of the Tolls Act (Bombay Act III of 1875), and did not disentitle the plaintiff to show as between himself and his partners what was the actual profit of the concern. BOMBAY TRAMWAYS ACT (I OF 1874).

s. 24—Meaning of the words "Regulating the travelling"—Validity of Regulation made under the section for regulating the conduct of the Company's servants.—The words "regulating the travelling" in s. 24 of the Bombay Tramways Act (Bombay Act I of 1874) mean laying down rules as to how persons shall travel, that is to say, rules for the conduct and behaviour of the persons who travel, and cannot be held to include rules for the conduct of the Company's servants, prescribing what they shall do, or what they shall not do, in the matter, for instance, of issuing tickets. S. 24 of Bombay Act I of 1874 authorizes the Bombay Tramway Company to make regulations "for regulating the travelling in or upon any carriage belonging to them." Under this section, the Company made the following regulation:—"Any conductor who shall neglect to issue a ticket to a passenger, or shall issue to such passenger a ticket bearing a number other than one of the numbers contained in such books, or shall issue a ticket of a lower denomination than the amount of the fare, or non-consecutive in number, or a ticket other than the ticket provided by the Company for the journey to be travelled, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding R25." Held that the regulation was ultra vires. ss. 10, 11, and 12—Duties of the police patel in cases of unnatural or sudden death—Ancient village system of Police, how affected by the Code of Criminal Procedure (1882).—The ancient village system of police, as regulated by Bombay Act VIII of 1867, remains unaffected by the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1862) except where the Code contains a specific provision. Under Bombay Act VIII of 1867, the police patel has to do much more than merely inform the district police. He has himself to investigate the matter of a crime and obtain all procurable evidence. Under s. 11 of the Act, if an unnatural or sudden death occur, or any corpse be found, he must forthwith hold an inquest and investigate with the panch the causes of death and all the circumstances of the case, and make a written report of the same. If it appears that the death was unlawfully caused, he must immediately give notice to the police station, and if the state of the corpse permits, he shall at once forward it to the Civil Surgeon or other appointed medical officer. These provisions of the law are likely to be defeated if the police patel refrains from the proper action until the district police officers arrive on the spot. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAGHO MAHADU

4. —— Bond with collateral agreement to accept rents—Right of suit.—In a suit to recover money (principal and interest) alleged to have been due on a bond, defendant pleaded that subsequent to the execution of the bond plaintiff had taken from the obligor an ijara and a dur-ijara and executed ijara-kabuliats, agreeing to accept payment of the bond by setting off the rents due under the kabuliats. It was found that the kabuliats stipulated that during their term the rent should, year after year and instalment by instalment, be credited in payment of the bond debt, and that at the end of the term of the ijara accounts should be settled and the balance paid, neither party being at liberty to put an end to the lease. Held that till the termination of the lease plaintiff could not sue on the bond, his right of suit having been suspended during the continuance of the ijara and dur-ijara, the stipulations in which qualified the stipulation in the bond for absolute payment at the end of a specified period. Under the decree, the obligees sought to sell the property which by the time of the execution had come into the hands of R (a great-nephew of J's), who sued and eventually succeeded in having J's adoption declared void. R then sued to set aside, so far as it affected him, the decree for the sale of the property, and in this suit also he eventually succeeded. The representative of the original bond-holders then brought a suit against R to recover the money due on the bond. Held that plaintiff's right of suit first arose, not from the last decree in favour of R, but from the time when the debt became due under the terms of the bond. I shall not lay any claim to any payment made except in this way,"—Held that though the defendant at the time of the adjustment disputed the correctness of the account, yet that, by having executed the bond and made payments under it, he must be held to have waived his objection, and in a suit on the bond could not be permitted to re-open the question of the correctness of the balance, though he might possibly have been allowed to do so had he alleged that

Subsequently they agreed with the rightful heir to compromise the suit, which compromise, however, was never acted upon, partly owing, it was alleged, to the subsequent conduct of the heir. At the date of the compromise, the heir, who had just attained his majority, and was without proper counsel or assistance, and acted under threats from the plaintiff, a powerful and wealthy banker, that he would carry on the litigation against him per fas aut nefas, was induced, contrary to his own judgment and sense of right, and without any evidence that the sum claimed was really due to the plaintiff, to execute a bond in his favour, whereby he bound himself to pay a large sum of money claimed by the plaintiff as being due from the widows; the plaintiff on his part agreeing that he would treat such payment as a satisfaction of his claim against the widows, but meanwhile that he would retain the securities which he held from them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the heir to enforce the last-mentioned bond,—Held that the bond was wholly invalid and fraudulent as against the defendant, and that, as there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant independently of the bond, it could not stand as a security for anything which might be justly due from the widows. Semble—The transaction, even if valid, did not amount to a novation, for the plaintiff never abandoned his claim against the widows, but only agreed to abandon his remedy against them in case he obtained satisfaction of his claim from the heir. No mutation of names in favour of the creditor was effected in the revenue registers. The creditor brought a suit against the debtor to recover the principal and interest agreed to be paid under the bond, alleging that he had never received any rents under the jamog. Held that the effect of the jamog or novation was that the plaintiff's right to recover interest from the defendant was gone, and the plaintiff was therefore not entitled to maintain his suit against the defendant in respect of the interest which was payable under the bond. 29. ——— Waiver of default—Limitation.—Suit brought on 24th April 1873 for principal and interest due on a bond dated 30th October 1850. The debt was payable by eight annual instalments, on failure of any one of which the whole amount was to be payable on demand. No instalment was paid, and when the suit was brought, defendant pleaded that the suit was barred, as three years had elapsed from the date on which the last instalment became due. Held that the usual clause, that on failure to pay one instalment the whole amount shall be payable on demand, gave a mere election to plaintiff of converting the obligation into a different one; that that election was never exercised, and that the document continued to be one securing the payment of a debt by instalments, as to all of which the action had long been barred; and that it was unnecessary, therefore, to consider whether, in the present case, "on demand" must not be construed according to its meaning at the period at which the words were written. 30. ——— Construction of bond—Payments towards interest and principal.—Defendants were indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of R1,400. With the object of liquidating this debt with interest at 12 per cent. per annum, the parties executed a bond, whereby it was agreed that the defendants should grant an ijara lease of certain property for the term of fourteen years to the plaintiff's husband; and that the rent reserved on this lease should be paid by the lessee to the plaintiff during the terms in semi-annual payments each of R3-12. Held that, on the proper construction of this agreement, the semi-annual instalments were to be applied first to the reduction of the principal money due, and not to the payment of the interest. The obligee may waive the default under Acts IX of 1871 and XV of 1877, sch. II, art. 75, but the Courts have no authority to compel him to waive it. Neither Act VIII of 1859, s. 194, nor Act X of 1877, s. 210, confers any authority on the Courts to relieve a contracting party from such an express stipulation in a bond payable by instalments as to the consequence of default in punctual payment of the instalments. A debt being presently due, an agreement to pay it by instalments, with a stipulation that on default the creditor may demand immediate payment of the whole balance due with interest, is not to be relieved against in equity. Such a stipulation is not in the nature of a penalty, inasmuch as its object is only to secure payment in a particular manner. The defendant executed to the plaintiff a bond payable by instalments, and expressly stipulating for the payment of the whole amount on failure to pay any instalment on the day fixed. He paid the first instalment, but made default in paying the second, which fell due on the 3rd August 1878. On the 20th August plaintiff sued to recover the whole balance due on the bond. Defendant admitted the bond, but pleaded tender of the amount of the second instalment soon after the due date, and prayed for payment by instalments without any interest. The first Court passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour for the amount claimed with costs, but ordered defendant to pay ₹100 and the costs at once, and the balance by yearly instalments of ₹100 each, with interest at six per cent. till payment. The District Judge, on appeal, affirmed the decree, with a slight variation as to interest, which he directed the defendant to pay on overdue instalments only. Held by the High Court, on second appeal, that neither of the lower Courts had jurisdiction, without the consent of the parties, to substitute, for the contract made by them, terms which the Court preferred. Held, also, that plaintiff was entitled to sue on the day after that on which the default was made,—viz., on the day after that fixed for the payment of the instalment,—and that the Subordinate Judge had no power to rule the contrary. 35. ——— Default in payment—Expiration of time for specific enforcement of contract.—A bond for money provided that on failure on the part of the obligor to pay interest as agreed in the bond, and within a certain period from the date of the bond, the obligee might sue for possession of the immoveable property mortgaged in the bond. Default was made in the payment of interest as agreed, but the obligee deferred bringing a suit for possession of the mortgaged property so long that the time mentioned in the bond expired before he could obtain a decree. Held that under these circumstances a decree for possession of the property could not be granted to him. BALWANT SINGH v. GUMANI RAM [I. L. R., 5 All., 591

36. ——— Suit on bond—Limitation—Burden of proof—Indorsement of payment of instalments.—Where a defendant sets up the defence of limitation, he must plead it, and so that the claim is barred. If, when the plaintiff has proved his case, the facts show that the cause of action accrued at a date earlier than the period of limitation, and the plea of limitation has been set up by the defendant, the latter will be entitled to take advantage of the plaintiff's evidence that the claim is barred, and to have judgment given in his favour. The obligee of a bond, by which obligor covenanted to pay the sum of ₹3,000 by annual instalments of ₹200, and in which it was also agreed that payments of the instalments should be indorsed on the bond, brought a suit against the obligor, alleging default in payment, and claiming to recover the amount of the bond. He gave credit for payment of the instalments for seven years, and alleged that his cause of action arose upon default in payment of the eighth instalment. The bond showed on its face indorsements of the payments for which credit was given. The obligor alleged that no instalments were paid after the third year, that therefore the debt became due at an earlier date than that stated by the plaintiff, and that the claim was barred by limitation. Held that, inasmuch as the defendant adduced no evidence to show that the later instalments were not paid, and inasmuch as the evidence produced by the plaintiff did not show that the debt accrued at a date earlier than the limitation period, the plea of limitation failed. There was a further stipulation that, on default of payment, the bond was to be enforced as a decree. On failure of payment, the obligee applied for execution under s. 53, Act XX of 1858, but the Subordinate Judge ordered the payment to be made by instalments. 2. ——— Supply of necessaries to foreign ship—Claim for, against proceeds of ship—Statute 7 Geo. I, c. 21, s. 2.—The Statute 7 Geo. When a suit is brought by material men for necessaries supplied to a foreign ship against the surplus proceeds of such ship lying in the registry of the Court, and there is no opposition on the part of the owners of these proceeds, the Court has a discretionary power to allow the claim of the material men to be paid out of such unclaimed proceeds. 3. ——— Master's lien for wages—Sale of ship—Charterer—Priority.—The charterer of a ship advanced money to enable her to complete the voyage, and obtained as security a "bottomry-bond," signed by both the master and owner. On the completion of the voyage, the charterer got the ship arrested and sold, and the money was brought into Court. Before any order had been made for the payment of the proceeds out of Court, the master also had got the ship arrested at his suit for wages due, but no decree had been obtained. Subsequently, the charterer, without notice to the master, obtained an order of Court for the payment of the proceeds of sale to satisfy his bottomry-bond. Thereupon the master applied to restrain the charterer from taking the money out of Court until the claim for wages had been first satisfied. Held that the master had a lien on the proceeds for wages due to him at the time of the sale of the ship, prior to that of the bottomry-bond holder, and that he was entitled to have the proceeds retained in Court until the hearing of his claim. 4. ——— Master's lien for disbursements and wages—Towage—Priority of lien.—A ship was chartered for a voyage from Calcutta to Jedda and back. While at Jedda, the master found it necessary to borrow money for the wages of the crew and other purposes; and with the consent of the owner, tenders were invited by advertisement for a sum for which a bottomry-bond was to be given. Several tenders were made, and one by the charterer of the ship was accepted. A bottomry-bond was executed by the master, with the consent of the owner, in which was included the expense of certain repairs which had been found necessary at an intermediate port on the voyage from Calcutta, and for which the master had made himself liable. By the bond the master bound himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, for the payment of the sum named therein, and part of the consideration was expressed to be the payment of the debt which the master had incurred at the intermediate port. On arriving in the Hooghly, the ship was taken in charge by a pilot, under whose advice the master engaged a steamer to tow her to Calcutta. He was sued in Calcutta for the hire of the steamer, and had to pay the claim. When the ship arrived in Calcutta, the bond-holder obtained a decree on his bond, and had the ship arrested and sold; but on the application of the master, who had put in a claim for wages, the Court ordered that the proceeds should remain in Court pending the consideration of the master's claim. In a suit by the master to recover the balance of wages due to him as master of the ship, and for the expense of the steamer which towed the ship up the river to Calcutta,—Held the towage was a disbursement fairly made, and of which the bond-holder had the benefit; the master, therefore, had a lien on the ship for such disbursement. Semble—The master also had a lien for wages down to the time when he was duly discharged, and not merely down to the time of the arrival in port and arrest of the ship. The master, however, having bound himself by the terms of the bond, was precluded thereby from setting up his lien against that of the bond-holder, to whom, on the face of the bond, he had constituted himself a debtor. The instrument proceeded as follows:—"You have no connection with the security or seaworthiness (yogyam) of the said ship up to the above stipulated time. If the money is not paid in the said stipulated time, we shall add vattam at R20 per cent. per annum on the amount of principal and interest accruing on that date, adding vattam once in twelve months until date of payment after the said stipulated time on the hypothecation security (adamana yogyam) of the said ship and shall get back this mortgage bond." The money was not repaid on the stipulated date, and the vessel, after making several voyages, foundered in port. Held that the instrument was not a bottomry bond, and the plaintiff was not entitled under it, regarded as an instrument of hypothecation merely to recover the enhanced interest referred to in the

1. ——— Demarcation of boundary line—Beng. Reg. X of 1822, ss. 2, 3, and 8—Suit for declaration of boundary contrary to survey award—Proprietary rights, Exercise of—Presumption of ownership—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825, s. 5, cl. 12.—At the time of the Permanent Settlement the northern boundary of the pergunnah Shoosung (situated in Mymensingh, at the foot of the Garrow hills) was not defined by Government. From before that time, and certainly for more than sixty years, the zamindars of the pergunnah have always, but in an irregular and uncertain manner, exercised certain rights in the Garrow hills and over the inhabitants, who are half savages, such as hunting elephants, cutting wood, levying cesses on the inhabitants when possible (including in some parts of the hills a tribute of one rupee per hut), and exacting occasional services from them. Government held a survey, and declared the northern boundary of pergunnah Shoosung to be a line running along the base of the Garrow hills. The zamindar thereupon sued to set aside the survey, and for a declaration that the northern boundary lay many miles further north, and that the intermediate hill country belonged to him as forming part of pergunnah Shoosung. Held (by SETON-KARR, J.) that the acts of possession proved by the zamindar were sufficient under the circumstances to prove his proprietary right in the disputed tract, and for the passing of a decree in his favour. Held (by MACPHERSON, J.) that they were not sufficient to entitle him to a decree, being acts of mere easement independent of possession. Held by PEACOCK, C.J., JACKSON and PHEAR, JJ., on appeal under the Letters Patent.—The rules laid down by Regulation X of 1802 were intended to take effect only within the tract of country described in s. 2, within which the administration of civil and criminal justice, etc., was by s. 3 declared to be vested in an officer to be denominated the Civil Commissioner of the north-eastern parts of Rungpore. The proviso in s. 8 was not intended to give substantive powers to the Governor General in Council in respect of other tracts of the country, and cl. 2 of the same section did not intend to take away the power of any Civil Court except within that tract. The proviso contained in s. 8 does not authorize Government to separate any part of the Garrow country beyond that described in s. 2 from the district and from the general Regulations, but merely directs the separation of such tracts from the estates of the neighbouring zamindars, and the discontinuance of the collection of cesses by the zamindars from the Garrows. By cl. 2, s. 8, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is taken away only in respect of acts of the above description, done under the authority of the Government; but that does not take away the right of a zamindar to contest a survey award drawing a line which deprives him of part of his zamindari and his permanently-settled estate. Where a Rajah had exercised rights and collected dues on certain hills and in forests north of an alleged line, and it was the unanimous opinion of all the revenue authorities that the forests were within his permanently-settled estate, the assumption by them and Government of such line as the boundary of the Rajah's estate, throwing upon him the onus of proving his claim to any portion north of that line, was held to be arbitrary and anomalous. If such proceedings were adopted under cl. 12, s. 5, Regulation IX of 1825, they were wholly irregular, and the irregularity can be no ground for excluding the Court from examining them. When a man is found exercising, on both sides of a boundary line, without objection, rights of ownership or incorporeal rights, and when it is not shown that there is any other owner of the soil, or that any objection to the exercise of such rights was made during a long course of years, his acts cannot be treated as the encroachments of a wrong-doer. Per PHEAR, J.—Where acts of user illustrate all the modes of enjoyment of which a disputed property can reasonably be expected to be capable, it can be rightly attributed to proprietorship of the tract upon which they were exercised. The Privy Council will never interfere with the finding of an Indian Court upon a question of boundary, unless they are clearly satisfied that there has been some plain miscarriage in the conduct or decision of the case upon which they can put their hands, and make it the ground for an order reversing or varying the decree. A broker is entitled to his commission where he has induced in the vendor the contracting mind, the willingness to open negotiations upon a reasonable basis, even though a change or modification of the terms of the contract is made by the buyer and seller without his intervention. A broker sued the Municipality of Bombay for brokerage in respect of lands purchased by them. Held that, if during the time that the broker was negotiating with the vendor the latter was induced to consent to the sale, the broker was entitled to his brokerage. It was not material to inquire what operated upon the mind of the vendor, and whether it was the advice of friends, or the knowledge that his land could be acquired compulsorily, or the persuasions of the broker. It was sufficient to support the broker's claim if the vendor's acceptance of the terms was brought about during his intervention; and the fact that the Municipal Commissioner stepped in at the last moment, and himself actually struck the bargain, did not deprive the broker of his brokerage. Primarily a broker is merely the agent of the party by whom he is originally employed. To make the other side liable to pay him brokerage, it must be

2. ——— Suit for brokerage—Contract effected by broker not carried out by purchaser—Quantum meruit.—The plaintiff was employed by the defendants as broker to sell certain property. The defendants' letter, dated 3rd January 1895, engaging him as broker stated as follows:—"It is understood that the brokerage will be paid on receipt by us of the money, and that this transaction is to be completed within a fortnight from date." The plaintiff negotiated with one Pestonji Patel and his brother, who eventually agreed to become purchasers, but stipulated for four or five months within which to pay the purchase-money. On the 1st February 1895, the defendants through the plaintiff finally closed the contract with the purchasers, one of the terms of which provided that R10,000 should be paid immediately as earnest and the balance (R27,000) of the purchase-money to be paid within four months. The purchasers were, however, unable to pay the R10,000 earnest-money, and they handed to the defendants three Bank of Bombay shares as security for the performance of the contract. One of the purchasers shortly afterwards died: the defendants apparently abandoned the idea of enforcing the contract, and at the end of the year they returned to the purchaser's family two of the Bank of Bombay shares, having (as they alleged) sold the third to defray the expenses which they had incurred in connection with the transaction. The plaintiff sued to recover R1,500 as brokerage from the defendants. Held that under the circumstances the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the R1,500, but only to a quantum meruit, there being no previous agreement as to the time when the brokerage was to be paid; and that he was only entitled to a percentage (5 per cent.) on the value of the shares which had been actually received by the defendants. Part of the business for which the plaintiff was employed was to find a solvent purchaser. STOKES v. SOONDERNATH KROTE [I. L. R., 22 Bom., 540

BUILDING LEASE.

——— Party wall, Liability for cost of—Agreement to refer disputes to a third person—Effect of such agreement on the right to sue—Award of such third person essential to right of action—Surveyor's certificate—Limitation—Covenant—Right to sue—Stranger to consideration—Landlord and tenant.—The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant half the cost of a party wall. The plaintiff and defendants were lessees of adjoining pieces of land under agreements made between them respectively and the Secretary of State for India in Council as lessor. The terms and conditions of the two agreements were the same. By these agreements the plaintiff and defendant respectively agreed to build houses upon the said pieces of land in the manner therein specified, and the agreements contained the two following clauses:—(1) "The buildings to be continuous with party walls common to both adjoining houses." (2) "All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties." In pursuance of the said agreements, the plaintiff and defendants respectively erected buildings on the said pieces of land. The plaintiff caused the northern wall of his building to be built as a party wall, and it was used by the defendants as the southern wall of the building, erected by them. The defendants paid the builder, who was employed by the plaintiff, a sum of R700 on account of the cost of erecting the party wall, but the rest of the cost was defrayed by the plaintiff. The party wall was completed in November 1871, but, in consequence of disputes which arose between the plaintiff and the building contractor, the sum payable to the latter was not ascertained for some years. In March 1879 the plaintiff caused the party wall to be measured by a surveyor, and on the 7th June 1879 demanded from the defendants payment of half the cost. The defendants, however, failing to pay the sum demanded, the plaintiff, after notice to the defendants, caused the cost of the said party wall to be ascertained by the Government surveyor, who by a certificate, dated the 25th February 1882, certified that the share of the cost to be borne by the defendants for the said party wall was R1,224. The plaintiff in this action sought to recover this sum from the defendants minus the R700 which, as above stated, the defendants had already paid, and for which the plaintiff gave them credit. The defendants in their written statement alleged that the party wall had been partly built with materials supplied by them, and that in the year 1870 they had adjusted accounts with the plaintiff in respect of the said materials and the said party wall, and it was then agreed that the sum of R700 paid by the defendants should be treated as a final settlement. They also alleged that the plaintiff had settled disputes with the building contractors, and had only paid them three annas in the rupee on the amount of their claim in full satisfaction; the defendants pleaded that they ought not to be charged with more than their due proportion of such reduced amount. It was further contended for the defendants that their obligation to pay half the cost of the party wall existed independently of the arrangement between them and the plaintiff to refer the matter to the Government surveyor; that this latter covenant was only collateral, and did not interfere with the plaintiff's right to sue the defendants for their half share of the cost; that the plaintiff's cause of action in this respect arose on the 15th October 1878, when the contractor's claim was finally settled, and that this suit not having been brought for more than three years after that date, it was barred by limitation. Held that the suit was not barred. There was no right of action independently of the valuation and award of the Government surveyor. There was no separate covenant to pay compensation to which the covenant for reference to the Government surveyor could be collateral. The rights of the parties were defined by the contracts, and under these each lessee might have the benefit of a party wall on such terms, and no others, as he on his part submitted to. Payment of a share of the cost was not one of these terms except in so far as each lessee, if a dispute arose, was bound by the decision of a Government surveyor. That decision was not ancillary, serving to give greater explicitness to a right already fully subsisting. It was essential to the right itself, and, until it was made, no cause of action for the moiety of the cost arose. Where, in leases granted by one lessor to several lessees taking sites for buildings intended to be contiguous and to form one block or group in mutual relation, there is a common covenant which is an inducement to the lessee to take the lease, and which he must know is equally an inducement to his neighbour to take his lease, neither can be called a stranger to the consideration. Each may be regarded as an equitable assignee of the covenants which the lessor made for his benefit as lessee. Each, consequently, has an equitable right to enforce against the other the obligation stipulated for in his interest, and serving as a part of his inducement (as the other knew) to the contract. BUILDING ERECTED BY ADJOINING OWNERS.

——— Liability of adjoining owners for costs of party wall—Agreements for building—Decision of Government surveyor made final in case of dispute—Right of suit—Right of one owner over portion of party wall not used or built on by the other.—Under separate agreements made by them respectively with Government, the plaintiff and defendant held adjoining plots of land for building. The agreements contained the same terms and stipulations, among which were the following :—"(a) The buildings to be continuous, with party walls common to both adjoining houses. (b) All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties." The plaintiff employed a contractor to erect a house upon his plot of land. The house was completed in 1870, the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the condition contained in the agreement with Government. Disputes subsequently arose between the plaintiff and his contractor, which were not settled until the 26th August 1878, on which date the plaintiff paid the contractor a sum of R20,51 -4-11, which included the cost of the party wall. After the plaintiff's house had been completed, the defendant built his house upon the adjoining land, and in so doing he used a large portion of the party wall as the southern wall of his house. He paid the plaintiff half the cost of the portion so used by him. The rear portion of the said wall was not used by the defendant, as his house did not extend so far to the rear as the house of the plaintiff. The plaintiff demanded payment of half the cost of that part of the wall not used by the defendants, but the defendants refused to pay. The plaintiff then claimed that part of the wall as his own property, and proceeded to open windows in it. The defendants objected. The plaintiff subsequently filed the present suit, claiming from the defendants payment of half the cost of the said portion of the wall not used by the defendants, and, in the event of such payment not being awarded, he prayed for a declaration that he was the sole owner of the said portion of the wall, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing him in the sole enjoyment thereof. The brother (Khatav Luddha) of the first defendant was originally made the second defendant of the suit. He, however, disclaimed all interest in the premises, and it appeared that in 1876 the first defendant had sold the property to him (Khatav Luddha), who in 1879 sold it to Kesserbai, the first defendant's wife. Kesserbai accordingly was made the second defendant in the place of Khatav Luddha. Both the defendants pleaded limitation, and denied their liability to pay any part of the cost of that part of the wall which they did not use. The first defendant further alleged that he had paid the whole cost of the foundation and other parts of the said wall, and claimed to set off this payment against the claim of the plaintiff. At the original hearing, SCOTT, J., held (1) that the part of the wall in dispute, although not used by the defendants, was a party wall, having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the said wall was erected ; (2) that Kesserbai was liable, equally with the first defendant, to pay for this part of the wall, having purchased the property subject to the terms of the original agreement of which she presumably had notice ; (3) that the suit was not barred, but that there was no right of action for the cost of the party wall independently of the award of the Government surveyor, in whose decision lay all disputes as to such cost ; and that, until his decision was given, there was no complete cause of action. SCOTT, J., accordingly, on 11th December 1882, decreed that the defendants were severally liable to pay the half of whatever sum the Government surveyor might certify to be due for the cost of the disputed part of the said wall, and that the defendants were entitled to set off, in the calculation of what was due from them, the cost of any work or materials which the Government surveyor might find had been contributed by the first defendant. The case was thereupon adjourned, in order that the certificate of the Government surveyor might be obtained. The Government surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall, but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations, etc., of the wall. The case came on again before SCOTT, J., who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined, and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set-off and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendants appealed. Held that, having regard to the terms of the agreements under which the plaintiff and defendants respectively held their property, the Court was not competent to determine the question of the defendant's set-off or the other points raised by the pleadings. These were matters to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose certificate was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue and upon which the Court might give judgment. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to use the portion of the wall not occupied by the defendants in any way except as a party wall. It was erected under the agreement as a party wall, and that it should be used for a purpose inconsistent with the idea of its being a party wall would be opposed to the true intention of the parties to the agreement, whether Government or the lessees. The plaintiff was not entitled to the full right of ownership over it, as if it had been built on his own ground : the declaration and injunction asked for, therefore, were refused. COVERJI LUDDHA v. ——— s. 4—Buddhist law of marriage in British Burma—Wife's claim upon husband for maintenance.—By the Buddhist law of marriage, as administered in the Courts of British Burma, it is the duty of the husband to provide subsistence for his wife and to furnish her with suitable clothes and ornaments. If he fails to do so, he is liable to pay debts contracted by her for necessaries; but it appears that this law would not be applicable where she has sufficient means of her own. No authority has been found for saying that, where the wife has maintained herself, she can sue her husband for maintenance for the period during which she has done so. A wife married according to Burmese rights and customs claimed from her husband, in a Court in British Burma, a certain sum for her expenses of necessaries and living for a past period during which she had maintained herself. Held that this was a question "regarding marriage" within the meaning of the Burma Courts Act, XVII of 1875, s. 4, and that, therefore, the Buddhist law formed the rule of decision. The law, as stated above, was accordingly applicable. Semble—That if this had been a case in which, by the above Act, a Court would have had to act according to the rule of justice, equity, and good conscience, there would have been no ground for

BURMESE LAW—DIVORCE.

——— Burman Buddhists, Law as to Divorce among—Husband and wife—Buddhist Law—Dhammathats, Authority of—Menu Kyay, Authority of—Desertion—Procedure.—In a suit for divorce instituted by a Burman husband on the ground that his wife had deserted him for no reason whatever, and had been living separate for the past eight months, refusing to resume cohabitation with him (there being no charge against the wife of misconduct affecting morality or of any bad habits), the wife pleaded in defence that the above ground was, under Buddhist Law, no ground for a divorce, and further pleaded the conduct of the petitioner as a justification for her refusal to cohabit with him. No division of property had taken place between husband and wife. Held, upon a reference to the High Court, that upon the law as administered among Buddhists the petitioner was not entitled to a divorce. If the plaintiff in a suit for divorce governed by the above law establishes any of the grounds which the Dhammathats recognize as good grounds for a divorce, he will be entitled to a divorce. The Dhammathats contemplate grounds justifying a divorce other than those mentioned in the judgment of the Special Court in Nga Nwe v. Mi Su Ma, viz., other than matricide, parricide, killing, stealing, shedding the blood of a Buddha, rahan, heresy, and adultery. A desertion, properly so-called, by the wife is a good ground for divorce by the husband, provided that during the period of one year prescribed by the Menu Kyay (bk. v, ch. 17) the husband has not supplied anything to the wife. Suits for divorce between Burman Buddhists, being suits of a civil nature not governed by the Indian Divorce Act, should be commenced by a plaint and not by a petition. thereby; and if any dispute shall arise touching the amount or apportionment of such compensation, the same shall be settled in the manner hereinafter provided for the settlement of disputes respecting damages and expenses." S. 229 provides that "in all cases where any damages, costs, or expenses are by this Act directed to be paid, the amount of the same, in case of dispute, shall be ascertained and determined by a Judge of the Calcutta Court of Small Causes." S. 226 provides that a month's notice shall be given before any action is brought under the Act against the Justices. By Act V of 1857 the Oriental Gas Company was empowered to lay down pipes and execute other necessary works for the supply of gas to Calcutta. In an application by the Company for a writ of mandamus to compel the Justices to join with the Company in referring to a Judge of the Small Cause Court to ascertain the amount payable to the Company as compensation for damage alleged to have been occasioned to their pipes, etc., by the drainage works of the Justices, an affidavit was filed, in which the Company's manager stated specifically the loss that had been occasioned, and that he had, on personal inspection, satisfied himself that the loss was occasioned by the negligent execution of the drainage works of the Justices. The affidavit on behalf of the Justices stated that, "in carrying out such drainage works, the Justices, or their contractors, agents, or servants, have not damaged the pipes, etc., of the Company, and that the Justices deny that they are in any manner liable for the damage in respect of which compensation is sought by the Company, or that they have done or caused any damage to the Company." Held (per PHEAR, J.), on the facts, that the Justices' works had caused damage to the Company's main and pipes. Held, also, that the compensation-clause of s. 151, Bengal Act VI of 1863, makes the Justices liable to compensate owners of land, or of any interest in land through which the drainage works are authorized to be carried, for any damage caused by any proceedings in such works. It applies to cases where the works have been done with due care and skill, and where but for the Act there would have been a right of action against the Justices. Held, also, that the denial of liability by the Justices was simply a general denial that any damage had been done to the Company; the question, therefore, between the parties resolved itself into a dispute as to the amount of damage which, by s. 151, must be settled in the manner provided by s. 229. Hence the Company was entitled to a writ of mandamus. Held, also, that s. 226 applies to proceedings dehors the Act, and not to proceedings taken to enforce compliance with the provisions of the Act. of Justices—Procedure.—The Chairman of the Justices of Calcutta, on the complaint of the Health Officer, issued a warrant for the seizure of certain articles of food, and without notice to the owners, or reducing the proceedings to writing, condemned them as unfit for use. In support of a rule nisi for a certiorari for bringing up the order that it might be quashed, it was argued that the Chairman had not, as such, jurisdiction to make the order; and that it was invalid, as notice had not been given, and the proceedings had not been reduced to writing. Cause was shown that the description of the Chairman was immaterial, as he was also a Justice of the Peace, and that such summary proceedings were necessary for the public safety. Held that the Act does not empower the Chairman of the Justices, as such, to issue a warrant under the 200th section; that such a warrant must show, on the fact of it, that the Justice issuing it had jurisdiction; that the application under s. 200 must be reduced to writing; that the evidence taken therefrom must be recorded; and that notice must be given to the party proceeded against. The case was subsequently heard by B, and it was shown that notice of the assessment under class II, sch. 3, had been duly served on A, and that, though he then denied his liability to take out any license, and stated that he carried on no business as alleged, he had not appealed against the assessment under s. 79. It was further shown that the assessment had been confirmed by the Chairman of the Corporation, but that the amount had not been paid. A thereupon tendered evidence to show that he was not liable to take out any license; but B refused to hear such evidence, and, convicting A, sentenced him to pay a fine. On an application, under the above circumstances, to the High Court under s. 147, Act X of 1875,—Held that the finality of the decision of the Chairman referred to in s. 79 has only reference to the class under which a particular person, who is admittedly bound to take out a license under s. 75, should be assessed, and not to the case where the liability to take out a license at all is denied, this being a question which can only be determined judicially after taking evidence by a competent Court in a prosecution under s. 77, and that, therefore, the refusal of B to hear the evidence tendered by A on this point was illegal. On the 15th December 1888 the plaintiff served the defendants with a fresh notice, and on the 15th March 1889 instituted the present suit. It appeared from the plaintiff's evidence that in the beginning of December 1888 the house had been reduced to such a condition that it was incapable of sustaining further damage. Held that the right to sue accrued to the plaintiff upon the happening of damage by reason of the subsidence arising from the defendants' act; that the plaintiff had not shown that a right to sue upon which the suit could be maintained had accrued within three months before the institution of the suit as required by s. 357 of the Municipal Act (Bengal Act IV of 1876), and within the terms of the notice of the 15th December; and that the suit was therefore barred. Darley Main Colliery Co. v. *Mitchell, L. Where therefore, before the passing of Act II of 1888, and whilst Act IV of 1876 was in force, the municipality took measures under the latter Act to cleanse basti land which was in an insanitary state, and notwithstanding the passing of Act II of 1888, which provided totally different preliminaries and procedure for the purpose, continued the improvements practically under the Act of 1876,—Held that, even if the proceedings could be considered, under s. 2 of Act II of 1888, to have been commenced under the new Act, the action of the municipality amounted to trespass, for which they were liable in damages to the owner of the land. The Chairman has no power to waive this rule. Where there is a primâ facie compliance with s. 31 of the Act, the Chairman has no power to go further and determine questions affecting the status of persons claiming to be candidates. The Chairman can only revise the original list of voters in the manner laid down by s. 22, or on applications made under s. 21, or in pursuance of an order from the Presidency Magistrate under s. 23. The issue of a supplementary list of voters is not sanctioned by the Act. A definition of the term "elector" with necessary qualifications is given in s. 8 of the Act. The land was subsequently resumed by the civil authorities, and, the land being within municipal limits, the ground-rents on it were assigned to the municipality. The Municipal Committee having demanded ground-rent in respect of the buildings erected on such land under such grant from the representative in title of the original grantee, and the latter having refused to pay the same or to vacate the land, the Secretary of State for India in Council sued him in the Civil Court for a declaration of proprietary right to the land, for its assessment to ground-rent, and, in the event of the refusal of the defendant to pay such rent, when fixed, for his ejectment therefrom, and for mesne profits of the land for six years. The cause of action was stated in the plaint to be the refusal of the defendant to pay ground-rent or to accept a lease or to surrender the land, after a notice to that effect had been issued to him by the Municipal Committee as the plaintiff's agents. Held that the Municipal Committee were the plaintiff's duly authorized agents to lease and obtain rent for the land occupied by the defendant's buildings with their compounds; that such notice was properly issued in that character on behalf of the plaintiff; and that the defendant's subsequent refusal to pay rent, or to accept a lease or evacuate the premises, amounted to a sufficient denial of the plaintiff's title to afford him a good cause of action; that, assuming that no agreement to pay rent existed, the plaintiff was entitled to demand and recover reasonable compensation for the use and occupation of the land by the defendant; that the suit was maintainable in the Civil Court, and it had power to grant the plaintiff the reliefs sought; that by the conditions of the grant by the military authorities the plaintiff was not disqualified from demanding ground-rent for the land before he had paid the defendant the value of the buildings, but that, looking to those conditions, it would not be fair or equitable to grant the plaintiff a decree, pure and simple, for the ejectment of the defendant, but he should be put under the condition that, if in case of the defendant's refusal to pay the rent fixed he desired to eject him, the value of the buildings as cantonment residences must first be determined and, when determined, must be tendered to the defendant, and, if the latter refused to accept it, the plaintiff would then be entitled to eject him. 4. ——— Delivery of goods carried by sea—Landing goods—Custom of port of Bombay—Possession of goods.—A carrier by sea is obliged to make an actual delivery of goods carried by him to the consignee, but such primâ facie obligation may be affected by the custom of the port where the goods are to be delivered. Neither by the custom of the port of Bombay nor by the provisions of the Customs Act is the master of a ship bound to wait fifteen days before commencing to land his cargo; but within a reasonable time after the arrival of his ship—48 hours in the case of a sailing vessel, and somewhat less in the case of a steamer—he is at liberty to land goods if the consignee has not sent boats for them; and such landing is not unlawful, nor a breach of contract as carrier on the part of the master. The landing of the goods under the above circumstances and setting them apart for the consignee do not constitute a delivery of them to the consignee; but such goods, after being so landed, continue in the possession of the master as carrier. Course of legislation with reference to the landing of goods on the custom-house wharf reviewed. Quære—Whether, under the special circumstances of this case, the goods, when so landed, remained in the custody of the master in his capacity of common carrier or as a warehouseman? He is to be regarded as a bailee for hire, and the fact that he does not deliver the baggage at the end of the journey should be accepted as primâ facie proof that the loss has been occasioned by negligence for which he is responsible, and consequently the onus of proof lies on him that reasonable care was exercised by him. 8. ——— Passenger's luggage, Loss of—Negligence—Conditions indorsed on ticket—Foreign Steam-ship Company—Contract Act, s. 151.—In a suit for damages for loss of passenger's luggage by the wreck of a ship belonging to a foreign company, it appeared that the plaintiff had received a ticket in the French language, which on its face stated that it ought to be signed by the passenger, and that it was issued subject to certain conditions on the back. These conditions, among other things, stated that the company would not be responsible for loss or damage arising from accidents or risks of the sea; that the ticket was delivered subject to the conditions that certain articles of a specified nature should be made the subject of a special declaration, in default of which the company would not be liable; that the company would not be answerable for unregistered luggage; and that luggage might be insured at any of the company's offices. It was not stated where registration of luggage might be effected. The ticket was not signed by the plaintiff. The plaintiff alleged that he did not understand the French language, and that the conditions had not been explained to him by any person. Held that the company being a foreign company were not common carriers; that the plaintiff was bound by the clauses and conditions on the back of the passage-ticket; that none of the conditions had the effect of relieving the company from the consequences of their own negligence; that, in order to establish a defence upon the ground that the plaintiff's luggage was not registered, it was necessary for the defendants to prove, not only that the plaintiff was bound by the conditions, but also that they were ready and willing to register the plaintiff's luggage, and that the plaintiff did not in fact register it; that as the contract was made in Calcutta, the defendants were bound by the provisions of s. 151 of the Indian Contract Act. The goods were short delivered, and the plaintiff brought a suit to recover the value. Held per GARTH, C.J., PRINSEP, J., and WILSON, J., that the Railway Company could not be held liable to account to the consignee for any loss from any cause whatever during the whole time that the goods were under their charge, inasmuch as the plaintiff had entered into a special contract to hold them harmless in accordance with s. 10 of Act IV of 1879. Held per O'KINEALY, J., that it was doubtful whether ss. 151 and 161 of the Contract Act applied to carriers by rail; but even assuming that these sections did not apply, the Railway Company would be in the position of carriers before the passing of the Carriers Act, and were entitled to protect themselves from liability by special contract. The plaintiffs entrusted to the defendants, who were common carriers under the Carriers Act, III of 1865, certain goods which were lost in the course of their carriage on one of the defendants' steamers. On the facts it was found that the defendants took as much care of the goods as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances take of his own goods of the same bulk, quality, and value as the goods bailed; and that the loss was not occasioned by the act of God or the Queen's enemies. There was no special contract of the nature provided for by s. 6, Act III of 1865. Held that ss. 151, 152 of the Contract Act did not apply; and that the defendants were liable for the loss of the goods. The goods were received for carriage by the defendants under conditions printed on the back of "forwarding note" signed by the plaintiff, by one of which conditions the defendants protected themselves from liability against accident of certain particular kinds, and "from any accident, loss, or damage resulting from negligence, etc." Held that the loss was not occasioned by the negligence of the defendants; that the forwarding note "was a special contract" within the meaning of the Carriers Act; that the clause purporting to protect the defendants from negligence was bad as being in contravention of the Carriers Act; but that, nevertheless, the contract was not thereby rendered wholly bad, but was divisible, being good so far as it provided that the defendants were not to be liable for loss by accident, but bad so far as it provided that they should not be liable for negligence. His responsibility to the owner does not originate in contract, but is cast upon him by reason of his exercising this public employment for reward. His liability as an insurer is an incident of the contract between him and the owner not inconsistent with the provisions of the Contract Act; and the Law of Carriers partly written and partly unwritten remained as before that Act. The Railway Acts of 1879 and 1890 reduced the responsibility of carriers by railway to that of bailees under the Contract Act, but this does not affect the construction of the law relating to common carriers and the Act of 1865. ——— ss. 6 and 8—Negligence—Accident, Loss by—Special contract—Suit for damages.—The plaintiffs delivered to the defendants certain goods for carriage to Calcutta in a flat belonging to the defendants. The goods were carried under the terms of a special contract or "forwarding note," signed by the shipper. One of the conditions of the forwarding note was as follows:—"The Company will not be under any liability for damages or compensation in respect of loss of, or damage to, goods . . ., except such liability as they are or may be subject to under the provisions of any law for the time being in force or of any contract other than this for the time being in existence between the Company and the shipper." While on board the defendants' flat, the goods were destroyed by fire. At the trial of the case, the defendants gave evidence showing the state of things before the fire occurred, the circumstances leading to the discovery of the fire (but not the cause or origin of it), and the measures taken to extinguish the fire. Held that the occurrence of a fire, under the circumstances disclosed in the case, without any explanation as to the origin of it, was of itself evidence of negligence. Held, also, reversing the decision of SALE, J., that the defendants had not discharged the onus cast upon them by law of showing that there was no negligence. Central Cachar Tea Company v. *Rivers Steam Navigation Company, I. L. The words of the section are imperative, and not permissive. The use of the words "may appoint" in this section does not imply that the District Judge has any discretion in a proper case to appoint or not to appoint an administrator. has been determined" between the rival claimants who is the heir of the deceased; but, to give full effect to the object of the Regulation, the word "determined" must be understood "finally determined." Where the Judge considered that he was bound to make an order directing administrators appointed under Regulation VIII of 1827 to make over the property of the deceased to one of the rival claimants who was judicially declared to be the heir of the deceased:—Held that, so long as the party against whom the decision in the matter of the rival claims was given had a right of appeal, the order of the Judge was one which he could not make under the Regulation, and that in exercising his jurisdiction under the Regulation he had exercised it illegally, and, that being so, the High Court had power, under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, to interfere in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction. 10. ——— Certificate under Act XXVII of 1860—Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827, s. 9—Jurisdiction to grant certificate of administration—Foreigners residing abroad.—Under s. 3 of Act XXVII of 1860, a certificate can be granted only for the estate of a British subject either resident within the district where the certificate is sought, or else having no fixed place of residence. The Act does not make provision for administration of the effects of a foreigner domiciled abroad. While Act XXVII of 1860 has regard to the person, Regulation VIII of 1827, on the other hand, looks simply to the locality of the assets as the ground of the Court's jurisdiction to grant a certificate of administration. The intention of s. 9 seems to be that when there are assets within a zilla, and the circumstances exist which are specified in the section, a certificate of administration may be granted. The authority given under s. 9 must be understood to be the same as under s. 7. B, a sardar of Baroda, residing within the Gaikwar's territory, died there, leaving considerable property in the district of Surat. On his death, L, the Assistant Collector of Surat, was appointed administrator of B's estate, under s. 9 of Regulation VIII of 1827. Shortly after his appointment as administrator, L went to England on furlough. During his absence, the plaintiffs sued, as heirs of B, to recover the balance of principal and interest due on a bond executed by the defendants in favour of B. Held that the plaintiffs were incompetent to sue. L having been appointed administrator of B's estate, and never having been relieved of his office as administrator by the Court, as contemplated by s. 9 of Regulation VIII of 1827, his status still subsisted, and while it subsisted, no one else could represent the estate. The appointment of an administrator excludes other representatives so long as it endures. IBRAHIM ALIKHAN v. ZIAULNISSA LADLI BEGAM [I. L. R., 12 Bom., 150

11. ——— Act XIX of 1841—Summary procedure—Act XXVII of 1860.—A (a Hindu) died intestate in December 1865, leaving his widow in possession of his property, moveable and immoveable. The descent of A's property was admittedly governed by the law of the Mitakshara. On the 19th January 1866, A's nephew presented a petition to the Zillah Court, under Act XIX of 1841, denying the title of the widow. Upon this alone the Judge directed the widow to come in and show cause, which she did on the 2nd February following. A daughter of A on the 19th March presented a petition in opposition to the nephew's claim for possession. The nephew filed a reply. In the meantime, the widow applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, which was opposed by both nephew and daughter. The nephew also filed a cross-petition under Act XXVII of 1860. All these petitions came on by consent together for adjudication on a state of facts admitted by all parties through their pleaders, who also, by consent between themselves, submitted their view of the question of law to be decided on the Acts of 1841 and 1860. The questions so submitted were—(1) Did it appear on the evidence that there was a separation between A and his nephew according to the Mitakshara doctrine? (2) If the evidence per se established a legal separation, was such separation negatived by certain admissions of A? The Judge refused the application of the widow under Act XXVII of 1860, and granted possession to the nephew under Act XIX of 1841. The nephew was a man of substance, and able to bring a regular suit, and there was no evidence of possession by force or fraud on the part of the widow, the only question being her right according to the Mitakshara law. Held that the Judge was in error in proceeding summarily under Act XIX of 1841 on the declaration of the applicant alone and without other enquiry, but that this defect was cured by the widow's appearing. That the Judge ought not to have tried the cases under Act XIX of 1841 and Act XXVII of 1860 together and on the same issues; but the Judge having jurisdiction over the subject-matter and to frame the issues, his order was not open to appeal or review. But such certificate, or a probate, or letters of administration, must be produced by the person proceeding as representative before a decree or order can be passed, or process of execution issued for payment of the debt due, unless the Court should think that payment is withheld from fraudulent or vexatious motives, and not from any reasonable doubt as to the party entitled. Act XXVII of 1860.—The production of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is not a condition precedent to the institution of a suit by a person claiming to be the legal representative of a deceased creditor. It is only where there is a reasonable doubt as to the person entitled to the property claimed in the suit that such a certificate can be required. 57. ——— Consent decree.—The plaintiffs brought a suit to recover a certain sum of money due on a mortgage bond executed by defendant No. 1 in favour of their (the plaintiffs') deceased father by the sale of the mortgaged property, as well as from the defendants personally. Some time after the institution of the suit, the parties compromised the claim. The plaintiffs applied to the Court to pass a decree in terms of the compromise. The Subordinate Judge referred the question whether a certificate under Act VII of 1889 was necessary before he could pass a decree as applied for. Held that a certificate was necessary. S. 4 of Act VII of 1889 distinctly and peremptorily forbids any Court from passing a decree against a debtor of a deceased person for payment of his debt, except on production, by the person claiming, of probate or letters of administration. In 1874, the mortgagor resumed possession without discharging the mortgage-debt. The mortgagee having died, his sons, on 14th April 1888, filed the present suit on the mortgage, and prayed for a decree for foreclosure or sale. was dead, and no succession certificate or letters of administration had been obtained. The plaintiffs were the surviving partners and the undivided sons of the deceased partner. Held that a surviving partner can sue alone for the recovery of a partnership debt. Held, further, that such a suit may be maintained by a surviving partner jointly with the heir of the deceased partner, in which case a certificate of heirship will be necessary, unless it appears on the face of the documents sued on that the debt is a coparcenary debt. 68. ——— Landlord and tenant—Suit by surviving partners of firm for rent —Right of suit.—A certain firm mortgaged with possession its immoveable property to two other firms trading jointly, who let out the property to the mortgagor firm. Afterwards some of the partners of the mortgagee firms having died, the surviving partners and the sons of the deceased brought a suit against the mortgagor firm to recover rent which accrued due after the deaths of the deceased partners. The Judge held that the plaintiffs could not proceed with the suit without a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889). Held, reversing the order, that as the rent sued upon became due after the deaths of the deceased partners, it formed no part of their estates at the time of their respective deaths, and no certificate was, therefore, necessary under the Succession Certificate Act. 69. ——— Suit on mortgage-bond by heir—Suit continued by party substituted for plaintiff who has taken out certificate. —A mortgage-bond was executed by the defendant in favour of H, who died, leaving two sons, J and S, the elder of whom, J, took out a certificate to collect the debts of his father, and instituted a suit on the bond in which he asked both for sale of the mortgaged property and for a personal decree against the defendant. Whilst the suit was pending, J died, and S was allowed to be substituted in his place as plaintiff. A decree was made for sale of the property, but the personal relief was not granted, as it was held to be barred by lapse of time. Held that this was not "a decree against a debtor for payment of his debt" within the meaning of s. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889). Roghu Nath Saha v. Poresh Nath Pundari, I. L. R., 15 Calc., 54, and Kanchan Modi v. Baij Nath Singh, I. L. R., 19 Calc., 336, approved. This suit was therefore maintainable, notwithstanding that no certificate had been taken out by S. Semble—It is doubtful whether that Act would apply at all to the case of a person who has been substituted as plaintiff for one who, having taken out a certificate, has died pending the suit. (2), and therefore no certificate was necessary to enable his widow to sue Y. SUBBANNA v. MUNEKKA . . I. L. R., 18 Mad., 457

71. ——— Debt—Price fixed for goods sold.—Where the claim was for the refund of the price alleged to have been paid for goods sold, but not delivered, it was held to be not an unliquidated claim for damages, but a claim for a liquidated sum of money which in some way or other the defendant could be compelled to pay; it was therefore a debt, and the suit could not be brought without a certificate under s. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act. The plaintiff had neither letters of administration nor a succession certificate. Held that the plaintiff's claim, being unliquidated, was not a debt within the meaning of Succession Certificate Act, 1889, s. 4, sub-s. 1 (a). Penta Reddi v. *Auki Reddi, I. 74. ——— Collection of debt on succession—Certificate of heirship—Act XXVII of 1860, s. 2—Right of succeeding trustee to collect. —In a suit brought by a widow who had succeeded her husband as trustee of an endowment for a debt due thereto,—Held that she was not suing as being entitled to the effects of her deceased husband, or for payment of a debt due to the estate which had been his, but that she was suing as representing the endowment in the capacity of a trustee of its money. Accordingly, neither Act XXVII of 1860, s. 2, nor Act VII of 1889, s. 4, was applicable to her claim, and the fact of her not having obtained a certificate of heirship to her husband's estate did not disentitle her to a decree. The opposing parties set up a will of the deceased's father, under which a certain share of the testator's estate was given to the petitioner's husband, and in the event of his death without children to his mother, and after her death to his brother. Held that it was not necessary for the purpose of the application to decide on the validity or otherwise of the will, as the widow was entitled to a certificate in respect of her husband's property; and further that the will, which purported, in certain events, to give to the testator's widow that share of the property which he bequeathed to his son (the petitioner's husband), could not affect her claim to the certificate in respect of her husband's self-acquired property. They alleged that P had made a will appointing them trustees to collect his debts. B also applied for a certificate on the ground that she was P's heir. She disputed the genuineness of the alleged will. The District Judge rejected both the applications on the ground that the validity of the will could not be settled in a summary proceeding. On appeal the High Court remanded the matter for rehearing, holding that the District Judge had jurisdiction to decide upon the genuineness of the will. At the rehearing B withdrew her application, but the Judge held that, as K F and K A claimed a certificate as executors of the will and not as heirs, they should take out probate of the will. He, therefore, refused their application. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the duty of the District Judge in carrying out the remand order of the High Court was confined exclusively to determining whether the applicants or the heir was entitled to the certificate, and that he could not refuse the certificate simply because the applicants might have asked for probate, as the case did not fall under cl. 4 of s. 1 of Act VII of 1889. 157. ——— Question of validity of alleged adoption—Question of title.—A, alleging himself to be an adopted son, opposed the application for the grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to B, who, irrespective of the alleged adoption, would be the legal lineal heir of the deceased. The Court before whom the application was made refused the grant of the certificate on the ground that sufficient primâ facie evidence existed establishing the validity of the adoption. On appeal,—Held that the Appellate Court, concurring with the opinion expressed by the Court of first instance in respect of the factum of the adoption, would not be justified in setting aside the decision on the ground that such Court was wrong in entering into and deciding the question as to the validity of the adoption. On an application for the grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, which is opposed by a party who alleges he has a preferable title to it, the Court should adjudicate the question of title, with a view to determine which party has the preferential right to the certificate. The Judge declined to receive the whole of the evidence tendered, and to go into the question of title. On appeal the case was remanded to the Judge for determination of the question whether the deceased was a Sunni or a Shiah, and which of the parties had the preferential title to the certificate upon the entire evidence. Per GHOSE, J.—Where the question as to right to a certificate is between two parties, one of whom, according to certain given facts, would be the heir and the other a total stranger, those facts must be gone into and determined, although such procedure involve to a certain extent the trial of a question of title. 184. ———— Act XXVII of 1860, s. 6—Grant of certificate by District Court—Petition to High Court by objector for fresh certificate—Supersession of certificate granted by District Court.—S. 6 of Act XXVII of 1860 contemplates two different proceedings which may arise under different circumstances. One of these proceedings is an appeal, which has the effect of suspending the "granting," i.e., the issuing of the certificate; and the intention of the Legislature was that, upon an adverse order being made, the person objecting to it might thereupon appeal, and the effect of this would be to oblige the District Judge to hold his hand and not to issue the certificate until the decision of the appeal. The other proceeding is by way of petition to the High Court, after the certificate has been granted by the District Court, to grant a fresh certificate in supersession of the first; and the latter portion of s. 6 shows that the person who obtains the fresh certificate need not be the person who obtained the first, and there is nothing to limit the powers of the Court on petition to grant a fresh certificate to any person, including the person who opposed the granting of the original certificate who may prove himself entitled thereto, or to confine the exercise of such powers to cases where the first certificate was defective in form. Upon the remand the executors did not appear before the District Judge to contest M's application, and the District Judge granted him a certificate. Thereupon he applied for revocation of the certificate previously granted to the executors, and the executors in their turn applied for a revocation of the certificate granted to him. The District Judge revoked M's certificate on the ground that he had fraudulently concealed from the Court the previous grant of a certificate to the executors. Held on appeal by M that the District Judge had a right, under s. 18, cl. The object of that section was to limit the objections to a conviction to some substantial meritorious ground, such as want of jurisdiction or the like, and to prevent a conviction from being quashed on a mere error of form or of procedure. But the section did not give the High Court any right to interfere on the ground that the Magistrate had come to a wrong conclusion on the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused person. Act IX of 1880, s. 56.*—Bengal Act IX of 1880 contemplates the payment of the cesses by persons beneficially interested in the land in respect of which the cesses are levied. The words "owner and holder" in s. 56 of that Act are not limited to any one person, nor for the purposes of that section must the owner be in actual possession. The plaintiff, who was a patnidar of the defendants, having paid certain cesses in respect of what he described in his plaint to be "debutter lakhiraj lands" lying within the ambit of his patni, sued the defendant to recover the amount of such cesses. The defendant admitted that he was proprietor of the estate in which the lands were situated, but denied his liability for the cesses. Held that the defendant was not liable to pay the amount of the cesses, but that the person liable was the idol through its shebait, or some person in receipt of the rents and profits of the land, or some person in actual possession of the land in occupation of it. DAMODAR GORDHAN v. GANESH DEORAM . 10 Bom., 37

Held, on appeal to the Privy Council, as follows:—Semble—That the general and abstract doctrine laid down by the High Court at Bombay, that it is beyond the power of the British Crown, without the consent of the Imperial Parliament, to make a cession of territory within the jurisdiction of any of the British Courts in India, in time of peace, to a foreign power, is erroneous. Where an objection is taken to the territorial jurisdiction of a British Court, on the ground that the territory over which the jurisdiction of the Court extended has been ceded to a foreign power, such a cession must be regularly proved, and cannot be established by uncertain inferences from equivocal acts. An agreement on the part of the Government of India purporting to transfer certain villages, forming part of a Regulation province within the Bombay Presidency, and subject to ordinary British jurisdiction, to the extraordinary jurisdiction of the Political Agency of a Native State, does not constitute a cession of territory. A re-arrangement of jurisdiction within British territory in India, by the exclusion of a certain district from the Regulations and Codes there in force, and from the jurisdiction of all the High Courts, with a view to the establishment therein of a native jurisdiction under British supervision and control, cannot be carried out except by legislation, under the provisions of the Imperial Statutes 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 85, s. 43; 24 & 25 Vic., c. 67, s. 22; and 24 & 25 Vic., c. 104, s. 9. The Governor General in Council being precluded by the Act 24 & 25 Vic., c. 67, s. 22, from legislating directly as to the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of its territory in India, or as to the allegiance of British subjects, cannot, by any legislative Act (e.g., by "The Evidence Act of 1872," s. 113) purporting to make a notification in the Government Gazette conclusive evidence of a cession of territory, exclude judicial enquiry as to the nature and lawfulness of that cession. Where the foundation of the jurisdiction of a British Court over the subject-matter of a suit and the parties thereto is territorial, and the territory by a valid cession ceases to be British, the jurisdiction of the Court can no longer be exercised, whatever be the stage or condition of the litigation at the time of such cession. 1. ——— Maintenance—Void agreement—Alienation by Hindu widow—Waste.—A Hindu widow, as the heiress of her husband, sued his four surviving brothers, who retained the enjoyment of the whole joint estate, for the recovery of her share. While the suit was pending, on the 24th April 1859, she entered into an agreement with the defendant G, by which, after reciting the nature of her claim, and stating that she was too poor to prosecute it, she assigned to him all she might be entitled to receive from the joint estate in right of her deceased husband, together with all interest and accumulations thereon, and all advantage to be derived from the suit about to be instituted by the defendant G, and she appointed him her attorney to institute and carry on any suit in her name for recovering her right and share in the property; it being agreed that he should retain one moiety of what might be recovered absolutely for his own benefit as remuneration, and out of the other moiety should repay himself such sums as he might from time to time have advanced or paid for her maintenance, with interest at 12 per cent. per annum, and also all such sums and costs as he might from time to time have advanced or been put to in carrying on the suits, with interest at 12 per cent. per annum, and should pay over the residue to the widow herself. Subsequently that suit was withdrawn. In May 1859, the widow, by G, filed a fresh bill against her husband's surviving brothers for recovery of her husband's share in the estate together with accumulations, and in August 1861 obtained a decree for a large sum of money out of the joint estate—"the whole to be enjoyed by her as a Hindu widow in the manner prescribed by Hindu law." By a deed dated November 14th, 1860, G assigned his interest under the assignment of April 1859 to H S, the defendant. In a suit brought on the 22nd February 1866 by the reversionary heirs of the husband, in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen of Hooghly, against the widow, G, and H S, the last one of whom alone resided in Calcutta, which suit was on the 23rd of April 1866 removed into the High Court on the application of G and H S, it was prayed that the agreement of April 1859 and all sub-assignments that might have been made be set aside as void, and that the money should be paid into Court and kept there during the life of the widow defendant, for the benefit of the reversionary heirs, and in order to prevent waste. Held by PHEAR, J., the suit, being one to prevent contemplated waste, was not barred by lapse of time. The agreement of 4th April 1859 was void as being without definite consideration, and being in the nature of a gambling transaction, not valid against heirs under Hindu law; and it was also void, being of a champertous nature, and contrary to public policy. The law which forbids and avoids all acts contrary to public policy, and subversive of the general interests of society, is in force in this country. Independent of the Charter, there is a power inherent in any Court of Justice which receives its authority from the State to make the interests of private persons subordinate to those of the public, and to take care that where they are in conflict, the latter should prevail. Held on appeal by PEACOCK, C.J., and MACPHERSON, J., that the suit could be maintained for the relief sought, and for the protection of the property; that the deed of the 4th April 1859, so far as it related to the moiety of the property assigned to the defendant G absolutely, was not binding on the plaintiffs or on the persons who, upon the death of the widow, might succeed to the property of her deceased husband. Though not void on the ground of champerty, it was an unconscionable bargain, and a speculative, if not a gambling, contract, and there was no necessity for such an alienation by the widow. But so far as regards the assignment of the moiety as security for the advances and expenses which G or his assigns might reasonably and properly make or incur for the maintenance of the widow, for carrying on the necessary proceedings to enforce her rights, with 12 per cent. interest on such advances, it was not void, but created a charge upon that moiety, which was binding upon the reversionary heirs of the husband to the extent of such advances and expenses. There was legal necessity for such charge, and it affected the moiety both of principal and accumulations. Held by MACPHERSON, J., the agreement of April 1859 was void by English law as being a mere gambling transaction and contrary to public policy and illegal. 2. ——— Assignment of debutter land in consideration of defendant ejecting by suit, at his own cost, the Brahmins, etc.—A Hindu widow, together with the next heir, joined in assigning to the defendant a debutter estate, in consideration of the defendant conducting, at his own cost, proceedings for the ejection of Brahmins and Banias then in occupation as poojaries to conduct the worship of the idols; and upon the condition that he should thereafter conduct such worship, and out of the proceeds and offerings retain three-fourths for his own purposes and for hospitality, and pay the remaining fourth for the maintenance of the widow and the heir. Held that the assignment was valid, the purpose for which the lands were dedicated being provided for; and that, although the transaction amounted to champerty, that was no ground for treating it as invalid. An assignment between Hindus of property the subject-matter of litigation, on conditions which

In dealing with objections to their contracts, on the ground of maintenance and champerty, the Court must look to the general principles regarding public policy and the administration of justice upon which

that law at present rests. To constitute "maintenance," improper litigation must have been stirred up with a bad motive for purposes contrary to public policy and justice. "Champerty" is a species of "maintenance" and of the same character, but with the additional feature of a condition or bargain providing for a participation in the subject-matter of the litigation. Specific performance decreed of a lease, though the lease formed part of an arrangement whereby, as a consideration for the lease, the plaintiff was to lend the defendant money to enable him (inter alia) to commence proceedings against the then tenant of the subject-matter of the intended lease. advance of the sum of R5,000 (the receipt of R1,800 of which was by the instrument acknowledged) to be made by J to such attorney as he should select, before the 31st of December 1869, the defendants mortgaged everything which they might be entitled to recover by suit, the mortgage to be defeasible on payment of 50 per cent. of what they might recover by suit, and a further 50 per cent. upon all to which they might be entitled as the persons entitled to L's estate. They also covenanted to repay the money lent with interest. The present defendants succeeded in their suit against the Administrator General, and this suit was brought by J to recover a commission of 50 per cent. on the sum recovered, and the sums advanced, with interest. Defendants denied that plaintiff had fulfilled his part of the agreement, and alleged that in consequence of his neglecting to supply funds they had been compelled to borrow of a third party. They also pleaded that the agreement was void for champerty and maintenance. Held that by the law of England, which prevailed in the present suit, this contract was clearly void, being contrary to the plain provision of the common and statute law against maintenance, and that it was also void as being contrary to public policy. The Court further found that the plaintiff had failed to fulfil his part of the contract, but allowed him to recover the sum really advanced by him, viz., R2,200, with interest. 15. ——— Alienation by Hindu widow.—K D, a Hindu widow, having applied to H S to aid her in leaving the family dwelling-house of her late husband, G C C, where she alleged she was improperly treated and placed under restraint by the plaintiff, her husband's sole surviving brother, H S, at his own cost, enabled her to do so. She then applied to H S to advance funds for the payment of certain debts incurred by her in consequence of the plaintiff's refusal to pay her any portion of the family estate, to allow her a monthly sum for maintenance, and to manage and conduct for her a suit which she proposed to institute to establish her right to a portion of the joint estate; and H S consented to do so upon certain terms, which were embodied in a deed by which K D assigned to H S all her right, share, and interest as widow of G C C in the joint estate and in the accumulations thereof, and in the separate estate of G C C, and all benefit to be derived from the intended suit; on trust, first, to repay all the costs of the suit; secondly, to retain, by way of remuneration for managing the suit, one half of what might be recovered therein; and, thirdly, to hold the residue as security for repayment, with interest at 12 per cent., of the sums advanced by H S; the surplus, after satisfying all such sums, to be paid to K D. Then K D, with the aid and under the management of H S, brought a suit against the plaintiff and other members of the joint family of G C C for a declaration of her rights under the will of his father, R C, and for the administration of G C C's share of the joint estate. The result of this suit was that K D was (among other things) declared entitled as a Hindu widow to R1,01,302-14-10 in respect of the accumulations of the joint property, between the dates of R C's and G C C's deaths. The plaintiff paid the R1,01,302-14-10 into Court, under an order made in the suit. K D subsequently obtained an order, under which she took this sum out of Court, notwithstanding that the plaintiff applied for an injunction to restrain her taking it out. Upon her obtaining that order, the plaintiff, as immediate reversionary heir of G C C, instituted the present suit against K D and H S, to restrain K D from taking the R1,01,302-14-10 out of Court, and to compel her to bring back any portion thereof which she might have already received; and for a declaration that the assignment to H S created no valid charge thereon. Held (following the decision in the case of Grose v. Amritamayi Dasi, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 1, that the assignment to H S was not binding on the reversionary heirs of G C C, except as regards the charge on one moiety for expenses incurred and advances made by H S whether by way of maintenance or otherwise, with interest thereon at 12 per cent. and, in order to provide funds to carry on the litigation, executed an ikrarnama, whereby he purported to relinquish and convey to one K a moiety of his right, title, and interest in the property, in consideration of the sum of R50, K agreeing to take all proper steps and to defray all expenses necessary for the recovery of the property, which was valued in the ikrarnama at R75,000. K accordingly carried on the suit and incurred costs to the extent of R1,700, but the suit was ultimately dismissed. The property was afterwards taken possession of by the Court of Wards on behalf of one S, who claimed under an alleged adoption by one A, the person last in possession. Thereafter K sold his interest under the ikrarnama, which he valued at R2,18,000, to the plaintiff for the sum of R1,700. In a suit brought against the Court of Wards as representing S for the recovery of a moiety of the property or its value, in which N refused to join as plaintiff and was made a defendant,—Held that the suit was not maintainable; the conveyance by N to K did not operate as a present transfer of the property, but only as an agreement to transfer it on conditions which were never fulfilled; the plaintiff was not entitled to recover as against S, who was no party to the deed. Held, also, that the transaction was void as being contrary to public policy, and one to which effect ought not to be given by the Court. 18. ———— Bond executed by Hindu widows—Maintenance—Fraud—Undue influence and threats.—The three childless widows of a zamindar instituted a suit against the rightful heir to their husband's estate, in which they unsuccessfully disputed his legitimacy. Previously thereto they had obtained advances of money from the present plaintiff, and executed in his favour an agreement and a bond, whereby they secured to him the payment of large sums in case they recovered their husband's estate, and virtually gave to him the entire control of their suit. Subsequently they agreed with the rightful heir to compromise the suit, which compromise, however, was never acted upon, partly owing, it was alleged, to the subsequent conduct of the heir. At the date of the compromise, the heir, who had just attained his majority, and was without proper counsel or assistance, and acted under threats from the plaintiff, a powerful and wealthy banker, that he would carry on the litigation against him per fas aut nefas, was induced, contrary to his own judgment and sense of right, and without any evidence that the sum claimed was really due to the plaintiff, to execute a bond in his favour, whereby he bound himself to pay a large sum of money claimed by the plaintiff as being due from the widows; the plaintiff on his part agreeing that he would treat such payment as a satisfaction of his claim against the widows, but meanwhile that he would retain the securities which he held from them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the heir to enforce the last-mentioned bond,—Held that the bond was wholly invalid and fraudulent as against the defendant, and that, as there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant independently of the bond, it could not stand as a security for anything which might be justly due from the widows. Quære—Whether the plaintiff could have recovered from the widows, if they had been successful against the heir, the large sums of money secured by their bond and agreement. The law of champerty and maintenance is not the same in India as in England. The English statute with regard to champerty is not applicable in the mofussil in India. The Indian Courts in every transaction must decide upon the fact whether it is merely the acquisition of an interest in the subject of litigation bonâ fide entered into, or whether it is an unfair or illegitimate transaction got up for the purpose merely of spoil, or of litigation, disturbing the peace of families, and carried on from a corrupt or other improper motive. 19. ———— Agreement against public policy—Maintenance—Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—Practice—Security for costs by a person not a party to the suit.—In a deed, dated 17th July 1867, it was recited that A was entitled to certain property then in possession of D and E, and that A, and B her husband, "having no funds to adopt or to commence legal proceedings" for the recovery of the property, had applied to C to assist them in commencing and conducting the necessary suits and to make all the requisite disbursements connected therewith until their final termination, and that C had agreed to do so; and also, as A and B had "no means whatever" to pay to them or the survivor R150 a month until the final termination of the litigation. Then followed the appointment by A and B of C to be their attorney to institute and prosecute all necessary suits, to sign all papers and documents, to receive all moneys and take possession of all lands, etc., to which A and B might become entitled under any decree or order that might be made, and to appoint attorneys and vakils. C then covenanted to institute and prosecute the necessary suits, and to make the necessary advances and payments and to pay R150 a month to A and B. Then it was agreed that out of the moneys or proceeds of lands, etc., recovered, C should, in the first place, retain and reimburse himself all advances and payments made by him with interest thereon at 12 per cent.; in the second place, retain to himself, by way of remuneration for his trouble and risk, one-third of the nett proceeds of the litigation; and, in the third place, make over the remaining two-thirds to A and B. A and B covenanted not to intermeddle with C in prosecuting the litigation, that they would render him all possible assistance, and that the power-of-attorney given by them to C should be irrevocable so long as he prosecuted the litigation and paid the monthly allowance of R150. It was provided, however, that if B wished to devote all his time thereto, he might have the management of the litigation, but under the control of C; and that A and B might revoke the power-of-attorney on repayment to C of all money advanced by him with interest at 12 per cent. and the sum of R2,000 by way of liquidated damages. A power was also reserved to A and B to compromise, but only with the consent of C, unless the sum to be received on the compromise should exceed the total amount of C's advances with interest at 12 per cent. In pursuance of this agreement, a suit was instituted in the names of A and B against D and E to recover possession of the property. This suit was by the High Court decreed in the plaintiff's favour, but was on appeal dismissed by the Privy Council with costs. While the suit was in the Court of first instance, D and E applied to have C added as a party. This application was refused, and D and E did not appeal from that refusal. Pending the litigation, A and B brought a suit against D and E for wasilat, and obtained a decree. On the 21st September A and B executed a memorandum of agreement, whereby C purchased all their rights in the two suits brought by them against D and E. D and E now brought a suit against C, alleging that they had suffered loss and damage by the litigation instituted by A and B; that C was guilty of champerty and maintenance; that the litigation was commenced and continued maliciously by C in the names of persons who had no legal or equitable right, and without reasonable or probable cause; that the agreement of 17th July 1867 was illegal and contrary to public policy; that the litigation was carried on by C at his own expense and for his own benefit; and that C was the real mover in the proceedings, and illegally used the procedure of the Court to the damage and injury of the plaintiffs. Held, in the Court below and on appeal, that there was reasonable and probable cause for the institution of the wasilat suit brought by A and B against D and E. Held, by MACPHERSON, J., that the agreement of July 1867 was illegal and against public policy, as also were the subsequent institution and maintaining of the suit against D and E by C; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from C the loss they had sustained by reason of the suits which he (substantially only for his own benefit) had maintained against them. Held, on appeal (reversing the decision of the Court below), that the suit was not maintainable. The English statutes with regard to champerty and maintenance do not apply to India. In England, champerty and maintenance were offences punishable by the Common Law; and the ground on which an action is allowed in England,—viz., that C had been guilty of an offence by which the plaintiff had suffered damage,—does not exist in India. The only ground on which agreements which favour of champerty or maintenance are held to be void in this country is, that they are contrary to public policy. Assuming that the agreement of July 1867 was a valid one, and that C did thereby acquire an interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and supplied the means of carrying it on, such acts did not entitle the plaintiffs to maintain the present suit, or to recover against C the costs of the former suit. C ought to have been made a co-plaintiff with A and B in the former suit, or he ought to have been called upon to give security for the costs of that suit. CHUNDERKANT MOOKERJEE v. RAMCOOMAR KOONDOO

In the same case,—Held on appeal to the Privy Council, the English laws of maintenance and champerty are not of force as specific laws in India, either in the mofussil or in the presidency towns. The ground on which contracts of the nature of champerty and maintenance should be held by the Indian Courts to be invalid is that they are contrary to public policy. An agreement to supply funds to carry on a suit in consideration of having a share in the property if recovered is not necessarily opposed to public policy, since cases may easily be supposed in which it would be in furtherance of right and justice that a suitor who had a just title to property, and no means to support it, should be assisted in this way. But agreements purporting to be made to meet such cases, when found to be extortionate and unconscionable, so as to be inequitable, or to be entered into for improper objects, as for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring others by encouraging unrighteous suits, are contrary to public policy, and ought not to have effect given to them. Since by the law of India a champertous agreement does not constitute a punishable offence, an action in that country, founded on alleged champerty, to recover losses and costs incurred in litigation, cannot be sustained on the ground that a remedy by action accrues where an indictable offence has been committed. No action will lie for improperly putting the law in motion in the name of a third party, unless it is alleged and proved that it has been done maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause. In the absence of such proof, an action for losses and costs incurred in defending a suit will not lie as against a person who is alleged to have been a mover in that suit, and to have had an interest in it, but who had not been made a party to the record, since such a state of things creates no legal privity from which a promise can be implied on which an action on contract can be founded, nor does it, ex hypothesi, constitute a legal wrong. policy, or, merely on this ground, void. But in agreements of this kind the questions are (a) whether the agreement is extortionate and unconscionable, so as to be inequitable against the borrower; or (b) whether the agreement has been made not with the bonâ fide object of assisting a claim believed to be just and of obtaining reasonable compensation therefor, but for improper objects, as for the purpose of gambling in litigation, or of injuring others, so as to be, for these reasons, contrary to public policy. In either of these cases, effect is not to be given to the agreement. Here, upon the facts, the above case (b) did not arise, and this agreement was not contrary to public policy. But this agreement fell within case (a), and the judgment of the High Court was affirmed, that the agreement was so extortionate and unconscionable, in regard to the excess of the reward, that it was inequitable, and, therefore, not enforceable against the defendant. Ramcoomer Coondoo v. *Chunder Kanto Mookerjee, I. In 1878 the first plaintiff, G J, alleging that the said compromise had been fraudulently effected, and that the defendant, M K, at the time of the compromise, had been and was still possessed of ample property to pay off his liabilities, induced the liquidator of the company to assign to him the company's claim against M K, and brought this suit, praying that the compromise with P might be declared not binding, and that M K might be ordered to pay the plaintiff, as assignee of the N F Co., the sum of R1,61,500 with interest. Held that the assignment to the plaintiff, G J, of the claims of the N F Co. against M K was effected with a view to litigation, and that, under the circumstances, the suit was not maintainable. The agreement provided that V should defend the suit, but if the result of the suit should be to establish the plaintiff's right to seize the house in execution, then that H should be at liberty to cancel the contract of sale. Held that the agreement of 12th December amounted to an absolute sale by V to H of the equity of redemption of the house in question, and that it was not champertous. 27. ——— Maintenance—Gambling in litigation—Agreement opposed to public policy—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23.—The judgment of the Privy Council in Ramcoomer Coondoo v. Chunder Kanto Mookerjee, L. R., 4 I. A., 23 : I. L. R., 2 Calc., 233, shows that while the specific English law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India, and while fair agreements to supply funds to carry on litigation in consideration of having a share of the property if recovered should not be regarded as per se opposed to public policy, yet such agreements should be carefully watched, and if extortionate and unconscionable, or made not with the bonâ fide object of assisting, for a reasonable recompense, a claim believed to be just, but for the purpose of gambling in litigation, or of injuring or oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits, should be held contrary to public policy, and not enforced. For the purposes of meeting the expenses of an appeal to the High Court, the appellant, on the advice of his legal adviser, executed a bond for R25,000 in consideration of the obligee agreeing to defray such expenses. The obligor agreed to pay the R25,000 within one year from his recovering possession of the property in suit; and, at the request of the obligor's pleader, the obligee advanced R3,700, which was applied to the expenses of the appeal. The High Court dismissed the appeal; and in a deed executed by the obligor in favour of the obligee and others for the purpose of defraying the expenses of a further appeal to the Privy Council, he admitted his liability under the former bond. The Privy Council decreed his appeal, and he obtained possession of the property in suit, but declined to pay the R25,000, upon which the obligee sued upon the bond. It was found that, apart from the moneys borrowed by the obligor from time to time, he was without even the means of subsistence; that he executed the bond with his eyes open and perfectly understood his position and the effect of both the instruments executed by him; that no fraud or improper pressure appeared to have been applied to him; that his legal advisers had acted honestly and to the best of their ability in his interests; that there was nothing to show that, having regard to the risks of the litigation, he could have obtained the assistance necessary for the prosecution of his appeal on better terms than those contained in the bond; that without such assistance he could not have appealed to the High Court; and that the obligee gave him such assistance upon his application. Held, also, that the obligee could not, under the circumstances, have considered both that the obligor's claim was a just one and reasonably likely to succeed, and that the R25,000 was a reasonable recompense in the event of success for the advance of R3,700; and the bond was therefore a gambling in litigation, which it would be contrary to public policy to enforce. The Court gave the plaintiff a decree for the R3,700 actually advanced, with simple interest at 20 per cent. per annum from the date of the bond to the date of the decree, with costs in proportion, and interest at 6 per cent. per annum on the R3,700, interests and costs, from the date of the decree until payment. The defendant admitted the mortgage, but set up an unregistered bedavapatra (release) of the equity of redemption, dated 1865, alleged to have been passed to him by the father of the plaintiff's assignor for a consideration of R800. He also contended that the plaintiff's assignment was champertous, and made with the view of depriving him of the property. The Court of first instance held that the assignment was "a gambling transaction and entered into with the object of gaining the spoils of an unrighteous litigation, and null and void as opposed to public policy," and that the release set up by the defendant could not be given in proof for want of registration, and, therefore, rejected the plaintiff's claim. (a) GENERAL CASES.

1. ——— Act XIII of 1865, s. 3—Duty of committing Magistrate or Justice of the Peace.—A Justice of the Peace or Magistrate committing a prisoner for trial before the High Court was bound, under s. 3 of Act XIII of 1865, to frame and send up with the depositions a specific charge against the prisoner. REG. v. JEETARAM SHAW
[1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 404

2. ——— Discretion of Magistrate—Charge under Ch. XIV, Criminal Procedure Code, 1861.—The course taken by a Magistrate before preparing a charge under Ch. XIV of the Code of CHARGE—continued.

Criminal Procedure must depend upon the circumstances of each case, and the Magistrate should exercise his discretion in the matter. ANONYMOUS CASE

3. ——— Reference to section of Code under which charge is made—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, ss. 234, 237.—A charge should be so framed as to refer to the section of the Penal Code under which the offence charged is punishable, as required by ss. 234 and 237 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. QUEEN v. DURZOOLLA
[9 W. R., Cr., 33

4. ——— Sufficiency of charge.—One count charging each specific offence, and describing it with a reasonable degree of certainty, is sufficient. QUEEN v. BABOOLUN HIJRAH . 5 W. R., Cr., 7

5. ——— Several offences under same section—Amendment of charge.—Where several offences are charged under the same section, the committing Magistrate should frame the charge so as to contain a separate head for each offence. QUEEN v. KALARAM SINGH . . . 7 W. R., Cr., 8

6. ——— Indictment—Penal Code, s. 161.—An indictment will not be invalidated in consequence of the charge not notifying the specific section. Under s. 161, it is necessary to show that the offence, the instigation of which is the subject of the charge, has been committed. QUEEN v. NOTABUR NUNDY . . 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 43

7. ——— Specific allegation in charge of absence of exceptions in Penal Code—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 439.—MARKBY, J.—Although ss. 235 and 237 of Act XXV of 1861 have been repealed, it may still be inferred from illus. (a), s. 439 of the present Criminal Procedure Code, that it is unnecessary specifically to allege in a charge the absence of all general and some at least of the other exceptions mentioned in the Penal Code. The operation of the illustration, however, is strictly confined to the statement of the offence in the charge. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF SHIBO PROSAD PANDAH I. L. R., 4 Calc., 124: 3 C. L. 12. ——— Penal Code, s. 75—Trial of prisoner of offence under Ch. XII or XVII after previous conviction.—If a prisoner is to be tried for an offence punishable under s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code, a separate charge under that section must be framed and recorded. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. DORASAMI [I. L. R., 9 Mad., 284

13. ——— Form as to time and place of offence.—In a case in which the charge did not contain such particulars as to time and place as were reasonably sufficient to give notice to the accused of the matter with which he was charged, the accused was acquitted by the High Court. QUEEN v. UDIT SINGH . . . . . 25 W. R., Cr., 46

14. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 222, 223—Particulars to be inserted in charge.—A committing Magistrate is bound, under ss. 222 and 223 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), to insert in the heads of charge sufficient particulars of time, place, person, and circumstance, as will give each of the prisoners notice of the matter with which he is charged. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. FAKIRAPA [I. L. R., 15 Bom., 491

15. ——— Defect in charge—Omission of word "dishonestly" in charge and record of conviction.—The omission of the word "dishonestly," both in the charge and in the record of the conviction, is not a ground for reversal of conviction and sentence where an accused person has fully understood the nature of the offence with which he is charged, and had not been prejudiced by the omission. Conviction and sentence recorded by a Magistrate, and reversed by the Sessions Judge upon this ground, restored by the High Court, on appeal directed by Government under s. 272, Criminal Procedure Code. QUEEN v. RAKHMA . . . . . 10 Bom., 373

16. ——— Charge alleging previous conviction—Former sentence.—A charge alleging a previous conviction need not show the extent of the former punishment. Revised form of charge stated. ANONYMOUS . . . . 4 Mad., Ap., 11

17. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 439.—Under s. 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, if it is intended to prove a previous conviction against an accused person for the purpose of enhancing the punishment, it is necessary to state the fact of that previous punishment in the charge. If it is omitted, it may be added to the charge at any time previous to the sentence being passed, but not after. QUEEN v. RAJCOOMAR BOSE . . . . . 19 W. R., Cr., 41

18. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1872, s. 439.—The fact of previous convictions should, under Act X of 1872, s. 439, be stated in the charge when it is intended to prove them for the purpose of enhancing punishment. QUEEN v. ESAN CHUNDER DEY . . . . 21 W. R., Cr., 40

19. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 439.—Under s. 439, Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, a charge of having committed the offence after a previous conviction therefor should contain an allegation that the offence has been committed after a previous conviction. A statement in a Court that at the time when the prisoner committed the offence (no offence being specifically mentioned in the Court) he had been previously convicted of offences punishable under Ch. XVII of the Penal Code is not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of s. 439. QUEEN v. JAKIR . 22 W. R., Cr., 39

(b) SPECIAL CASES.

20. ——— Cheating—Form of indictment.—In an indictment for cheating under the Penal Code, it is necessary to state that the property was the property of the party defrauded. QUEEN v. WILLANS . 1 Mad., 31: 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 94

21. ——— Act XVIII of 1862, s. 41—Defect in charge.—An indictment defective in not stating that the property obtained was the property of the person defrauded is defective for uncertainty, and must be objected to, if at all, before the jury is sworn. QUEEN v. WILLANS [1 Mad., 31: 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 94

22. ——— Criminal breach of trust—Criminal Procedure Code, 1869, s. 242—Offence under Bom. Reg. XVII of 1827, s. 16.—In order to make an alternative charge of two or more offences regular under s. 242 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the offences specified in such alternative charge must all be offences against the Penal Code. Therefore, a charge against a prisoner either of "criminal breach of trust" under s. 409 of the Penal Code or of "undue exaction of money" under s. 16 of Regulation XVII of 1827 is irregular. 26. ——— Criminal misappropriation—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 234—Charge and trial for criminal misappropriation in respect of a general deficiency in accounts without proof of individual defalcations.—Held that, having regard to s. 234, Criminal Procedure Code, an accused person cannot be charged with, and tried at the same time for, criminal misappropriation of a sum which is not the subject of a single act of misappropriation, but represents a general deficiency, consisting of a lengthened series of separate defalcations. Where there have been separate acts of misappropriation, the accused cannot be tried at the same time for more than three of such acts committed within a year; but when it may be properly inferred from the evidence that there has been but one act of misappropriation, although the sum misappropriated may represent the aggregate of sums received by the accused at different times, he may be charged and tried at one trial in respect of the aggregate sum, or if there be three such acts occurring within a year, then in respect of all of them. Rex v. *Grove, 1 Moo. person who is charged, and no evidence which does not profess to give the exact words can alone be a safe foundation for a conviction. QUEEN v. MUNGUL DOSS . . . . . 23 W. R., Cr., 28

37. ———— False verification of plaint—Separate charges.—A person who is called upon to answer to a charge of giving false evidence should know exactly what is the false evidence imputed to him. A charge "that he on or about the 15th April 1871 gave false evidence" is not sufficiently specific. Although the verification of plaints containing false statements is punishable according to the provisions of the law for the time being in force for the punishment of giving or fabricating false evidence, still it is not quite the same thing as giving false evidence. Three separate offences should not be lumped together in a single charge, but each offence should form a separate head of charge, with reference to which there should be a distinct finding and a distinct sentence. QUEEN v. SHEO CHURUN [3 N. W., 314

38. ———— Substance of evidence—Penal Code, s. 193.—The alleged false evidence and not its assumed substance and import should be set forth in a charge under s. 193 of the Penal Code. QUEEN v. JAMURHA . 7 N. W., 137

40. ———— Penal Code, s. 193.—Preciseness of charge.—In framing a charge for giving false evidence under s. 193 of the Penal Code, the charge should be precise; and where the accused is charged with giving false evidence on three different occasions, each occasion should form the subject of a distinct head in the charge. 41. ———— Several charges—Separate assertion of falseness.—Charges of perjury should contain a distinct assertion with regard to each statement intended to be characterised as perjury: that it was made; that it is untrue in fact; that the accused knew it to be so when he made it; and the investigation of the Court should be directed to each of those points singly. 42. ———— Falsification of documents—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 477A—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 222 (2), 234—Criminal breach of trust by public servant—Acquittal—Framing new charge—General falsification of accounts for a period extending over two years.—The alteration in the law by s. 222 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) does not apply to a charge under s. 477A of the Penal Code (falsification of accounts). It applies only to criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MATI LAL LAHIRI [I. L. R., 26 Calc., 560

QUEEN v. MOHESH CHUNDER ACHARJEE [6 W. R., Cr., 20

44. ———— Omission to specify precise offence—Penal Code, s. 467.—The prisoner was charged, under s. 471 of the Penal Code, with fraudulently using as genuine a forged document, and, having been tried before a Sessions Judge and jury, was convicted of that offence. The Sessions Judge, considering the forged document to be of the nature of those specified in s. 467, sentenced the prisoner to ten years' transportation. On appeal, the High Court held that the charge should have distinctly set forth the offence as that of using a forged document of the nature of those specified in s. 467, and that, that not having been done, the trial by jury was illegal. The conviction and sentence were therefore annulled, and it was directed that the prisoner should be retried. REG. v. GANGARAM MALJI . . . . . 6 Bom., Cr., 43

47. ———— Illegal gratification—Vagueness of charge.—A charge of attempting to obtain a gratification as a reward for influencing a public servant in exercise of his public functions is illegal as disclosing no legal offence, when it omits to state the person or persons for whom the gratification was obtained, or the public servant to be influenced in the exercise of his public functions. QUEEN v. SETULCHUNDER BAGCHEE . . 3 W. R., Cr., 69

51. ——— Murder—Penal Code, s. 302—Objections to charge.—A charge under s. 302 of the Penal Code need not set out at length all the facts necessary to constitute the offence of murder, and negative all the exceptions contained in s. 300, which defines the crime of murder. Technical objections to criminal charges, particularly on the ground of the want of a sufficient specification of details, should be taken before the conclusion of the trial, when the Judge may, if necessary, amend the charge, and not afterwards, unless it appear that some failure of justice has been caused by the irregularity complained of. With reference to the second clause, it should have run "likely to cause the death of A, the person to whom the harm was caused." With reference to the third clause, it should have said "ordinary course of nature." EMPRESS v. SAMIRUDDIN [I. L. R., 8 Calc., 211 : 10 C. L. R., 11

56. ——— Defect in charge—Unlawful assembly—Common object, Effect of not stating in charge—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 147.—Where certain accused persons were convicted of rioting, and it appeared that the charge did not specify any common object, and that neither the judgment of the Original Court nor that of the Sessions Judge in appeal found what was the common object which made the assembly of which the prisoners were members an unlawful one:—Held that these defects did not vitiate the proceedings, there being ample evidence on the record to prove what the common object of the assembly was, and to justify the conviction for the offence of which the lower Courts had found the accused guilty. BASIR-ADDI v. QUEEN-EMPRESS . I. L. R., 21 Calc., 827

57. ——— Alternative charge—Common object—Unlawful assembly—Criminal Procedure Code (1882), s. 236.—Fourteen accused were charged with rioting armed with deadly weapons, and with murder and causing grievous hurt during such riot. The common object alleged by the prosecution was to compel the payment of certain money by one of the persons of the opposite party. Some of the accused, who admitted their presence at the scene of the occurrence, stated that they had been attacked on account of an allegation being made that one of the opposite party had enticed away another's wife, and that they had merely acted in self-defence. On the close of the case for the prosecution, the Sessions Judge, considering that possibly the common object alleged by the prosecution might be considered not to have been proved, amended the charge and added an alternative common object to it, namely, that the object of the assembly was to punish one of the opposite side for enticing away another's wife. There was no evidence on the record to prove the alternative common object, it being based solely on a portion of the statements of some of the accused. Held that, if the Sessions Judge was of opinion that there were grounds for charging the accused with a common object other than that alleged by the prosecution, his proper course was not to amend the charge, but to add a separate count or counts to the charge upon which a separate verdict could be taken. S. 236 of the Code of Criminal Procedure only authorizes a charge in the alternative when it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, and not where there may be a doubt as to the facts which constitute one of the elements of the offence. charges against each of the accused under ss. 323 and 325 of the Penal Code, recorded the statements of the accused and the evidence for the defence, and on the 10th September convicted the accused on all the charges, passing upon each of them, in respect of each charge, sentences which he could pass as a Magistrate of the first class, but could not have passed as a Magistrate of the second class. On appeal the Sessions Judge, on the ground that the prisoners had committed the offence described in s. 148 of the Penal Code, held that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were illegal, as being inconsistent with the provisions of s. 71, paragraphs 2 and 4; and he accordingly reduced the sentences of imprisonment which the Magistrate had passed to the maximum of imprisonment which the Magistrate could have inflicted under s. 148. Held by the Full Bench (PETHERAM, C.J., and BRODHURST, J., dissenting) that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were legal. Per PETHERAM, C.J., that the Judge in this case had no power to alter the charge or to frame a new charge in any way. Per BRODHURST, J., that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were as a whole illegal, and that a Court of Appeal is not competent to alter the finding of a Magistrate so as to convict an accused person of an offence which the Court of which the order is on appeal was not competent to try. The jury, having considered their verdict, were asked by the Clerk of the Crown if they were agreed. The foreman replied that they were, and that their verdict was guilty, and when further asked, he said "guilty of abetment — of abetment generally." On the application of counsel for the prosecution, a charge was then added of "abetment of murder committed by some person or persons unknown." The additional charge was read aloud to the jury, but was not specially explained to the prisoner, nor was he called upon to plead to it. Counsel for the prisoner was asked by the Judge if he desired to have a new trial on the charge as amended, but he declined. The three charges (i.e., the two original charges and the additional charge) were then read to the jury, who after deliberation returned a verdict of "not guilty" on charges Nos. 1 and 2, and of "guilty" on charge No. 3, viz., of abetment of murder by a certain person or persons unknown. On the application of counsel for the prisoner, the following points were reserved:

(1) whether, under the circumstances, the Court had power to add a new charge; (2) whether the verdict returned on the new charge was valid, the prisoner not having been called on to plead to it. Held (SCOTT, J., dissentiente) that the Judge was wrong in framing a new charge in addition to the original charges. The error, however, was one of form and not of substance, and under s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) the Court declined to interfere with the conviction. Held also that, having regard to ss. 228, 229, and 230 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the charge of abetment of murder by B might have been changed into one of abetment generally. Held also that, in any case, the conviction was good under ss. 236 and 237 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It was doubtful whether the evidence would establish the offence of murder, abetment of murder by B, or abetment of murder by some one unknown. Even if there had been no charge properly framed, the Judge might, under s. 237, have accepted the verdict returned by the jury and entered it on the record. The fact that the Judge framed a charge which, ex hypothesi, was beyond his authority, and accepted a verdict on that charge, did not affect the legality of the conviction. Held that the omission to read and explain the charge to the prisoner did not, under the circumstances, prejudice the prisoner, and was, therefore, immaterial. In the Criminal Procedure Code generally the word "charge" is used as the statement of a specific offence, and not as indicating the entire series of offences of which a prisoner is accused. There is nothing in the Code to indicate that the word is to have a different construction in ss. 226 and 227 from what it has in other sections. The words "without a charge" in s. 226 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) will properly apply not only to a case in which there is no charge at all, but also to a case in which there is no charge of such an offence as the Sessions Judge or Clerk of the Crown may think the prisoner ought to be tried for. If the word "alter" in s. 227 is to be taken to include "addition," as it does in s. 226, the addition permitted must be an addition to some specific charge in the nature of an alteration, and not the addition of a new charge. The words "return of the verdict" in s. 227 mean the return of the final verdict which the Judge is bound to record. Per SCOTT, J.—The test of the admissibility of proposed amendments to a charge is whether such amendment will prejudice the prisoner. The word "charge" is used in the Code both as indicating the whole series of counts or heads of charge, and also as indicating a charge of one specific offence. In s. 227 it is used in the former sense. The word "alter" in s. 227 must be taken to be equivalent to the words "add to or otherwise alter" which are used in s. 226, and consequently the addition of a new "head of charge" is an alteration within the meaning of s. 227. At the trial, the Sessions Judge added a charge against all the accused of causing hurt to C, and convicted them upon both the original charges and the added charge. The assault upon C took place either at the same time as or immediately after the attack which resulted in the death of J. Held that the case did not come within the terms of s. 226 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the adding of the charge was an irregularity which was not covered by ss. 236 and 237, those sections having no application to such a state of things; but that, inasmuch as the Sessions Judge was addressed by the pleader who appeared for the accused, and heard all the objections raised and witnesses might have been called for the defence upon the added charge, the provisions of s. 537 were applicable to the case. At the end of the trial, the Sessions Judge, finding that the accused were guilty of theft, but not of dacoity, acquitted them. Held, reversing the order of acquittal, that it was competent to the Sessions Judge to alter the charge under s. 227 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) and under s. 238 to convict the accused of the minor offence, which the evidence established. Held, also, that the Code of Criminal Procedure was applicable as lex fori. If the prosecution establishes certain acts constituting an offence and the Court misapplies the law by charging and convicting an accused person for an offence other than that for which he should have been properly charged, and if, notwithstanding such error, the accused has by his defence endeavoured to meet the accusation of the commission of these acts, then the Appellate Court may alter the charge or finding and convict him for an offence which those acts properly constitute, provided the accused be not prejudiced by the alteration in the finding. Such an error is one of form rather than of substance, and the alteration by an Appellate Court of the charge or finding would not necessitate a re-trial expressly on a charge of that offence. In appeal the District Magistrate held that no theft had been committed, but he convicted the accused of being members of an unlawful assembly. Held that on the trial the accused were called upon to answer only a charge of theft, they were never called upon to answer any other charge, and they therefore could not fairly be convicted on their appeal of an offence of an entirely different character. It is on the proceedings taken before the Magistrate that the facts constituting an offence for which a trial is held are made known to the accused, and the law is applied by the Magistrate to the facts established, so as to constitute the charge which the accused is called upon to answer. It therefore cannot be said that sufficient notice was given to the accused, because mention of s. 147 of the Penal Code (rioting) together with theft was made in the final report of the police as the offences considered to have been established; and that the accused must have been made acquainted with such report. 1. ——— Mode of summing up evidence—Duty of Judge.—In charging a jury, a Judge is not bound to do more than lay carefully and plainly before them the evidence as recorded by him, noting discrepancies and inconsistencies, and pointing out generally the way in which it is favourable or unfavourable to accused. JASPATH SINGH v. QUEEN-EMPRESS . . I. L. R., 14 Calc., 164

3. ——— Omission to point out legal bearings—Reading evidence to jury in important cases.—On a trial by jury a Sessions Judge in summing up should give a full and detailed statement of the evidence on both sides; he should point out the legal bearing of it, and what weight the jury ought to attach to its several parts. His omission to do so, if the accused is thereby prejudiced, amounts to such an error in law as would justify a Court of Appeal in setting aside the verdict. No general rule can be laid down as to when a prisoner is prejudiced by a defective summing up, but in general, if the finding of the jury in such a case is one that an Appeal Court would set aside if the trial had taken place with the aid of assessors, the Court will interfere and set the verdict aside. 39. ——— Confession of accused—Subsequently retracted—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 103—Search by police of stolen property.—It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a confession made and subsequently retracted by a prisoner cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroborative evidence. A jury should be asked with reference to such confessions, not whether they were corroborated by independent evidence, but whether, having regard to the circumstances under which they were made and retracted and all the circumstances connected with them, it was more probable that the original confessions or the statements retracting them were true. Criminal Procedure Code, s. 103, does not justify the view that the persons called upon to witness a search are to be selected by any person other than the officer conducting the search. If the Sessions Judge considers that the evidence of an Inspector of Police is necessary, he ought not to animadvert on his absence in charging the jury; but he should intimate his opinion to the Public Prosecutor and give him the opportunity of calling that official. It is wrong for a Judge in charging the jury to say that a head constable committed a breach of the police regulations in conducting a search with a loose shirt on, without examining him on the matter and taking evidence as to whether or not his body was examined, before he began the search. 40. ——— Retracted confessions—Misdirection as to admissibility of such confessions without corroborative evidence—Error in mode of treating evidence.—The accused were tried for murder. The Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury discussed the evidence generally, describing it as very poor evidence which, standing alone, amounted to nothing. He also told the jury that, as regards retracted confessions, "the law is that you are to look for corroboration in independent evidence. If that supplies such corroboration that you can confidently say, "the confessions must be absolutely true, you can act upon them, otherwise not." Held that the charge was defective. The Sessions Judge ought to have summed up the evidence to the jury calling their attention to the material parts of it, and leaving them to form their own opinion on it, instead of treating it generally. Held, also, that the Judge had misdirected the jury, as there is no rule of law that a retracted confession cannot be treated as evidence unless it is corroborated in material particulars by independent reliable evidence. To support a charge under the latter part of s. 475 of the Penal Code, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the accused was in possession of the papers referred to in the charge; (2) that the devices or marks were counterfeited on them; (3) that the marks were such as are used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in s. 467; and (4) that the accused intended that the marks should be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to documents either then forged or thereafter to be forged. The accused was charged with being in possession of forged documents, an offence punishable under ss. 474 and 475 of the Penal Code. In his summing up, the Sessions Judge, after stating that the documents were admitted by the defence to be forgeries, told the jury that the only issue they had to decide was whether the forged documents were in the possession of the accused, and whether the nature of [illegible], at all events, of the documents was such as to connect them with the accused, being the kind of document he would be likely to have in his house and he alone; and that, if they found this issue in the affirmative, they must return a verdict of guilty. Held that the charge to the jury was defective and misleading, and insufficiently complied with the requirements of s. 297 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. In the concluding sentence of the charge the Judge said: "You have seen the witnesses, and I have no doubt that you will return a just verdict." Held that such a charge amounted to a clear misdirection, and that the verdict was erroneous owing to such misdirection. Even the concluding sentence did not satisfy the requirements of a proper charge. The common object alleged by the prosecution was to compel the payment of certain money by one of the persons of the opposite party. Some of the accused who admitted their presence at the scene of the occurrence stated that they had been attacked on account of an allegation being made that one of the opposite party had enticed away another's wife, and that they had merely acted in self-defence. The case was tried before a jury, and on the close of the case for the prosecution the Sessions Judge, considering that possibly the common object alleged by the prosecution might be considered not to have been proved, amended the charge and added an alternative common object to it, viz., that the object of the assembly was difference of relief claimed.—To a suit brought in 1883, for redemption of a mortgage made in 1853, of villages in Oudh, subsequently included in the mortgagee's talukhdari estate and sanad, the defence was that, the mortgagor having brought a suit in 1864 to redeem, and not having appeared at the hearing, in person or by pleader, judgment was passed, the mortgagee having appeared to defend against the plaintiff under s. 114 of Act VIII of 1859. Held that, although the plaintiff, who had claimed in the prior suit the under-proprietary right in virtue of a sub-settlement, claimed in the present suit the superior proprietary right, the difference in the mode of relief claimed did not affect the identity of the cause of action, which was in both cases the refusal of the right to redeem; and that, under s. 114 of the Act, the judgment of 1864 was final. 10. ——— Dismissal of suit for default—Difference in causes of action—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 102, 103.—The dismissal of a suit in terms of s. 102, Civil Procedure Code, is not intended to operate in favour of the defendant as res judicata. When read with s. 103, it precludes a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action, referring, irrespectively of the defence or the relief prayed, entirely to the grounds, or alleged media, on which the plaintiff asks the Court to decide in his favour. Brother's sons, as nearest agnates of a deceased proprietor, sued for a decree, declaring that a gift, before then made by the widow in favour of her daughter's son, of the estate of her late husband, would not operate against their right of succession on her death. A prior suit, before the date of the gift, brought by two of the plaintiffs for a declaratory decree and an injunction restraining the widow from alienating the same estate, had been dismissed under the provisions of ss. 102 and 103 (Act X of 1877), Civil Procedure Code. Held that the causes of action in the two suits were not identical, and the fresh suit was not precluded by s. 103, the gift having afforded the new ground of claim, which also had subsequently arisen. Where a suit for certain property was brought on behalf of two minors by their next friend, and owing to the gross want of care and diligence on the part of the next friend, the suit was struck off under s. 102 for default of appearance,—Held, in a suit afterwards brought by the same plaintiffs on attaining their majority, that the suit was not barred by s. 103 of the Code. The English rule of law on this point as being the law of equity and good conscience was applied by the Court to this case, in the absence of any statutory provision. On that day A, the counsel who was instructed for the defendants in the first suit and for the plaintiffs in the second, was unable to attend, and B, another counsel, held his brief and appeared on his behalf and applied for two months' adjournment of both suits. The munim of his clients was then in Court. B was unable to state what was the defence, if any, to the claim of the plaintiffs in the first suit. The adjournment was refused, and B said he withdrew from the case. Both suits were then and there disposed of, the claim of the plaintiffs in the first suit being decreed, the second suit being dismissed for non-appearance. On the 7th May following, an application was made for a re-hearing of both suits. The Court, regarding the decrees as ex-parte decrees, granted a rule for a new trial, which was made absolute. On appeal to the Full Court, the matter was referred to the High Court. Held that under the circumstances the suits were to be considered as having been disposed of under ss. 100 and 102 of the Civil Procedure Code respectively, and that, whether or not they, or either of them, fell within the category of contested suits as defined by s. 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, the remedy under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code was open to the plaintiffs in the cross-suit. Where on the day fixed for hearing a party is present in person merely for the purpose of applying for an adjournment which is refused, he must be taken to have "appeared" within the meaning of Chap. VII of the Civil Procedure Code. The party has appeared in person. The purpose for which he appeared, or the action which he took on appearance, are immaterial. But where the party is absent and an application for adjournment is made on his behalf by a pleader who has no other instructions, and whose functions are at an end when the adjournment is refused, in that case the party has not appeared within the meaning of the chapter. Where the pleader who applies for an adjournment is accompanied by a recognized agent of the party, but the latter neither makes any application nor does any act, the question is whether he intends to appear, and in fact does appear for the party in the exercise of his powers under s. 36 of the Civil Procedure Code. That section is merely permissive and enabling. If the recognized agent, although able to do so, does not think proper to conduct the case on behalf of his principal, his mere presence in Court is not an "appearance" in the suit. An appearance may be made by a pleader or a recognized agent, but the concurrence of the pleader or agent is essential. As soon as he ceases to intend to represent the principal, the latter is unrepresented. S. 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act does not preclude a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default from applying under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code to have the order of dismissal set aside. There is no inconsistency between the two sections. A plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default has two separate remedies under different enactments. If he chooses to apply for a new trial under s. 38, he must do so within eight days. If he professes to apply for an order setting aside the dismissal under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code, he can do so within thirty days (Limitation Act, XV of 1877, sch. II, art. 163). the Court gives of its action, and apart from the actual fact of the plaintiff's appearance or non-appearance, the real meaning and substance of the Court's action is, that it dismisses the suit on the view, whether right or wrong, that the plaintiff appears and the defendant does not appear. Where, his suit having been dismissed for default of appearance under s. 102 of the Code, the plaintiff applies for its restoration, the defendant cannot contest the application in limine as one which cannot be entertained at all under s. 103 by showing that at the time of the dismissal there was an appearance by the plaintiff in fact or in law; but as an answer to the application on the merits, the defendant can raise the contention that the plaintiff was not prevented from appearing because in fact he did appear. It is not an "appearance" within the meaning of s. 102 of the Code when the plaintiff is represented only by a pleader who is without instructions enabling him to proceed with the case, and who is merely instructed to apply for an adjournment. Shankar Dat Dube v. *Radha Krishna, I. 23. ——— Ex-parte decree—Presidency Small Cause Court Act (XV of 1882), s. 37—New trial—Parties, Non-appearance of—Civil Procedure Code, s. 157.—There is a distinction made by the Code of Civil Procedure between cases decided ex-parte in the absence of one of the parties after first hearing, and cases decided in the absence of one of the parties at an adjourned hearing. Ch. VII of the Code relates to the appearance of parties and the consequence of their non-appearance at first hearings, whereas Ch. XIII, of which s. 157 forms a part, contains the procedure for the trial of a suit on an adjournment after the first hearing. Where, therefore, a defendant put in an appearance in the Small Cause Court at the first hearing, and the case was adjourned to a later date for hearing, on which date the case was heard in his absence and a decree given against him,—Held that such a decree was not made ex-parte so as to enable the defendant to obtain benefit of s. 108 of the Code, but that his only remedy was under s. 37 of Act XV of 1882. 26. ——— Re-hearing granted after expiration of time limited for application—Ex-parte decree.—The plaintiff obtained an ex-parte decree on the 5th July 1873, of which he took out execution on the 9th August. On the 11th of November, the defendant applied for and obtained a re-hearing under s. 119, Act VIII of 1859. On the re-hearing his suit was dismissed by both the lower Courts on the merits. Held, on a special appeal to the High Court, that, although s. 119 provides that an order for re-hearing shall be final, it is final only in the sense that it is not by itself open to appeal, and that the plaintiff was not precluded by that section from raising the objection that the order for re-hearing was made after the time limited therein, and therefore ought to be set aside as made without jurisdiction. 27. ——— Suit, Adjournment of hearing of—"Appearance" of defendant—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 108, 157.—A Munsif, before whom a suit was pending, fixed, by way of adjournment, a particular date for its disposal. Upon the date so fixed, it was necessary to take evidence upon issues of fact which had previously been settled. The plaintiffs appeared on that day. The defendants did not appear, but there was in Court a pleader who had been instructed by the two principal defendants at the outset, and who had filed his vakalatnama. There was nothing to show that he had ever received any other instructions whatever, either as to the facts of the case or the conduct of the defence, or that the defendants had done anything beyond giving the pleader the instructions above referred to. Under these circumstances, the plaintiffs gave their evidence, and the Munsif decreed the claim. Held that, under the circumstances stated, the defendant's pleader must be taken not to have been in Court on the date fixed for the purpose of defending the suit on behalf of the defendants, inasmuch as, upon that part of the case, he had not been instructed; that it was therefore a fair inference that the defendants did not appear, and the case was disposed of under s. 157 of the Civil Procedure Code; and that, under these circumstances, the provisions of s. 108 were applicable, and the decree was an ex-parte decision, which it was open to the Munsif to reconsider. Hira Dai v. *Hira Lal, I. The serving officer, being unable to find either the defendant or any person empowered to accept service for him at the address given, affixed a copy of the summons to the outer door of the defendant's house, and returned the original to Court. On the day notified in the summons, the case was called on, and, upon its being called on, a pleader presented himself in Court with a power-of-attorney, executed not by the defendant himself, but by a third person on his behalf, and stated that the defendant had no notice of the time fixed for the hearing of the case, and prayed for an adjournment to a date upon which a proper answer to the claim could be filed. The application was refused, but the case was adjourned to the day following. On that date, no one appeared for the defendant, and a decree was passed against him. Held that there was no appearance on behalf of the defendant within the meaning of s. 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that the decree passed on the adjourned date was therefore an ex-parte decree. Hira Dai v. *Hira Lal, I. The defendant afterwards applied for an order setting aside the judgment on the ground that he was prevented from appearing when the suit was called on. Held that the application was within s. 119 of Act VIII of 1859, and the Court had no power in granting the order to impose terms as under s. 111. This they failed to do on the day to which the hearing was adjourned, and when the suit came on for final hearing, they were still in default, and also failed to appear in person or by vakil. A decree was given for the plaintiff. Held that the decree of the original Court was not an ex-parte decree under s. 147 of the Code of Civil Procedure for non-appearance, but a decree under s. 148, and was therefore appealable. VII, and does not govern other decrees made ex-parte unless where it has been extended to those decrees by other provisions of the Code. Held, also, that whatever may be the effect of the words "and to be placed in the same position as if he had not appeared and answered" in s. 136, it does not intend to introduce into the class of cases dealt with by s. 108 a new class of cases of an entirely different character, and the decree in the suit was not an ex-parte decree within the meaning of s. 108. Choonee Lal v. *Chaman Lall, I. Therefore, in a case where a decree has been passed ex-parte against some only of several defendants, the effect of its being set aside on their application under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure is that the whole decree made in the suit is set aside, notwithstanding that some of the defendants had entered appearance at the original hearing. In the absence of good and sufficient cause for previous non-appearance, his application was rejected and an ex-parte judgment given against him. After this he applied, at the instance of the Appellate Court, for a re-hearing on the ground that the summons had not been duly served upon him. This application was rejected and the order of rejection was upheld on appeal. In special appeal he contended that the case did not fall within s. 119, and that he was entitled to have the regular appeal previously preferred determined upon the record as it stood, notwithstanding his prayer had been rejected under s. 113. Held that the mere fact of the special appellant having appeared by a vakil in the way mentioned above could not be taken as an appearance within the meaning of s. 119, and was not sufficient to prevent the Court from passing a judgment ex-parte against him. A vakalatnama had been previously filed on the defendant's part, and he had also objected to an application filed by the plaintiff for attachment of the defendant's property before judgment. Held that these acts on the defendant's part did not constitute an "appearance" by him within the meaning of s. 100 of the Civil Procedure Code, which referred to an appearance in answer to a summons to appear and answer the claim on a day specified, issued under s. 64; that the decree was therefore ex-parte within the meaning of ss. 100 and 108, and an appeal consequently lay to the High Court under s. 588, cl. Both parties then went back to the Munsif, who, on 26th April 1867, recorded a proceeding that the original ex-parte order was to stand. In the meantime the defendant appealed to the High Court, which reversed the Judge's order. Held that the effect of the High Court's order was to render valid the Munsif's order admitting the defendant to defend the suit, and that no application for review was necessary on the part of the defendant. Held that the High Court's order, being a final decision by way of appeal on a question which arose in the suit, could not be interfered with, except by the Privy Council. 3. ——— Admission and rejection of documents.—At the stage of a suit referred to in Act VIII of 1859, ss. 128, 129, and 132, the Court ought to sort the documents tendered into two classes: those relevant and admissible, and those irrelevant and inadmissible; and to reject in limine all documents which are evidently such as cannot be used as evidence in the suit. The admission of a document at this stage does not imply that it is evidence, but merely declares that it may, if properly treated, be used as evidence in the suit, and filing it as a part of the record does not confer any authority on such document or operate to dispense with any proof of genuineness. Courts of first instance ought to specify what portions of the documentary evidence on the record they have accepted, and what portions they have refused to listen to. All the proceedings of the parties in respect of the use of documentary evidence are matters to be recorded on the proceedings of the Court by the Judge's own note. 5. ——————— Dismissal of suit after adjournment.—The first hearing of a suit took place on the 16th November, when issues were settled, and the final hearing of the suit was fixed for the 22nd January following. On the 22nd of January, the plaintiff changed her vakil, and applied by the new vakil for a summons for a witness, and on the 23rd, the new vakil stating that owing to the absence of his witnesses he was not prepared to go on with the case, the Judge dismissed the suit. Held that, under s. 148 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Judge was justified in dismissing the suit. COMALAMMAL v. RANGASAWMY IYENGAR [4 Mad., 56

6. ——————— The first hearing of a suit was fixed for the 10th July 1867. Neither of the parties nor their vakils appeared. Thereupon the Court dismissed the suit under s. 148 of the Civil Procedure Code, but afterwards, upon the application of the plaintiff's vakil, restored it to the file for hearing under s. 119. Plaintiff obtained further adjournments to produce witnesses, the last being an adjournment to the 28th September. On that day the vakils of both parties appeared, but no witnesses, and the Court again dismissed the suit under s. 148 for failure to produce witnesses. On the 22nd of October the suit was again, under s. 119, restored to the file on the application of the plaintiff's vakil, and a decision was afterwards come to for the plaintiff upon the merits. On appeal the last-mentioned decree was reversed, and the decree passed under s. 148 (whether the first or second decree was not specified) upheld, upon the ground that, as s. 119 was inapplicable to a decree passed under s. 148, the Court of first instance had acted without jurisdiction in restoring the suit to the file. Held, on special appeal, reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court, that the first decree of dismissal being a decree which might have been made under

The application was opposed by his brother, who claimed to have been undivided from him. The matter came on for hearing, but was adjourned on his application, he being ordered to pay the costs. He failed to pay the costs, and the certificate was issued to the widow. Held that s. 158 of the Civil Procedure Code was inapplicable to the case in the absence of a specific order making the payment of costs a condition precedent to the hearing of the evidence of the party in default. 8. ——————— Refusal to allow examination of defendant as a witness—Dismissal in default of other evidence.—The Court of first instance refused to grant plaintiff's application to be allowed to examine second defendant as a witness on her behalf, thinking the grounds of such application insufficient for the exercise of its discretion under s. 162 of the Civil Procedure Code. On the adjourned date of hearing, plaintiff failed to produce any other witness, and the suit was dismissed under s. 148. On regular appeal, the Civil Judge considered that the Court of first instance ought not to have refused plaintiff's application, but held that the refusal was a final order not open to question in appeal. On special appeal,—Held that the Civil Judge was wrong on the latter point; that if the plaintiff had been prevented from examining the second defendant on sufficient grounds, she had not committed default under s. 148; that the decree on the finding of the Civil Court was not maintainable without enabling plaintiff to examine second defendant; and that that finding was conclusive in the special appeal. The decrees of both the lower Courts were consequently set aside and the case remanded. LATCHMANA RAU SAIB v. ROGUNATHA RAU [6 Mad., 299

Both parties to the suit were represented on that day by their pleaders. The Court of first instance subsequently entertained and rejected an application under s. 119 for a re-hearing. 12. ——— Defendant as witness for plaintiff refusing to produce documents.—In a suit to recover the balance due on a partnership transaction, the first defendant, who was examined as a witness for the plaintiff, refused to produce certain accounts relating to the partnership which he was directed to produce by the Civil Judge. Thereupon judgment was given against the defendant under s. 170 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On appeal, the High Court, holding that the accounts were relevant and material evidence in the suit, and that the Civil Judge was justified in requiring the first defendant to produce them, and being satisfied that the accounts were in possession or control of the first defendant, affirmed the judgment of the Civil Judge. 13. ——— Waiver of default by Court.—The provisions of s. 170 of the Code of Civil Procedure ought to be exercised with the most temperate discretion. Where the Court might have treated one of the defendants as in default, and passed judgment against him under the above section, but instead of doing so passed over the default and made an order adjourning the further hearing of the suit, and on the day to which the hearing was adjourned disposed of the suit under s. 170,—Held that the Court by its own act was not in a position to treat the defendant as in default. 14. ——— Order to one plaintiff in suit to attend and give evidence.—The Civil Judge, on appeal, reversing the decree of the District Munsif, dismissed a suit brought by two plaintiffs under s. 170 of the Code of Civil Procedure, on the ground that the first plaintiff had without lawful excuse failed to comply with the order of the Court requiring his attendance to give evidence. There was no order or summons to the first plaintiff to attend to give evidence in this suit, but a summons was issued to the plaintiff to attend to give evidence in another suit to which the second plaintiff was no party, and which was heard together with this appeal. Held (reversing the decision of the Sessions Judge) that non-compliance with the summons to give evidence in the other appeal was not enough to warrant the exercise of the power in this case, S. 170 requires that there should be a failure to comply with an order to attend to give evidence in the particular suit. 15. ——— Discretion in enforcing penalty under the section.—In a case which Act VIII of 1859, s. 170, is provided to meet, the Court ought not to take everything for granted against the party in fault, but to require the other party to prove his case so far as he can without the desired evidence, to consider well the effect of the default or refusal with reference to the rules of evidence, and to hear what evidence the defaulting party adduces before imposing upon him the penalty of default. 16. ——— Non-attendance of defendant when cited as a witness.—The non-attendance of defendant when cited as a witness to give evidence is not alone sufficient to justify the decision of the suit against him under s. 170 of the Civil Procedure Code. 20. ——— Default of plaintiff to appear—Reasons for summoning witness.—In a suit for the right of pre-emption on the ground that plaintiff was a shafee khalit, defendant, who alleged that plaintiff was only a benami shareholder, offered to establish his case on the deposition of the plaintiff alone. The latter not appearing on summons, the suit was decreed against him under s. 170, Code of Civil Procedure. On this he appealed, and the Judge ordered the Munsif to give him further time to appear. This was granted, and then extended again and again by the Munsif, who, on the plaintiff failing to appear again, gave a decree against him under the same law as before. The case was then appealed to the Judge, who ordered the case to be tried on its merits, remarking that the presence of the plaintiff was not necessary. Held that, as the plaintiff's liability to appear and give evidence had been already determined by a competent Court, and never denied by himself, he could not take advantage of a technical objection to show that he was not bound to come because the formalities of the law had not been observed or his evidence shown to be necessary. 24. ——— Discretion of Court to summon party as witness.—Where the law allows a discretion to any Court, it presumes that such discretion will be soundly and properly exercised; and where it is shown that the discretion was not so exercised, the omission will be a ground for interference by the superior Court. Accordingly, the Subordinate Judge's order under s. 170 was set aside on the ground that he had not exercised his discretion at all, inasmuch as he had ignored the fact that plaintiff had given very substantial reasons for his inability to attend and give evidence when summoned to do so; and as the Subordinate Judge had held substantially that there was sufficient evidence to prove plaintiff's claim, plaintiff was entitled to a decree, his failure to give evidence notwithstanding. 25. ——— Default of party to appear when summoned as witness—Willingness to attend—Lawful excuse.—A defendant's saying that he was willing to attend when he did not attend and showed no reason why he could not, is no lawful excuse for his non-attendance when summoned to attend. What is or is not a lawful excuse must depend on the circumstances of each case. DOORGA DUTT SINGH v. JHEENGOOR JHA . 18 W. R., 63

26. ——— Refusal of applicant for certificate to attend.—The appellant, having applied to the Judge for a certificate to collect the debts of one R, whose adopted son he claimed to be, referred in evidence to an ikrarnamah of adoption, of which he filed a copy procured from the kazi's books, alleging that the original had been made away with by an agent who had been bought over by his opponent. In the course of re-trial of the case on remand, the Judge required the petitioner to attend for the purpose of examination, and, as after being warned he did not do so, and assigned no good cause for his absence, upheld his former decision, and rejected the application. Held that the Judge exercised the powers conferred by s. 170, Civil Procedure Code, and that it was a proper exercise of discretion to take the course which he did take at that stage of the proceedings. The new Subordinate Judge took up the case from the point at which it had been left by his predecessor, and proceeded to judgment and decree. Held that the only power given by the Civil Procedure Code in such cases is to allow the evidence taken at the first trial to be used as evidence at the second trial, and not to allow the two hearings to be linked together and virtually made one; that the Subordinate Judge should have fixed a day for the entire hearing of the suit before himself, and should first have heard the opening statement on behalf of the plaintiff, the evidence produced by both sides, and the arguments on behalf of both, and then finally decided the case which he had himself heard and tried; that he might, in accordance with the provisions of s. 191 of the Civil Procedure Code, have allowed the depositions which had been taken before his predecessor to be put in; and that in neglecting to take this course, and in deciding the case upon materials which were never before him, his action was illegal, and the judgment and decree were nullities. The wording of s. 197 is quite consistent with the view that, where a decree for possession is given, and an enquiry as to the amount of mesne profits is reserved, the decree for possession of the land is only a partial decree in the suit, and that there is to be a further enquiry and a further decree in respect of mesne profits. 9. ——— Effect of striking off execution proceedings—Procedure.—A decree was obtained on the 10th July 1858, and applications to execute it were made in June 1862 and January 1866. The last application prior to the coming into operation of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 was on the 10th January 1876. This proceeding was struck off. The decree-holder on the 13th June 1879 again applied for execution; the decree was transferred to S for execution, where, on objection that it was more than twelve years old, and therefore barred by s. 230 of Act X of 1877, the execution proceedings were again struck off on the 17th January 1880. This order was appealed against, and eventually, on the 25th April 1881, the application was re-admitted. In June 1881 an application was made to the S Court for transfer of the case for execution to D, which was granted, and the case transferred; but no steps having been taken by the decree-holder in the D Court, it was struck off by that Court on the 19th August 1881. On the 4th March 1882 (the judgment-debtor having died meanwhile), an application was made to the D Court to restore the proceedings for execution against his representative. Notices were issued, and the 2nd June was eventually fixed for the hearing. On that day no one was present on behalf of the decree-holder (whose pleader had died in the meantime), and the case was again struck off. On the 11th July 1882, application was made to restore the proceedings, notices were issued, and a day fixed for hearing, and after numerous adjournments the objections of the judgment-debtor were overruled on the 5th March 1883, and execution of the decree granted. On appeal the Judge found that the execution proceedings had been continuous throughout, and that there had been no unreasonable delay in the prosecution of the execution proceedings. Held that execution of the decree was not barred by s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. No moveable property having been found, the Court was asked to attach his immoveable property, but, refusing to do so, struck off the proceedings. of such decree to execute it was pending, to be allowed to execute it. The transferee failed to pay the Court-fee leviable for the issue of such notice, and the Court dismissed his application. The transferee subsequently made a second application to be allowed to execute the decree. Held that such application could not be rejected, with reference to s. 230 of Act X of 1877, on the ground that due diligence had not been used on the former application to procure complete satisfaction of the decree, because such application had not been granted; and, therefore, the question whether "on the last preceding application" due diligence was used to procure such satisfaction did not arise. 24. ——— Passing of the Act—Meaning of the expression "granted" in s. 230.—Under s. 230 of Act X of 1877, an application for execution is said to be "granted" when it is made regularly and formally. The expression "granted" is equivalent to the expression "admitted" as used in s. 245. Where, therefore, an application for execution under s. 230 of Act X of 1877 is not "granted," a subsequent regular and formal application under the same section may be allowed if made within time. 25. ——— Meaning of "granted."—Under s. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, after a decree is twelve years old, there is a prohibition against its being executed more than once, —i.e., an application for execution should not be granted if a previous application has been allowed under the provisions of that section. The mere filing of a petition with the result that the application contained in it is subsequently struck off, is not "granting" an application within the meaning of s. 230 of the Code; and ss. 245, 248, and 249 show that there is a broad distinction between admitting an application for the purpose of issuing notice to the other side and of hearing the objections that may be urged, and a decision of the Court as provided in s. 249. In 1865 a decree was passed for a sum of money payable by yearly instalments for a period of sixteen years. Down to March 1877, various amounts were paid on account of the decree. In that month an application was made for execution of the decree, the result being an arrangement for liquidation of the amount then due, which was confirmed by the Court. A second application for execution was made on the 9th March 1881, the decree then being more than twelve years old. All that was done with reference to this application was that notice to appear was issued to the judgment-debtor's representatives, and subsequently a petition was filed notifying that an arrangement had been effected, under which a certain sum had been paid by one of the said representatives in satisfaction of the claim against him, and that the other had agreed to pay the balance by yearly instalments. Upon this the application for execution was struck off. On the 5th March 1883, another application for execution was made, notice to appear was issued, and after this notice a petition was put in intimating that an arrangement had been come to, and praying that execution might be postponed, whereupon the application was struck off. Again, on the 31st March 1884, the decree-holder applied once more for execution of the decree. Held that neither the previous application of the 9th March 1881 nor that of the 5th March 1883 could properly be said to have been "granted" within the meaning of s. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, and, under these circumstances, the decree, though twelve years old and upwards, was not barred by that section, and the application for execution should be allowed. 26. ——— Twelve years old decree—Meaning of "granted."—A decree passed in April 1872 was kept alive by various applications for execution up to 1883. In February and December of that year two such applications were made, but the proceedings on both occasions terminated in the applications being struck off without any money being realized under the decree. In November 1884, the decree-holder again applied for execution, the application being the first made after the decree had become twelve years old, and being made within three years from the passing of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. Held that the application must be entertained in accordance with the ruling of the Full Bench in Musharraf Begum v. *Ghalib Ali, I. Hence, where an application for execution in accordance with s. 235 of the Code has been made within the period of limitation prescribed by s. 230 and has been granted, that is, execution has been ordered in accordance with the prayer of the decree-holder's application, the right of the decree-holder to obtain execution will not necessarily be defeated if, by reason of objections on the part of the judgment-debtor or action taken by the Court or other cause for which the decree-holder is not responsible, final completion of the Further applications of the decree-holder to the Court executing the decree to go on from the point where the execution-proceedings had been arrested and complete execution of his decree would be applications merely ancillary to the substantive application under s. 235, and would not be obnoxious to the bar of s. 230. Delhi and London Bank v. *Reilly, Weekly Notes, All. 34. ——— Finality of order made in execution proceedings—Decree payable by instalments.—In 1868 a decree was obtained for R1,100, which provided that the amount should be paid in instalments, the first instalment being R200, to be paid at the end of the first year, and that the other instalments should be R100 at the end of each subsequent year, and that in the event of failure to carry this out, and 2½ months after the falling due of the instalment, the whole amount should be exigible in a lump sum with interest at 8 annas per cent. per mensem. In 1877 the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, asserting that R600 had been paid up to that time by five instalments, one of R200 and four of R100 each, and that default had been made in payment of the fifth instalment of R100, and he asked to recover the whole amount due on the decree. No order was passed on this application, and eventually the case was struck off. In 1880 the decree-holder again applied for execution of the decree, upon the same grounds as those upon which the previous application was based. Notice was issued and served, and a warrant issued for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, but eventually the case was struck off. In 1883 the decree-holder on the same grounds made another application for execution. It was contended by the judgment-debtor that execution was barred by s. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as no instalments had been paid, and even if they had been paid, they could not be recognized, not having been certified. Held that the proper time from which to reckon the limitation of twelve years was the fifth year from the date of the bond, the whole claim from the beginning and the order passed in 1880 having gone upon that basis, that the Court could not go behind that order, and that consequently the decree-holder was within time and might take out execution. Suit by transferee for decretal amount—Declaratory decree.—The transferee of a decree for costs, associating with him the transferor, made an application under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code to be allowed to execute the decree. The application was opposed by the judgment-debtor and was rejected, and the Court referred the transferee to a regular suit. After taking various proceedings ineffectually, he instituted a suit for the recovery of the sum to which he was entitled as costs under the decree transferred to him. Held that the plaintiff, as the holder of the decree by assignment, could only recover the amount under it by executing the decree, and not by a separate suit; but that he was entitled to have a decree declaring that the assignment to him of the decree-holder's rights under the decree was valid, and gave him a right to execute it, and that the Court's order under s. 232, which disallowed the execution, was an improper one, a suit for this relief being maintainable; for, there being no appeal from orders under s. 232, there would otherwise be no remedy; and that, looking at the plaint and the issues on which the parties were divided, and the fact that the Court which refused the plaintiff's application for execution referred him to a regular suit, this relief might properly be given in the present suit. Per MAHMOOD, J., that the suit was maintainable, inasmuch as the present plaintiff never having been accepted on the record as holder of the decree, the questions which were disposed of by the Court executing the decree, as between the plaintiff and the judgment-debtor, could not be regarded as questions within s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. (b) to s. 232 applies only to decrees for money personally due by two or more persons; and that the decree obtained by B against A and C not being a personal decree against C (he having been made a defendant only by reason that he had purchased the mortgaged property subject to the mortgage debt), C as assignee of B was entitled to take out execution. The decree was executed in the Agent's Court until B's death in 1868. B's status as a sardar under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Agent did not descend to his sons, and the decree was transferred to the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ahmednagar for execution. The case went up twice to the High Court, under whose orders the execution was for several years continued in favour of A's representatives against the estate of B's sons. In 1885, one of A's representatives assigned his interest under the decree to C and D. Thereupon the transferees C and D applied to the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ahmednagar to have their names substituted in the place of the transferor in the execution-proceedings. The Subordinate Judge rejected this application, on the ground that he could not recognize the transfer of the decree either under s. 372 or 232 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, reversing the order of the lower Court, that the assignment of the decree-holder's rights to execution in this case was one approved by the law as contained in s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure. 27. ——— Transfer of decree by operation of law—Representative of original decree-holder—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 244—Right to appeal against order refusing execution.—R died in May 1859, leaving his property to his executors in trust for the appellant P, and he directed that the property should be assigned by them to the appellant as soon as he came of age. In August 1868, the executors filed this suit against L as manager of certain landed property belonging to the Hallai Bhattia caste, and known as Mahajan Wadi, to recover certain loans made by them as executors to him as manager of the said wadi. On the 11th May 1870, while this suit was pending, the executors assigned all the property of their testator to the appellant P. By the deed of assignment they assigned to him (inter alia) "all moveable property, debts, claims, and things in action whatsoever vested in them as such executors." No steps were taken, subsequently to this assignment, to make the assignee, P, a party to the suit, which proceeded without amendment. On the 23rd January 1873, a decree was passed for the plaintiffs on the record for R31,272-13-5, and it was declared that the said sum should be a first charge on the rents and income of the said wadi. Subsequently to this decree, L opened an account in the name of the appellant P, and from time to time made payments to him on account of the decree. The last of these payments was made on the 19th November 1884. None of these payments were certified to the Court. In 1885 the respondent V was appointed to the office of manager of the Hallai Bhattia caste in the place of L, the original defendant in the suit. On the 4th January 1886, his attorneys wrote to the appellant's attorneys offering to pay the appellant the balance due to him under the decree. Subsequently, however, he refused to make any payment to the appellant, whereupon the appellant applied for execution of the decree against him as manager of the said wadi. He claimed to be a transferee of the decree under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code. His application was refused by the Judge in chambers. Held that the appellant was a transferee of the decree within the meaning of s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code. The decree had been transferred to him "by operation of law." As such, he was entitled to sue out execution, and was to be regarded as the representative of the original decree-holder within the meaning of cl. Omission to give notice of application for substitution of names—Title of assignee.—The holder of a decree for the sale of mortgaged property having transferred the same to M by registered instrument, M transferred the decree to other persons, and the co-transferees applied under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code to have their names substituted for those of the original decree-holders. The judgment-debtor opposed the application on the ground that M's name had not been substituted for the names of the original decree-holders who had transferred to him: It appeared that no notice had been issued to M under s. 232 of the Code, that he was dead, and that his legal representative had not been cited as required by law. The application was allowed by the Courts below. Held that, even assuming that the judgment-debtor had a locus standi to raise the objection that notice had not been issued to the applicants' transferor, he had no possible interest in the question, and could not be prejudiced by the passing of the order; that it was not necessary to cite the representatives of the transferor; and that the order not being one upon which execution of the decree could issue, but merely for a transfer of names, the objection that the transferor had not been cited under s. 232 was not a substantial one. Held that it could not be said that where a decree has been assigned by one assignor to another, the substitution of his name on the record in lieu of that of the original decree-holder was a condition precedent to the assignor's passing title under the assignment. 5. ——— Liability of son as representative of father for his debts.—As the entire interest in an impartible zamindari passes upon the death of the father to the son, there is nothing in the estate itself which can be attached as assets of the father under a decree against him, or which can be made available in execution of the decree against his son as his representative. Though a son is bound under Hindu law to pay his father's just debts from any property he may possess, yet, when he is made a party to a decree as representative of his deceased father for the purpose of executing it, his liability is limited to the amount of assets of the deceased which may have come to his hands and have not been duly disposed of. 6. ——— Decree against karnavan—Tarwad property in hands of successors—Share of deceased father of joint family—Assets.—In a suit by the trustees to remove the defendant from the management of certain temples, a decree for mesne profits was passed against the defendant, who was the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad. Held that the tarwad property in the hands of the deceased defendant's successor was not assets of the deceased in the hands of his successor liable to satisfy the decree under s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877. The share of a deceased father in an undivided Hindu family passes by survivorship to the sons, and is not assets in their hands to satisfy a decree against the father under s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877. 7. ——— Decree obtained against father executed against his sons as his representatives.—In an undivided Hindu family, although the interests of the sons in the ancestral estate are liable to satisfy the father's debt, the holder of a money-decree against the father who has not attached the ancestral estate before the death of the father cannot execute the decree against the ancestral property as assets in the hands of the representatives of the judgment-debtor under s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877. *Zamindar of Sivagiri v. 1. QUESTIONS IN EXECUTION OF DECREE.

1. ——— Meaning of section.—S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that there must be some question in controversy and conflict in execution, which has been brought to a final determination and conclusion, so as to be binding upon the parties to the proceedings, and which must relate in terms to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree. HULAS RAI v. PIRTHI SINGH . . . . . I. L. R., 9 All., 500

2. ——— Proceeding in execution—Suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 12.—Semble—That a proceeding under s. 244 is not a suit within the meaning of s. 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure. VENKATA CHANDRAPPA NAYANIVARU v. VENKATARAMA REDDI

3. ——— Question raised for first time in execution.—Held that a question raised for the first time between the parties to a decree at the time of its execution, although not expressly reserved in that decree for determination at the time of its execution, may be enquired into and determined by the Court executing the decree under s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. 12. ——— Question of title between decree-holder and third person—Separate suit.—The plaintiffs in a suit for money obtained a decree against all the defendants except P, and among them K. On appeal, the Court of first appeal gave them a decree against P. In execution of this decree, they attached and were paid, as belonging to P, certain money deposited in the Government Treasury in K's name. On appeal by P, the Court of second appeal reversed this decree, and restored the decree of the first Court dismissing the suit as regards P. P thereupon applied in execution of his decree for a refund of the money. The plaintiffs objected on the ground that the money belonged to K. Held that the Court executing P's decree was not competent to decide the question whether the money belonged to P or to K, such question not being one between P and them only, but involving and raising a question of title between him and K as to their conflicting claims, inter se, to the money. At the sale the tenure was purchased by N. S then brought a suit against B and N to set aside the sale on the ground that the rent-decree and all execution-proceedings taken thereunder were fraudulent, and alleging that B was the actual purchaser in the name of N. An objection was taken that the suit would not lie, and that the questions in the suit were such as could have been determined, and were determined, by the Court executing the decree:—Held that neither s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code nor the corresponding s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 had any application to proceedings in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859, and that the suit, being one to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud, was maintainable. Saroda Churn Chuckerbutty v. *Mahomed Isuf Meah, I. 15. ——— Question as to whether purchase-money has been paid within time. Conditional decree.—The plaintiff in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption obtained a decree to the effect mentioned in s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code. On payment by him of the purchase-money into Court, the defendants objected, in the execution department, to such payment, on the ground that it had not been made within time. The Court which made the decree disallowed the objection. The defendants appealed from the order disallowing the objection: they had previously appealed from the decree. The Appellate Court heard both appeals together, and, holding that the purchase-money had not been paid into Court within time, reversed the decree and allowed the objection. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the High Court from the Appellate Court's decree, which was admitted. He also preferred an appeal from the appellate order allowing the objection, but this appeal was rejected as being beyond time, and such order became final. Held that, inasmuch as the question whether the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money into Court within time was not one relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, but was one which should be decided in the suit itself, and therefore the proceedings in the execution department

AMRIT KOONWAR v. LUCHMEE NARAIN . 1 Agra, 93

17. ——— Regular suit to set aside summary order—Application in summary suit.—A person who, in the course of executing a decree, had been turned out of possession by an order under s. 269, Act VIII of 1859, and who was compelled to pay the costs of that order, brought a regular suit for its reversal and obtained a decree, which was silent as to the costs of the summary order in consequence of the plaintiff not having demanded them; subsequently the plaintiff made an application in the summary suit that the costs of the summary order should be repaid to her. Held that the Court had no power to entertain it under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861. TOYBOON v. MAHOMED WAJID . . . . 2 C. L. R., 504

18. ——— Resistance to execution as being cultivators—Decree for limited possession—Separate suit.—In a suit to recover possession of land, the defendants resisted execution on the ground that they were cultivators, and that the decree only authorized the plaintiff to recover possession as proprietor. The objection was overruled, and the defendants were ejected. They then sued to set aside the order made in the execution proceedings and to recover possession. Held that the suit was barred under s. 244, cl. (c), of the Civil Procedure Code. pay a certain sum by yearly instalments and hypothecated certain lands as security. A memorandum of this decree was registered under s. 42 of Act XX of 1866. The last instalment fell due in February 1870. The decree was kept alive against the zamindar up to his death in 1873. Upon the death of the zamindar, proceedings in execution were taken against his son, who succeeded to the zamindari, but were set aside on appeal. In January 1882 a suit was brought against the son to recover the amount of the last instalment due by his father under the decree of 1867. Held that the suit was neither barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure nor by limitation. ARUNACHALA v. ZAMINDAR OF SIVAGIRI . I. L. R., 7 Mad., 328

21. ——— Hindu law—Obligation of son to pay debt of deceased father—Nature of obligation.—D obtained a decree against the father of A and B, Hindus, on a hypothecation-bond, whereby certain land was pledged as security for repayment of a loan. The decree declared the land liable to be sold for repayment of the debt. The judgment-debtor having died before the decree was executed, A and B were made parties to the proceedings in execution and the land was attached. A and B objected to the attachment on the ground that their shares in the land were not liable to be sold in execution of the decree, as they were not parties to the suit. This objection was allowed, and D brought a suit for a declaration that the property was liable to be sold. That suit was dismissed, on the ground that a suit for a declaration would not lie. D then sued to recover from A and B the balance due under the decree against their father after crediting the amount recovered by the sale of their father's share. It was objected that the suit was barred by s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that the duty of a son under Hindu law to pay his father's debts out of his own share of ancestral estate is not a matter which can be decided under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The questions contemplated by s. 244 are those which relate to the enforcement of the obligation created by the decree. The obligation to pay the father's debts out of the son's share of the ancestral estate is not an obligation created by a decree against the father. ARIABUDRA v. DORASAMI . . I. L. R., 11 Mad., 413

22. ——— Suit against sons of a deceased judgment-debtor—Decree for money against father to be discharged by instalments—Separate suit—Liability of son for father's debt.—A personal decree on a mortgage was passed against a Hindu (the mortgagor) and his two sons on 19th October 1877. The decree provided for payment of the secured debt in various instalments by May 1895. The mortgagor died in 1883, having discharged part of the debt. The decree-holder having attached certain family property in execution, the mortgagor's two younger sons, who had not been born at the date of the above decree, objected that their shares were not liable to attachment. This objection prevailed, the Court expressing the opinion that the matter in controversy should be determined in a regular suit. The other defendants in the suit of 1877 had both died in the interval, one of them leaving infant sons. The decree-holder (in whose sole name the mortgage stood) now sued the sons of the mortgagor and their infant nephews for payment out of the family property of all unpaid instalments, and objection was taken that the question whether ancestral property is liable or not for the father's debt in the present suit was one which related to the execution of the decree in the former suit, and that the order whereby the attachment was raised was an order under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and no fresh suit could be brought. Held that the plaintiff was not precluded from maintaining the suit against the sons of the mortgagor by Civil Prodedure Code, s. 244. The mortgagor subsequently paid into Court the money due under the mortgage decree, and applied to be restored to the possession of the mortgaged property. Both the lower Courts granted the mortgagor's application. On special appeal,—Held (following the decision of the Full Bench in Ravji Shivram Joshi v. Kaluram Malukchand, 12 Bom., 161) that such an application was not the proper mode for the mortgagor to redeem the property and to recover possession from the mortgagee, the previous decree for possession having been fully executed when the mortgagee was put into possession. not the proper mode for the mortgagor to redeem the mortgaged lands and to recover possession thereof. 26. ——— Question as to amount received under mortgage—Attempt to obtain redemption of a usufructuary mortgage by means of an application in execution.—Certain mortgagees held a mortgage which, in its inception, was a simple mortgage, but which was to become a usufructuary mortgage upon non-payment of the mortgage debt by a certain date. The mortgage debt was not paid within the time limited. The mortgagees sued on the covenant in their bond and obtained a decree for possession, declaring them entitled to remain in possession until the mortgage debt was satisfied from the usufruct. Some time after the mortgagees had got possession under this decree, the mortgagors applied, ostensibly under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for recovery of possession of the mortgaged property and for payment of a large sum of money, which they alleged the mortgagees to have collected as profits in excess of what was due under the mortgage. Held that such an application would not lie. If the allegation of the mortgagors were true, their proper remedy was by suit for redemption, and not by application in the execution department. Ravji Shivram Joshi v. Kaluram, 12 Bom., 160, Ram Chandra Ballal v. Baba Esgonda, 12 Bom., 163, and Narsinha Manohar v. *Bhagrantrav, I. 28. ——— Property attached in execution, after satisfaction of decree from other sources—Separate suit.—An elephant having been attached in execution, it was released on the claim of one P, upon S standing surety. It was finally declared to be the property of the judgment-debtors; but the decree having been satisfied from other sources, it was ordered that the elephant be returned to the judgment-debtors. It was then demanded from the surety; but he objecting, the claimant (P) was served with notice to produce it. This not having been done within the period fixed, the Munsif ordered that it should be demanded from the surety, and (on his failure to produce its stipulated price) should be realized by attachment and sale of his property. Held that, the decree having been executed, the Munsif's subsequent proceedings as to the elephant were illegal, and that the right to it was open to a suit. 47. ——— Question whether lands were included in decree—Act VIII of 1859, s. 387—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11.—The father of the defendant in 1853 obtained a decree against the father of the plaintiff and other persons for partition of village lands. The decree directed that in effecting the partition certain dhara lands then occupied by the plaintiff's father were not to be included. Application for execution of that decree was made in 1861, but the execution-proceedings remained pending until 1882. On the 12th December 1882, the decree was executed, and the defendant (his father being then dead) was put into possession of the lands now in dispute as being part of the lands to which he was entitled under the decree. The plaintiff objected that these lands were not subject to partition under the decree, and he applied for an order that they should be delivered back to him. His application was rejected, and he thereupon brought the present suit to recover the lands from the defendant. The Court of first instance was of opinion that the question raised in the suit related to the execution of the decree made in 1853, and under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) could not be raised again by a separate suit. The plaintiff appealed to the Assistant Judge, who reversed the lower Court's decree. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court,—Held, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed. 50. ——— Retention by the Court of property not the subject-matter of a decree in the course of its execution—Dismissal of petition for delivery of possession—Appeal from order of dismissal.—A decree having been passed awarding to a plaintiff in a suit a moiety of certain jewels which were stored in family boxes in the possession of the defendant, the boxes containing the jewels were taken possession of by an officer of the District Court, and a division was effected by a commissioner appointed for that purpose by that Court. After the division, certain jewels remained, which had been set aside by the commissioner as not forming part of the subject-matter of the decree, and these continued in the custody of the District Court. The defendant thereupon presented a petition to the District Court praying that the jewels so remaining undivided might be returned to him. Plaintiff resisted the application, but both parties were agreed that the said remaining jewels were not part of the subject-matter of the suit, and were not dealt with by the decree. The petition was dismissed, whereupon the petitioner appealed. On objection being taken that no appeal lay against the order of dismissal on the ground that, since the jewels in question were not part of the subject-matter of the suit and were not dealt with in the decree, the question was not one relating to the execution of a decree and was not governed by s. 244 of

The Appellate Court remanded the case for retrial on the merits, and a decree was passed by the Court of first instance in A's favour, which was confirmed on appeal, and he got back his property. A then brought a suit for the value of crops wrongfully appropriated by B during the period he was in possession. It was contended on second appeal that such a suit was barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the question to be decided in this suit did not relate to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the original decree within the meaning of s. 244, because it did not arise at all until that decree had ceased to exist, and such a suit was not barred by the provisions of that section. Lati Koer v. *Sobhadra Kooer, I. The present suit was instituted by plaintiff in 1871. Held that not only was the remedy on the cause of action, which accrued in 1854, and the decree of 1866, barred, but also that Act XXFII of 1861, s. 11, prevented the plaintiff from bringing a new suit on the fresh cause of action accruing to him under the decree of 1866, as that section "took away from the parties to the suit the right to raise by a fresh suit any question as to their rights and liabilities under the decree." Runganasary v. Shappani, 5 Mad., 375, followed. The Registrar found that the defendant was a tenant under the plaintiff at a monthly rent, and the Court decreed that defendant should remain in possession so long as he should continue to pay the rent regularly, and that in default of payment the plaintiff should be placed in possession. An attempt to obtain possession in execution of that decree in 1861 failed, and the plaintiff brought a suit to recover possession with arrears of rent. Held that s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 precluded the plaintiff from maintaining the suit. In execution of this decree, plaintiff presented an application on the 28th November 1894, praying that he should be put in management of the devasthan lands on the ground that the defendant was guilty of mismanagement and misapplication of the devasthan property. This application was rejected by the Court of first instance on the ground that the question of mismanagement did not fall within s. 244, cl. (c), of the Code of Civil Procedure. This order was confirmed on appeal on the ground that the decree was a declaratory decree, and therefore incapable of execution. Held on second appeal that the decree was not declaratory only, and that it could be enforced in execution under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. 61. ——— Question as to title raised and decided in execution proceedings—Omission to appeal—Fresh suit brought to establish title.—The defendant obtained a decree against the plaintiff as representative of his (the plaintiff's) deceased uncle, and in execution he attached the property in dispute. The plaintiff objected to the atttachment, but his objection was disallowed, and the property was sold. The plaintiff did not appeal against the order disallowing his objection, but filed the present suit to establish his right. Both the lower Courts allowed the plaintiff's claim. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court,—Held, reversing the decree of the Courts below, that the plaintiff's suit was not maintainable. The question raised in the present suit was one which ought to have been taken in the execution proceedings in the former suit under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882); and having been, as a fact, raised and decided against the plaintiff, he could not bring a separate suit. In breach of this agreement, D in the same year applied for execution, and sold certain immoveable property belonging to S, of which K became the purchaser. K did not apply for possession until 1883, in which year he applied for and obtained possession of the property. S alleged that he then for the first time became aware of the sale, and that by the fraud of L and K he had been kept in ignorance of the execution proceedings taken by D in breach of the above-mentioned agreement, and within thirty days after K obtained possession, he (S) applied for a reversal of the orders which had been passed in the aforesaid fraudulent proceedings. TOTTENHAM, and PIGOT, JJ. (GHOSE, J., dissenting) —that when circumstances affecting the validity of a sale in execution have been brought about by the fraud of one of the parties to the suit, and give rise to a question between these parties such as, apart from fraud, would be within the provisions of s. 244, a suit will not lie to impeach the validity of the sale on the ground of such fraud. Saroda Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Mahomed Isuf Meah, I.L.R., 11 Calc., 376, Viraraghava Ayyangar v. Venkata Charyar, I. R., 9 Bom., 468, approved. Gobind Chandra Majumdar v. Uma Churn Sen, I. L. R., 14 Calc., 679, dissented from in part. Held that in such a case the judgment-debtor is entitled, whether the sale has been confirmed or not, to make, as against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto, such application (if any) under s. 311 as he may be entitled to make, his time for making it being computed from the time when the fraud first became known to him. Held, further, that in cases in which the decree or the purchase is made benami, s. 244 does not apply, and a suit may be held to lie to set aside the sale. Per GHOSE, J.—An objection under s. 311, or upon the ground of fraud raised by the judgment-debtor after the sale has been confirmed under s. 312, cannot be dealt with under s. 244. In such a case the judgment-debtor is entitled upon the ground of fraud to bring a suit to set aside the sale, or at all events to have it declared that the sale passed no title to the purchaser, or that the purchaser is a trustee for him. L. R., 17 Calc., 769,* and that the suit was therefore not maintainable. Disputes as to rent having arisen, A and C proceeded to make deposits in Court in respect thereof, and the landlord instituted a suit against A, joining C as a party defendant to recover the amount of rent he claimed, and obtained an ex-parte decree, which, inter alia, directed that it should be satisfied out of the amount so deposited in Court. That amount, according to the landlord's case, proving insufficient to satisfy his demands, he proceeded to execute the decree and brought the holding to sale and purchased it himself. A and C then applied under s. 311 of the Code to have the sale set aside, alleging that the decree had been fraudulently executed, the sale-proclamation suppressed, and that the decree was incapable of execution in the manner adopted, and contending that it could only be executed against the amounts so deposited in Court, which were more than ample to satisfy the full amount justly due under it. That application was unsuccessful. A, C, D, and E then instituted a suit to have the sale set aside on the ground of fraud. Held, as regards A and C, following the decision in Mohendro Narain Chaturaj v. *Gopal Mondul, I. 70. ——— Suit to have an execution-sale of land set aside—Purchaser at sale sought to be set aside—Fraud, allegation of.—Where questions are raised between the parties to a decree relating to its execution, discharge, or satisfaction, the fact that the purchaser at a judicial sale, who is no party to the decree of which the execution is in question, is interested and concerned in the result, has never been held to prevent the application of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, limiting the disposal of these matters to the Court executing the decree. The plaintiffs, in a suit to have the judicial sale of a zamindari set aside, alleged that the decree-holder, in part satisfaction of his decree, had received, from them and other co-sharers, in the zamindari, their proportionate amounts of the debt decreed, and had agreed that their shares should be exempt from the execution sale about to take place; that the sale took place, subject to that exemption; that the decree-holder, however, with whom some of the co-sharers and the purchasers colluded, fraudulently had the sale set aside, revived the attachment, and caused a second sale, at which all the shares in the zamindari were sold. Held that the question, besides that the charge of fraud was not sufficiently specific, was determinable, in virtue of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, only by order of the Court executing the decree. —Fresh suit.—In a suit for redemption of a mortgage, a decree was passed for possession by redemption, on the plaintiff paying the sum of R43,625-7-0, the amount of the mortgage-debt. Prior to the institution of the suit, the defendant had taken proceedings in the Judge's Court to foreclose the mortgage, and the plaintiff paid the above-mentioned sum into that Court for the defendant, who took it. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from the decree directing him to pay R43,625-7-0 as the mortgage-debt, and obtained a decree by which the decree of the first Court was modified, and the amount payable on redemption was reduced to R22,155. The plaintiff then took out execution of the decree to recover from the defendant the difference between the two sums with interest. Held that the effect of the Appellate Court's decree was to direct restitution of any sum paid under the first Court's decree which was disallowed by the Appellate Court's decree, and that the question was clearly one for determination by the Court executing the decree, and not by separate suit, being expressly provided for by s. 583 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that the decree-holder was entitled to restitution of the amount with interest. Roger v. *Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris, L. 82. ——— Question arising after sale Question as to interest taken by purchaser.—Per MAHMOOD, J.—The scope of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code is limited to matters connected with the execution of the decree between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, and covers all the questions which may arise between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor relating to the execution, etc., of the decree. Questions that may arise after the sale are not, strictly speaking, questions relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, within the meaning of cl. (3), s. 244; but as soon as there has been a sale, the execution of the decree, so far as the decree-holder is concerned, is over, and the question whether the purchaser has purchased anything by the sale is not a question as to the execution of the decree-holder's decree. The amount was refunded without protest by the plaintiffs, who then sued the purchaser and the original judgment-debtor to recover the amount paid by them. Held that the suit would not lie, but that the question was one to be determined under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code by the Court executing the decree. remitted a portion of the decree; that the balance should be paid by a certain date; and that a certain banker had given a note of hand for the payment of interest on the balance at a certain rate. The judgment-debtor then stated as follows: "So long as the petitioner does not pay the money to the decree-holder, —i.e., during the term fixed above,— the banker shall pay interest to the decree-holder; the decree-holder shall not have power to take out execution within the said term, but after the expiry thereof he shall be at liberty to realize his money together with interest from the petitioner and his property by executing the decree: excepting the property sold, all the property mortgaged and attached under the decree shall continue so mortgaged and attached: the decree-holder's pleader has affixed his signature at the foot of this petition showing that he consents to it: the petitioner therefore prays that the case may be struck off as partially executed." The decree-holder subsequently sued the judgment-debtor to recover the balance of the decree, claiming under the arrangement set forth in the petition of April 1877, as a contract superseding the decree. Held, having regard to the terms of that petition, that no new contract superseding the decree was either intended or effected, and the suit was consequently not maintainable. Billings v. *Uncovenanted Service Bank, I. 88. ——— Compromise effected by fraud—Separate suit—Practice—Power of Court to vacate any judgment or order procured by fraud.—The plaintiff held two decrees against the defendant for ₹5,490-1-6 and applied for execution. The defendant, by misrepresentation, induced the plaintiff to receive ₹3,900 only in full satisfaction of those decrees and to withdraw the application. The plaintiff, on discovering the misrepresentation, brought this suit to recover the difference. Held that the suit was barred by s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 (which corresponds with s. 244 of Act X of 1877), the question between the parties being a question relating to the execution of a decree. It is always competent to any Court to vacate any judgment or order, if it be proved that such judgment or order was obtained by manifest fraud; and in the case of orders made in execution, s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 excludes all other remedy. 89. ——— Refund of proceeds of sale on ground of compromise.—When a refund is claimed of the proceeds of an execution sale on the ground that the decree has been satisfied by compromise, the matter ought to be tried under Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11, and not by regular suit. 90. ——— Compromise for larger amount than that claimed—Refusal of execution for larger amount—Suit for amount of compromise.—The parties to a suit agreed upon a compromise, the result of which was that the plaintiff obtained by the decree a greater quantity of land than he had originally claimed, and a decree was drawn up in accordance with the compromise. In the execution proceedings, the defendant raised an objection that the plaintiff could not have execution for a greater quantity of land than he had claimed originally, and the Court executing the decree allowed the objection. No appeal from the Court's order was made, but the plaintiff brought a suit to recover possession of the larger amount of land mentioned in the compromise. Held that the order of the Court executing the decree was erroneous in law, and might properly be reconsidered upon an application for review; but that the present suit came within s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and therefore could not be maintained. 93. ——— Suit for money paid under decree afterwards reversed.—In a suit of 1867 the present defendant obtained a decree for possession of a certain village and mesne profits for one year. Pending an appeal against that decree, execution was stayed on the present plaintiff depositing a note for ₹15,000 as security. The decree was affirmed on appeal, and the present defendant had the note sold in execution, and drew out of the proceeds a sum for mesne profits for subsequent years; but an appeal was preferred in the execution-proceedings to the High Court, which set aside the execution so far as concerned the mesne profits for the years subsequent to that to which the original decree related. The present plaintiff thereupon attached and sold the village to recover the balance: before that amount was paid to the present plaintiff, the present defendant brought a suit against him in the District Court, and there obtained a decree for mesne profits for the subsequent years, and in execution drew the amount of the decree out of Court. In second appeal, however, the High Court, on 26th September 1881, reversed the decree of the District Court, whereupon the present plaintiff applied for restitution under Civil Procedure Code, s. 583, which application was ultimately disallowed. The present suit was brought to recover the amount to which that application related. Held that the suit was not barred by the provisions of Civil Procedure Code, s. 244. 94. ——— Excess sum retained by decree-holder after satisfying decree—Separate suit.—Suit brought to recover the amount to which plaintiff was entitled under a decree passed in favour of himself and defendant as co-plaintiffs in a former suit. It appeared that defendant purchased the property sold in execution of the decree, and that the price for which the salet ook place was sufficient to satisfy the decree. Instead of paying the purchase-money into Court, defendant, with the knowledge and assent of plaintiff, retained the whole sum upon the understanding that he should give the Court a receipt for himself and on behalf of plaintiff, and afterwards pay to plaintiff his portion of the amount decreed. Accordingly, defendant presented a petition to that effect, and obtained a certificate confirming the sale. Defendant having failed to pay plaintiff his portion, the present suit was brought. Upon these facts it was held, in special appeal, that the decree was satisfied by sale of the judgment-debtor's property, and that the execution proceedings were completely at an end, the defendant having been, by the assent of the plaintiff, made his agent for the acknowledgment of the satisfaction of the decree. No subsequent application under the decree could have been entertained by the Court which executed it. Therefore plaintiff's claim was not a matter determinable under s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. Afterwards the judgment-debt was reduced in appeal to a sum far below the amount realized in execution, and the judgment-debtor brought a suit to recover the excess moneys. Held, with reference to Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11, that the suit did not lie, but that the Court which charged with the execution of the decree had full jurisdiction to determine the question and order a refund. 97. ——— Separate suit—Limitation.—In execution of a decree, the property of the judgment-debtor was sold, and on an account being taken, a certain sum therein appearing to be due was paid in December 1868 to the decree-holders. Subsequently, on the application of the judgment-debtor, the account was re-opened, and had been overdrawn by the decree-holders. In 1876 the judgment-debtor applied to the Court which executed the decree for an order for the repayment of the amount overdrawn. Held that, while the application was not barred by any provisions of the Limitation Act, IX of 1871, the English doctrine of laches did not apply in this country; and, further, that the application had been presented in the proper Court, as required by s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 (corresponding with s. 244 of Act X of 1877). The last paragraph of s. 258 means that the Court executing the decree shall not recognize an uncertified payment or adjustment out of Court. It does not prohibit a suit for money paid to a decree-holder out of Court, and the payment of which, not being certified, could not be recognized, and which the decree-holder had not returned, but had misappropriated by taking out execution of the decree a second time and securing the amount in full through the Court. 116. ——— Adjustment of decree—Suit to recover instalments due under a mortgage made in adjustment of a decree.—A suit will not lie to enforce an uncertified agreement of adjustment of a decree against a judgment-debtor the consideration for which is that it shall operate in satisfaction of the decree, as there is, in that case, no consideration which the Court can recognize, and therefore no valid consideration for the judgment-debtor's agreement. The plaintiff was the assignee of a decree obtained by one O K against the defendants on the 5th May 1883. By that decree O K was declared entitled to recover R9,961-5-6, with interest at nine per cent. from the defendants; and payment was ordered to be made to him of the said sum by weekly instalments of R200. In order to secure the payment of the said instalments, the defendants were required to execute a mortgage to O K of certain property with power to him to sell the same, and to execute the decree for the whole amount, in case of default for six months. O K assigned the decree to the plaintiff in the present suit, and subsequently to the assignment (viz., on the 21st July 1883) the defendants executed to the plaintiff the mortgage on which the present suit was brought. The mortgage-deed, after reciting the above facts, stated that the defendants had agreed to satisfy the amount of the decree, and it contained a covenant by the defendants that they would pay R9,961-5-6 with interest at six per cent. by monthly instalments of R400 from the 21st August 1883. The mortgage, therefore, differed from the decree both with regard to the instalments and the rate of interest. The plaintiff sued to recover the sum of R4,207, being the amount of instalments due to him under the said mortgage. Held that the suit would not lie, as the mortgage was an adjustment of the decree, and had not been certified to the Court, as required by s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Thereupon H S and S M brought a suit for declaration of their right of purchase and the recovery of a 10-anna share of the money in the hands of H D and R D. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to the relief sought for. Held, also, that the provisions of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code did not affect the suit, which was brought, not upon the allegation that the decrees were satisfied by the plaintiffs' purchase, but, on the contrary, was founded upon the proposition that the decrees were not so satisfied. Abdul Rahiman v *Khoja Khaki Aruth, I. 1. QUESTIONS IN EXECUTION OF DECREE—continued.

Agreement not to execute regarded as satisfaction of decree—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 257 (a), 258.—M and A were partners, and as such were indebted to H. A died, and subsequently the debt was settled between H on one side and M and A's widow, as guardian of her minor sons, on the other. For a moiety of the debt a bond was passed by M to H and for the other moiety by the widow of A. H filed a suit against M, and got a decree, which was satisfied. H then sued the widow on her bond. The Court allowed her objection that she was not competent to give a bond binding her sons personally, and of its own accord made M a defendant and passed a decree against M and A's estate. H assigned this decree to R, who applied for execution against M. M thereupon filed this suit against H and R, praying for an injunction against the execution of the said decree and for damages against H. He alleged that during the pendency of the suit in which the said decree had been passed, H had agreed that he would not obtain a decree against him, and that, if such a decree were passed, he would not execute it. The lower Appeal Court rejected the plaint, holding that there was no cause of action against the defendant H. On appeal to the High Court, it having been urged that the question was one which could be decided in execution, and that, under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, the present suit would not lie:—Held that the words "relating to execution" in s. 244 must be restricted to "the contents of the order made, or to how far it has been carried out," and do not, therefore, include an agreement not to execute the decree. It being further contended that the agreement raised a question as to the "satisfaction" of the decree, and was, therefore, void without the sanction of the Court,—Held that the satisfaction contemplated by s. 244 must have arisen out of some transactions between the parties subsequent to the decree. 122. ——— Separate suit—Uncertified adjustment—Agreement not to execute decree—Suit by judgment-debtor to stay execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 258.—The defendant in January 1887 obtained a decree against the plaintiff, which he partially executed, and thereupon an adjustment of account took place between the plaintiff and defendant, in which a certain sum was found due by the plaintiff to the defendant, for which sum the plaintiff gave a bond to the defendant in consideration of which the defendant agreed to exonerate the plaintiff from liability for the balance due under the decree. This satisfaction of the decree was not certified to the Court. On 12th March 1890 the defendant applied for further execution of the decree. In a suit for a declaration that the defendant had no right to execute the decree, and for an injunction to restrain him from executing it, it was contended that the suit was barred by s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, by PIGOT and MACPHERSON, JJ. (BANERJEE, J., dissenting), that s. 244 is not limited by s. 258, and that the suit was not maintainable. Where a decree is satisfied by an agreement out of Court, and such satisfaction is not certified to the Court, a subsequent suit on the agreement is not maintainable if the object of the suit is to restrain the decree-holder from executing his decree in contravention of the agreement. Per PIGOT, J.—S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code does not absolutely bar a suit, but prohibits in a separate suit between the same parties to a decree any relief being granted which interferes with the conduct of the execution-proceedings by the Court executing the decree. Per BANERJEE, J.—A suit on the agreement was maintainable. S. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, having enacted that an uncertified adjustment cannot be recognized as an adjustment of the decree by any Court executing the decree, implies that it may be recognized as such by a Court trying the matter as a regular suit. Satisfaction had not been entered up under s. 258, Civil Procedure Code. Held that there must be an inquiry into the truth of the judgment-debtor's allegations, and, if proved, the petition for execution must be dismissed, and,

Subsequently, by a registered ekrarnamah, the decree-holder having received from the judgment-debtors (the plaintiffs) the amount due on account of mesne profits, and also a further consideration of R166, relinquished an 8-anna share of the jote in favour of them. The remaining 8-anna share of the jote was also sold by the decree-holder by a registered kobala to the judgment-debtor. The heirs of the decree-holder on his death applied for execution of the decree, but, notwithstanding the judgment-debtor's objection that the decree could not be executed, it having been satisfied by virtue of the aforesaid ekrarnamah and kobala, they obtained possession of the jote; the adjustment, not having been certified, was not taken into account by the Court executing the decree. On a regular suit by the judgment-debtors for a declaration of title to, as well as for the recovery of, possession of the jote, the defence mainly was that, under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, no separate suit would lie. Held that such a suit was maintainable, and that s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure was no bar to it. Azizan v. *Matuk Lall Sahu, I. of the judgment-debtor—Claims to attached property where representative judgment-debtor claims to hold the attached property as trustee of third party—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 278-283.—The plaintiffs sued for a declaration that certain property was liable to be attached in execution of a decree obtained by them in suit No. 591 of 1888 against the estates of one G, deceased, who had been the head of a math situate in the Dharwar District. The property had been attached in execution, but the defendant, who was G's successor in office, had obtained the removal of the attachment on the ground that the property belonged to the math and not to G personally, and was not, therefore, liable to satisfy the decree. The plaintiffs thereupon brought this suit. The lower Appellate Court passed a decree for the plaintiffs and granted the declaration. On second appeal it was contended that under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code the question ought to have been decided in execution of the decree in suit No. 591 of 1888, and that a separate suit would not lie. Held on the merits that the decree of the lower Appeal Court should be reversed, and the suit dismissed. Per RANADE, J.—Where the representative of a judgment-debtor puts forward a personal claim to property which is attached as assets of the judgment-debtor in his hands, the investigation of the claim must be made in execution under the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. 144. ——— Claim to property attached in execution of decree—"Parties to the suit"—Subsequent suit by a defendant who had been exonerated in a former suit—Maintainability of such suit.—A family consisted of plaintiff's father, first defendant's father and second defendant's grandfather. Plaintiff's brother died, leaving a widow. Plaintiff's father then died and also left a widow (plaintiff's mother), him surviving. The brother's widow brought a suit for maintenance against the representatives of the first and second defendants' branches of the family, plaintiff's mother being joined as third defendant. A decree was passed against the two first-mentioned defendants, but plaintiff's mother was exonerated on the ground that, being a female, she was not liable. In execution of the decree, certain lands were brought to sale and purchased by the brother's widow, who transferred them to another person. At the death of plaintiff's mother, which occurred subsequently, the said lands would have vested in the plaintiff, who now brought this suit claiming that the sales referred to were not binding on her (plaintiff), inasmuch as her mother had not been a party to the decree under which they had taken place. Held that, where a party defendant in a suit is exonerated from such suit, the suit being dismissed against him, and decree passed against a co-defendant in the suit, and in execution of that decree property belonging to, and in the possession of, the defendant who was so exonerated from the suit is attached and sold, the latter is not entitled to maintain a suit for recovery of possession of the property, and the question of his claim to, and to recover possession of, the property is a question falling within s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, so as to debar him from maintaining such suit. Gadicherla China Seetayya v. *Gadicherla Seetayya, I. 145. ——— Parties to suit—Alteration of decree by Court executing decree.—The plaintiff purchased a one-gunda share in estate No. 831 and obtained a decree for possession against the defendants. While the plaintiff's suit was pending, and before he took out execution under the said decree, partition proceedings took place. By the partition-proceedings the defendant's interest in the estate No. 831 was converted into a smaller estate, No. 2218, in lieu of their share of the whole estate. The plaintiff then brought a separate suit to have it declared that the defendants' interest in estate No. 831 had passed to estate No. 2218. Held that the suit was not barred by s. 244 of the Civil

The question that arose in the suit, although it was one between the same parties as those in the former suit, could not be regarded as a question relating to the execution of the decree in the former suit, and therefore the Court in execution proceedings had no authority to make the necessary alteration in the decree. On objection being taken that the suit was not maintainable, the matter being one for determination in execution proceeding under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure,—Held (1) that, although the sale was contrary to the provisions of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, that section being for the benefit only of a particular class of persons, namely, those concerned with a right to redeem mortgaged property, such a sale was not void, but voidable; (2) that the question, being one arising between the parties to the suit wherein the sale was made and relating to execution, could not be raised and decided in a suit, but should be raised and tried only in execution proceedings taken under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the sale set aside if such relief were not, for any reason, barred; (3) that the sale having been confirmed, such confirmation was final, and precluded the mortgagors from seeking the relief to which they would otherwise have been entitled; and (4) that, notwithstanding such sale and confirmation, the mortgagors might not be precluded from suing to redeem the mortgaged property on payment of the amount given credit for by the mortgagee in respect of the sale. II, arts. 122, 179, and 180.*—On the 29th September 1882, a decree was obtained against the defendant's husband in a suit on a mortgage by the latter, dated the 6th April 1880. On the 27th July 1883, an order was made for transfer of the decree to the High Court for execution. On the 8th April 1886, the mortgagee applied to the High Court for execution by attachment of the mortgaged properties, and in the same year an order for attachment was made. The mortgagee died in April 1892, and on the 20th August 1894, the plaintiff (his widow and administratrix) applied to the High Court for an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged properties under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act. On the 5th January 1895, the application was refused on the ground that the mortgaged properties were outside the territorial jurisdiction of the High Court. The plaintiff then instituted the present suit, in which she sought (inter alia) administration of the estate of the mortgagor (who had died before the mortgage suit was filed), and asked for the sale of such properties as might be found subject to such mortgage. Held (affirming the decision of SALE, J.) that the suit was not maintainable by reason of the provisions of ss. 230 and 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, the questions arising in the suit being such as should have been determined in execution of the decree, and not by a separate suit. The decree directed that the Pandara should name a Tambiran of his adhinam for the office, whom, after inquiry as to his fitness, the subordinate Court should appoint. If that Court found him unfit, it was to appoint a Tambiran of that adhinam upon its own selection. In execution the Pandara named a Tambiran for the office, but died before the inquiry as to his fitness. His successor, as head of the adhinam, petitioned to withdraw the nomination, naming another Tambiran. The subordinate Court made an order disallowing the withdrawal, and, after inquiry as to the fitness of the first-named Tambiran, appointed him to the office. The High Court, on the Pandara's appeal, decided the first nomination had been competently withdrawn, and directed an inquiry as to the fitness of the person secondly named, finding on the evidence that the first-named was not fit. Held, on the appeal of the Tambiran first-named, that the question as to his right was one that had arisen between the parties to the suit, and related to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s. 244, sub-s. 158. ——— Decree incapable of execution by reason of events subsequent to decree —Decree giving an option to the parties.—A partition suit brought by a son against his father was referred to arbitration. On the 9th January 1890, the award was published, and, on the 27th March 1890, the defendants moved for and obtained a decree in terms of the award. By this decree it was ordered that, in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, the defendant should pay to him R1,05,000 in the manner therein stated, viz., R40,000 to be paid forthwith, and the balance of R65,000 to be paid "upon the plaintiff delivering to the defendant certain specified property, which included two vessels or buglows, called respectively the Nasri and Sambuk." In no event was defendant to be required to pay the R65,000 before the 15th November 1890. At the date of the decree the vessel Sambuk was at sea on a voyage, and, on the 18th June 1890, while still on the voyage, she was lost. On the 15th November 1890, the plaintiff's attorneys demanded payment of the balance of R65,000. They offered to deliver the other properties specified in the decree, but stated that the vessel Sambuk had been lost. They offered to pay its value, which they estimated at R1,000. The defendants, however, demanded the delivery of the buglow, which they stated to be worth a very large sum. The defendant having, under the circumstances, refused to pay the R65,000, the plaintiff applied for execution of the decree, which was refused. He then obtained a rule calling on the defendant to show cause why the decree of the 27th March should not be amended or rectified by stating therein the amount of money to be paid to the defendant as an alternative, if delivery of the vessel Sambuk could not be made, such delivery having become impossible. That rule was discharged. The plaintiffs then took out a summons calling on the defendant to show cause why an order should be made, under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, directing the plaintiffs to pay to the first defendant, in lieu of the delivery of the vessel Sambuk, such sum of money as might be fixed by the Court as the value of or compensation for the loss of the vessel Sambuk in the decree mentioned, and why an order should not be made that on payment of such sum and delivery of the other properties mentioned in the decree which the plaintiffs were to deliver under the decree to the first defendant on payment by the latter to them of R65,000 the first defendant should pay to the plaintiffs R65,000 and interest thereon from the 15th day of November 1890, mentioned in the said decree, and, in the event on its being held that the first defendant was not bound to pay the said sum of R65,000, then why an order should not be made that the property mentioned in the decree which the plaintiffs were to hand over to the first defendant on payment of R65,000 should not be retained, used, and appropriated, absolutely by the plaintiffs for their own use and benefit, freed and discharged of all claims on the part of the first defendant, and why the first defendant should not be directed to withdraw the claim made by him to a debt of R22,000, or thereabouts, mentioned in an affidavit of one Ahmed bin Essa Khaliffa, and why such further or other order as to the Court might seem fit and the justice of the case may require should not be made in the premises and in relation to the properties mentioned in the decree which were to be delivered over by the plaintiffs to the first defendant on receiving from him R65,000, and why in the alternative this suit should not be restored and placed on the board for trial. It was contended by the plaintiff that the questions raised in the summons were questions arising in execution to be dealt with by a Judge in chambers under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that a fresh suit was not necessary. Held, dismissing the summons, that the application was not one in execution of a decree, nor was the question one arising in the course of execution, but that the decree having become incapable of execution, the summons asked the Judge to decide what were the rights of the parties in consequence of its non-execution. Held, also (as to the part of the summons asking for restoration of the suit), that the matters in issue in the suit had been fully heard and determined, and the rights of all parties had been settled by the decree, and consequently there was nothing further to be tried. The Court could not in this suit, after passing a decree, proceed to ascertain the rights of the parties under a state of facts quite different from those which appeared in the pleadings and arising subsequently to the decree. 161. ——— Transfer of decree by operation of law—Representative of original decree-holder—Right to appeal against order refusing execution.—R died in May 1859, leaving his property to his executors in trust for the appellant P, and he directed that the property should be assigned by them to the appellant as soon as he came of age. In August 1868, the executors filed this suit against L as manager of certain landed property belonging to the Hallai Bhattia caste, and known as Mahajan Wadi to recover certain loans made by them as executors to him as manager of the said wadi. On the 11th May 1870, while this suit was pending, the executors assigned all the property of their testator to the appellant P. By the deed of assignment they assigned to him, inter alia, "all moveable property, debts, claims, and things in action whatsoever vested in them as such executors." No steps were taken, subsequently to this assignment, to make the assignee P a party to the suit, which proceeded without amendment. On the 23rd January 1873, a decree was passed for the plaintiffs on the record for R31,272-13-5, and it was declared that the said sum should be a first charge on the rents and income of the said wadi. Subsequently to this decree, L opened an account in the name of the appellant P, and from time to time made payments to him on account of the decree. The last of these payments was made on the 19th November 1884. None of these payments were certified to the Court. In 1885 the respondent V was appointed to the office of manager of the Hallai Bhattia caste in the place of L, the original defendant in the suit. On the 4th January 1886, his attorneys wrote to the appellant's attorneys offering to pay the appellant the balance due to him under the decree. Subsequently, however, he refused to make any payment to the appellant, whereupon the appellant applied for execution of the decree against him as manager of the said wadi. He claimed to be a transferee of the decree under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). His application was refused by the Judge in chambers. Held that the appellant was a transferee of the decree within the meaning of s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code. The decree had been transferred to him "by operation of law." As such, he was entitled to sue out execution, and was to be regarded as the representative of the original decree-holder within the meaning of cl. Subsequently, M transferred the decree to other persons, and the co-transferors applied under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code to have their names substituted for those of the original decree-holders. The judgment-debtor opposed the application on the grounds that his name had not been substituted for those of the original decree-holders, who had transferred to him, and that the transfers to M were inoperative, as the instruments of transfer had not been registered at the place where the substantial portion of the mortgaged property was situate, in accordance with s. 20 of the Registration Act of 1877. It appeared that no notice had been issued to M under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code, that he was dead, and that his legal representatives had not been cited as required by law. The effect of the decision was to decree the claim against the estate of the widow, and to exempt from liability the judgment-debtors personally and the property which they had purchased. In execution of the decree, the said property was sold, and was purchased by the decree-holder; one of the judgment-debtors had died during the execution-proceedings, and her son was duly impleaded as her representative, and he raised no objection to the attachment and sale. Subsequently this son sold his rights and interests in the property; and his vendee sued the decree-holder to recover possession on the ground that, the decree being limited to the estate of the childless Hindu widow, the defendant as purchaser could not acquire by the sale any rights superior to those of the widow; that those rights had expired upon her death, and left nothing to be sold, and that on her death the property devolved upon the plaintiff's vendor, and had thence passed to the plaintiff. Held that the plaintiff's vendor was a party to the suit within the meaning of s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, and that he not having objected to the sale in execution of the decree, neither he nor the plaintiff could go behind that sale or claim the property upon any title which he might have asserted in the execution-proceedings; and that the suit was barred by s. 244. Ram Ghulam v. *Hazaru Kuar, I. The Court, without entering into the merits, dismissed the suit on the ground that it was not maintainable, as the same relief would have been obtained under the provisions of s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861. Held by the Judicial Committee, reversing such judgment, that there had been a miscarriage, as that section did not apply, the suit by B against C and D being to recover damages for a tort alleged to have been committed by C and D, and that the latter was not a party to the original suit or bound by the judgment in that suit. He, however, did not appear, and the decree of the first Court being reversed, a decree, in which H was included, was given for possession. H subsequently brought a suit to have his title to the property declared making S a defendant, and obtained a decree declaring his title. 194. ——— Party alleged to have been wrongly substituted in execution-proceedings—Estoppel.—A, executrix to the estate of her husband, executed a mortgage-bond, partly for money due on bonds executed by her husband in his life-time and partly for payment of Government revenue due from the estate. She then adopted a son, B, under authority granted by the will of her husband. After the adoption, a suit was brought on the mortgage-bond against A, and a decree was passed in terms of a compromise for payment by instalments, the mortgaged property remaining hypothecated as before. Default was made in payment of the instalments, and the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree from time to time and obtained partial satisfaction. In the meantime, the Court of Wards took the management of the estate from A, and in the course of execution-proceedings the original decree-holder died, and on an application for execution in August 1888, N, then a minor, was substituted as decree-holder, and B was substituted as judgment-debtor in the place of A. The present application for execution was made in July 1893, the minor N being represented by a sub-manager under the Court of Wards. It was decided against N, and N then appealed. An objection was raised that, assuming the liability of the estate of B, such liability could not be enforced in execution of this decree, as the order for substitution was unauthorized by law and a mere nullity, and B being neither a party, nor representative of a party, to the suit, the present appeal would not lie under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the Court had power to make a substitution of the suit was reversed on appeal, and the defendants in that suit were ordered to pay a certain sum to G with costs. G then applied for restitution of her house which had been sold under the decree reversed, and eventually obtained an unconditional order for possession, H being left to any remedy open to him in respect of the purchase-money. G having obtained possession of the house, H brought a suit against her to recover the purchase-money. Held that, notwithstanding s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, he was entitled in this suit to recover the purchase-money, as money received to his use, the consideration for it having failed. H was not, in his character as an auction-purchaser, a party to the execution proceedings, and for the purpose of the suit was to be treated as a third person. A usufructuary mortgagee of the property who had been a party to the suit, and in whose favour the decree was, in so far that it declared his right to continue in possession, applied to be restored to possession, and obtained an order in his favour. On appeal to the Subordinate Judge, he reversed the decision of the first Court. pending the appeal to the Privy Council, he had transferred the shares to G, his counsel in the case, who had failed to restore them, and he prayed "that the said person might be brought upon the record, and that execution for recovery of the said shares might be given against him." The Court passed an order upon this application, calling on G to show cause why he should not be called upon to restore the shares made over to him by R, and he thereupon filed an answer denying that he was the custodian of the shares and alleging that he was their purchaser for value. The Court passed an order directing that G's name should be placed on the record, so that the decree might be executed against him. Held that the question being one between two judgment-debtors inter se, and not between the parties arrayed against each other as decree-holders of the one part and judgment-debtors or their representatives on the other, the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code were not applicable to the case; that G could not be regarded as a "representative" of R within the meaning of that section. Prior to sale, the judgment-debtors made an application to be declared insolvents, and obtained an order under Stat. 11 & 12 Vic., c. 21, s. 7, by which their property was vested in the Official Assignee. An application was then made by the Official Assignee to the Court in which the execution of the decree was pending, for the release of the property from attachment, and that the property might be made over to him. The Court dismissed the application. On appeal the District Judge reversed the first Court's order. Held that the matter did not come before the Court of first instance under s. 49 of Stat. 11 & 12 Vic., c. 21, inasmuch as that section refers to cases where the insolvent's schedule has been filed, and to debts or demands admitted therein, and, in the present case, no schedule had been filed at the time of the Official Assignee's application; and the Court could therefore only entertain the application under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to the execution of decrees. Held that the Official Assignee could not be held to be a representative of the judgment-debtors within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and his application was not one relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree. Held that the Court of first instance had only jurisdiction in the matter under s. 278 of the Code, and disposed of it under that section, and that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. A Hindu widow mortgaged certain properties, and afterwards by an ikrarnamah made them over to B, the next heir. The ikrarnamah contained a condition that B was to be liable for the widow's debts. Subsequently the mortgagee brought a suit against the widow on the mortgage and joined B as a party on the ground that he was in possession of the mortgaged properties. That suit resulted in a money decree being passed on appeal by the High Court against the widow personally, the property in the hands of B being held not to be liable. The case was taken on appeal to the Privy Council, and pending the hearing of that appeal, the widow died, and B was brought on the record as her legal representative. The decree of the High Court was ultimately confirmed by the Privy Council. In execution of the decree, it was sought to make B liable to satisfy the amount out of the properties which he had obtained under the ikrarnamah, the mortgagee not having been aware of the conditions of that document before the decree of the High Court. Held that, so far as these properties were concerned, he was not the legal representative of the widow, as he inherited them as heir-at-law of her husband, and that his title to them under the ikrarnamah was not that of a "representative" within the meaning of cl. (c) of s. 244. Held, further, that the question of B's liability under the ikrarnamah did not fall within the scope of the provisions of cl. (c) of s. 244, as being a question to be decided between the "parties" to the suit, as, although B was a party to the suit, the only claim against him was that the property in his hands was liable as having been previously hypothecated; and as the suit was dismissed, so far as that claim was concerned, it was not a question relating to the execution of the decree. substituted as his representatives. In execution of the decree, only the share which had stood recorded in the name of the deceased judgment-debtor, and which was in possession of J and L as his representatives, was sold; and the decree-holder then applied for sale of the other shares which had been attached. To this B objected under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, claiming to be the owner of the shares in question. Before the hearing of her objection she died, and L applied to have his name brought upon the record in her place for the purpose of supporting the objections. An order having been passed disallowing the objections which had been filed by B, L applied to the High Court. A preliminary objection was taken on behalf of the decree-holder to the hearing of the appeal on the ground that, as the first Court's order related to L's claim as the heir of B to have the shares entered in her name released from attachment, it must be regarded as passed under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, and as conclusive, subject to L's bringing a suit to establish his right. On the other side it was contended that, L being the representative of the deceased judgment-debtor K, the first Court's order must be regarded as passed under s. 244 of the Code, and the appeal would therefore lie. Held that the preliminary objection must prevail, and the first Court's order must be regarded as passed under s. 281, and not under s. 244 of the Code, inasmuch as L's claim, which was rejected by it, was nothing more than to come in as B's representative for the purpose of supporting her objections; and it was in right of a third person, whose interest he asserted to have passed to him, that he prayed admission to the proceedings, and his character was wholly distinct from that he filled as the legal representative of his deceased father. Because L happened, for the purpose of the execution proceeding, to be his father's legal representative, and to be liable to satisfy the decree to the extent of any assets which might have come to his hands, it did not follow that any rights claimed by him through a third person must be dealt with, and could only be dealt with, between him and the decree-holder in the execution-proceedings. Wahed Ali v. *Jumaee, 11 B. In 1881 application for transfer of the decree to the Court at Moradabad for execution was made, and it was granted, but no steps were taken thereupon. On the 12th June 1883 A died. On the 30th April 1884, the defendants again applied to the Court at Peshawar, treating their judgment-debtor as being then alive, for a fresh certificate to execute their decree in the Moradabad district, and obtained it. On the 20th August 1885, they made an application to the District Judge of Moradabad for execution of their decree, and in it it was stated that the application was "for execution against Adjudhia Prasad and after his death against Angan Lal, the own brother, and Durga Kuar, widow, and Lachman Prasad and others, sons of Ajudha Prasad, residents of Kundarki, and the said Angan Lal, at present residing at Umballa and employed in the Commissariat-Transport Department, judgment-debtors." It was further stated that "the judgment-debtor was dead, and his heirs are living and in possession of his estate, and Angan Lal himself has realized ₹9,637-4-9 due to the deceased judgment-debtor from the Commissariat Department of Calcutta and appropriated the same; therefore to that extent the person of the said Angan Lal was liable." Notification of this application was issued to Angan Lal as also to the other persons named therein. Angan Lal objected to the application as against him, stating that, although he was the brother of A, deceased, yet he always lived separate and carried on business separately; and that there was no connection or partnership between him and the deceased judgment-debtor, and that he had no property of the deceased in his possession. Further, that as A left issue, it was wrong to call him an heir to A, and take out execution process against him. In reply to these objections, the judgment-creditors (defendants) did not contend that Angan Lal was the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, but treated him as a person in possession of a sum of money belonging to the deceased, and, therefore, liable to the extent of the sum so received by him. The Subordinate Judge, holding that Angan Lal was the brother of the deceased and had realized the amount of the Commissariat Office, which he failed to prove that he paid to the deceased, ordered execution to proceed against him. Angan Lal then instituted this suit to set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge. It was contended that the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge were held under s. 244 of the Code, and, therefore, no separate suit would lie. Held that the contention must fail, as the Subordinate Judge never treated the proceedings in execution against Angan Lal upon the footing that he was the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. Mahomed Aga Ali Khan v. *Balmukund, L. 222. ——— Representatives of judgment-debtor—Death of party to suit before final decree in appeal—Subsequent proceedings in execution taken against representatives of such party.—A decree was given to the defendant (then plaintiff) in 1856 for possession of land and mesne profits against numerous defendants, including one Dawan Rai. Some of the judgment-debtors, including Dawan Rai, appealed to the Sadr Diwani Adalat, but before the decree of the Sadr Diwani Adalat was passed, Dawan Singh died. No application was made to put any representative of Dawan Rai on the record; but in 1881 (the amount of the mesne profits payable under the decree having been finally determined in 1877), certain persons were made parties, as representatives of Dawan Rai, to various proceedings in execution of the decree for mesne profits, which ended in the sale of certain property which had been of Dawan Rai in his lifetime. Subsequently the said representatives of Dawan Rai brought a suit to recover the property sold as above described on the ground that they were no parties to the decree under execution. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to bring such a suit, and it was not barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Whilst that suit was pending, one K D took out execution of a money-decree which he had obtained in 1871 against defendant No. 3, and put up for sale the mehal Olipore, which was purchased by the father of the plaintiff A, who eventually obtained possession of it through the Court. The plaintiff B purchased privately the mehal Ekdhala from the mortgagors and from M, some time after the date of the decree on the mortgage. That decree was in course of execution when the mortgagee died, and his estate came into the hands of the Administrator-General, who, on 13th August 1878, sold the decree to G, defendant No. 1. After this sale, several applications were made to have the name of G substituted for that of the original decree-holder, but in none of these applications was any further step taken towards execution of the decree, or any order made for substitution of the name of G, until 18th July 1885, when, after notice to the defendants under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code, G's name was substituted as decree-holder, and execution was taken out against the mortgaged property including Olipore and Ekdhala. The plaintiffs each claimed the mehal they had respectively purchased, but their claims were disallowed. In suits brought by the plaintiffs for a declaration of their right to hold the properties free of the mortgage, the Court found that G was only a benamidar so far as his purchase of the mortgage-decree was concerned. Held the plaintiff A, being the purchaser at a public sale in execution of a decree, was not the representative of the judgment-debtors, the mortgagors, within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code; but the case was different with respect to plaintiff B, who claimed by private purchase, and must be considered the representative of the judgment-debtors within the meaning of that section. Dinendronath Sannyal v. *Raj Coomar Ghose, L. There is no reason for excluding from its signification an execution-purchaser of the judgment-debtor's interest. Held, therefore, by the Full Bench that the cases of Gour Sundar Lahiri v. *Hem Chunder Chowdhury, I. The objection was allowed, and the decree-holder then sued for a declaration that the property belonged to the mortgagor, judgment-debtor, and was liable to attachment and sale in execution of the decree. Held that, as no claim in the former suit was made against the objector personally, or in a representative character, but, as regards her, the only claim was virtually for a declaration that she was not entitled to the hypothecated property, the decree affected her only so far as it negatived her alleged interest in that property, and, so far as it was sought to be enforced against other property, she was a stranger to that suit, and her objection must be taken to have been decided under ss. 278 and 280 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the present suit was rightly brought under s. 283 and was not barred by s. 244. Kameshwar Pershad v. *Run Bahadur Singh, I. When the void part of an agreement can be properly separated from the rest, the latter does not become invalid; but where the parties themselves treat debts—void as well as valid—as a lump sum, the Court will regard the contract as an integral one and wholly void, upon which neither the principal nor the sureties can be sued. On the 11th December 1882, the decree-holder, alleging default in payment of the instalments, applied for the execution of compromise. Held that such an agreement could not be treated as an instalment decree, and, as such, capable of execution. Debi Rai v. *Gokal Prasad, I. 10. ——— Settlement of decree without sanction by giving promissory note payable on demand—Note renewed from time to time—Suit on note.—On the 4th December 1889, the plaintiffs obtained a decree against the defendants for R941. The decree was made payable in eight days, i.e., on or before the 12th December 1889. On the 9th December 1889, i.e., before the decree was capable of execution, it was settled by the defendants' paying R600 in cash and passing a promissory note for R341 payable on demand and carrying interest at 3 per cent. per mensem. The decree was satisfied and handed over to defendants, and plaintiffs also endorsed the summons to that effect. That compromise was not sanctioned by the Court. On the 9th November 1892, and again on the 4th November 1895, the plaintiffs made up their account with defendants and obtained new promissory notes from them for the amount found due in renewal of the note passed in 1889. The present suit was brought on the note passed on the 4th November 1895, which was for R815, and carried interest at 3 per cent. per mensem. Held that the

note sued on fell within the purview of s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, and was void and unenforceable under the provisions of that section. The consideration for the note given in 1889 was the agreement of the plaintiffs to accept it in satisfaction of the decretal balance due to them. If that agreement was void, the note given for the void consideration was void also. The note was not in fact the agreement, but was given in performance of the agreement. 11. ——— Havala or undertaking by a third party to pay decreed debt for the judgment-debtor—Agreement incorporating the havala in substitution of the decree, capable of execution at the date of the agreement—Suit on such agreement.—The plaintiff obtained a money-decree against the defendant H P, and, in execution thereof, attached his property. Thereupon, at H P's request, five persons gave a havala or oral undertaking to pay the amount of the decree, and the attachment was removed. It appeared that some payment was made under the havala. Subsequently H P and the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 executed a bond to the plaintiff reciting the havala, the payment thereunder, and agreeing to pay the amount of the decree with interest. Neither the havala nor the bond was brought to the notice of the Court for sanction and the decree, which was capable of execution, was then destroyed. The plaintiff now sued to recover the debt due under the bond. The District Judge was of opinion that the part of the bond which contained a promise to pay interest was void, but that in respect of the principal amount of the decree it was not void. On reference to the High Court,—Held that the whole bond was void. The havala was an agreement such as is contemplated in para. 1 of s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, and was void for want of the sanction of the Court under that section. The bond, regarded as one in consideration of the havala, or as an agreement for satisfaction of the decree, was also void under para. 2 of the same sections for a similar reason. The decree was subsequently modified by substituting ₹91-2-6 for ₹30-7-0. On the 3rd October 1885, the parties entered into an agreement whereby (inter alia) the time to pay the decreed debt was extended to five years from that date, but no sanction of the Court was obtained. On the 18th February 1888, the parties applied to the Court to sanction the agreement of 1885. On reference to the High Court,—Held that the agreement in question required the Court's sanction under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, for want of which it was void, so far as it related to the judgment-debt, and that the sanction could not be given at the date it was applied for. 13. ——— Agreement for, or to give, time for satisfaction of judgment-debt—Agreement without sanction of Court—Illegal contract—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Consideration.—The plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant, under which the judgment-debtor was liable to pay the amount by instalments with interest at 4 per cent. Eventually, the defendant failing to pay, the plaintiff accepted a bond executed jointly by the defendant and T, his father, by which they both became liable for the amount of the decree with interest at 18¾ per cent. In a suit on the bond, it was contended that the bond was void under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, as being an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt made for no consideration, and without the sanction of the Court, and also without such sanction providing for payment of a sum in excess of the amount due under the decree; that it was void within the meaning of s. 23 of the Contract Act as being forbidden by, or of a nature to, defeat the provisions of s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code; and that, consequently, the suit on it was not maintainable. Held that s. 257A of the Code was not applicable. That section was framed to prohibit the enforcement of an agreement of the kind mentioned therein if made without the sanction of the Court in execution of the decree, but was not intended to take away the right of parties of entering into a fresh contract, either for payment of the judgment-debt, to give time for such payment, or for the payment of a larger sum than may be covered by the decree if it be for a proper consideration. In this case the consideration for the bond was a lawful consideration; it could not be said that because satisfaction of the decree was not certified to the Court, there was no consideration. Held, also, the bond was not void under s. 23 of the Contract Act. Semble—The words "any law" in that section refer to some substantive law, and not to an adjective law, such as the Procedure Code is. On the next day K paid S R200 in part satisfaction of the decree, and induced K to accept a bond by which he (S) gave up the costs, and by which K was to pay the balance of the decree with interest at the end of eight months. S sued upon the bond. K contended that the bond was void under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the suit would not lie. Held that the suit would lie. Since the amendment made in s. 258 by Act VII of 1888 such payments or adjustments may be recognized by a Civil Court, except when executing the decree, and, therefore, a suit based upon such a payment or adjustment should be admitted. It only prevents such agreements being enforced in a Court of Law. Where such an agreement to give time, never sanctioned by the Court as required by s. 257A, formed part of the consideration for a bond, and had actually been enjoyed by the obligee of the bond,—Held that such consideration, not being in its nature illegal, and not having as a fact failed, there was no reason why the obligor should not enforce the terms of the bond. The decree-holder attached and prepared to bring to sale certain villages of the judgment-debtor. These villages were included in a mortgage subsequently executed by the judgment-debtor in favour of third parties. Both before and after the mortgage the decree-holder received from the zamindar certain sums in consideration of his agreeing to postponements of the sale; also it was agreed between them at a date subsequent to the mortgage that interest should be computed at a higher rate than that provided by the decree. Subsequently the decree-holder sought to bring the land to sale, and in computing the amount then due gave credit for none of the sums so received and calculated interest at the enhanced rate. The mortgagee objected that the computation was erroneous in both these respects, and the District Judge upheld his objection. The Judge, however, refused to enter into the question of the adjustment, as the terms of it had not been certified to the Court under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the Judge was in error; that it was the duty of K, on applying for the release of C, to certify the adjustment to the Court; that it would be unjust to allow him to take advantage of his own omission to do so; and that, not having done so, the presumption against him was that the decree had been satisfied in full; but that, under the circumstances, it would be the most equitable course to direct the Judge to enquire into the terms of the adjustment. The terms of this compromise were not certified to the Court under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that this compromise, having been effected after the decree in favour of B had been reversed, did not come within the meaning of s. 206, and was, therefore, a good defence to the suit of H. A considerable remission was allowed to the judgment-debtor, and some reduction was made in the amount of interest payable. The kistbundi contained an express proviso that in default of payment of three consecutive kists, the whole amount due under the bond was to become at once realizable; and it also provided that in case of default the amounts due were to be recovered by execution, to which the judgment-debtor was to make no objection. Certain instalments having fallen due, the judgment-creditor sought to enforce the kistbundi by execution. Held that he was entitled to do so; that he was not bound to bring a regular suit; and that a provision in the bond by which payment might be enforced against property which could not have been attached and sold in execution of the decree did not prevent the decree-holder from proceeding by execution so long as he did not seek to enforce that provision. The compromise mentioned in the decree provided that the amount in dispute should be paid in ten instalments, from 1284 to 1294 Fusli, the first to be paid on the 27th May 1877 (1284 Fusli), and the remaining nine instalments on Jaith Puranmashi of each succeeding Fusli year. On the last September 1883, the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, alleging that the first four instalments had been paid, but not any of the succeeding instalments, and they claimed to recover, under the terms of the decree, the fifth and all the remaining instalments in a lump sum. The judgment-debtors contended that the application was barred by limitation, as they had not paid a single instalment, and more than three years had elapsed from the date of the first default; and that, even if the first four instalments had been paid, such payments could not be recognized by the Court as they had not been certified. Held that recognition of such instalments was not barred by the terms of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Sham Lal v. *Kanhia Lal, I. of a decree, dated the 14th June 1878, the parties, on the 11th January 1881, entered into an agreement, which was registered, and filed in the Court executing the decree. The deed recited that the decree was under execution, and that a mortgage bond, dated the 1st December 1873, in favour of the judgment-debtor by a third party, had been attached and advertised for sale, and that the decree-holder and judgment-debtor had arranged the following method of satisfying the decree: that the judgment-debtor should make over the said bond to the decree-holder, in order that he might bring a suit thereon at his own expense against the obligor, and realize the amount secured by the bond, and out of the amount realized satisfy the decree under execution with costs and future interest, together with all costs of the suit to be brought against the obligor, and together with a sum due by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder under a note of hand for ₹250 with interest; and other details which need not be stated. On the same day that this deed was executed, the decree-holder filed a petition in the Court, to the effect that under the agreement an arrangement had been made for payment of the judgment-debt, by which the judgment-debtor made over to him the bond advertised for sale in order that the petitioner should file a suit under it at his own cost against the obligor, and realize the debt due under the decree in execution with interest and costs; and he prayed that the sale to be held that day might be postponed, and the application for execution struck off for the present, and the previous attachment maintained, and stating that after realization of the amount entered in the bond advertised for sale, an application for execution would be duly filed. On this the order was that the execution case be struck off the file and the attachment maintained. On the 24th December 1883, the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, alleging that the judgment-debtor had failed to make over the bond to him according to the agreement. The judgment-debtor objected that the decree was no longer capable of execution, having been superseded by the agreement of the 11th January 1881, and that the application was barred by limitation, the previous application being dated the 9th November 1880. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That the agreement of the 11th January 1881 did not contemplate, and had not the effect of, cancelling the decree and substituting for it a new contract, inasmuch as the deed contained nothing to the effect that the decree was superseded, and all it did was to provide means by which the decree, together with another small sum due by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder, might be satisfied without having recourse to the sale of the bond attached, and the effect would be that, on realization, satisfaction would be certified in whole or in part to the Court executing the decree. Further, if the arrangement was to be regarded as within the meaning of an adjustment of the decree under s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, it could only be recognized by the Court when certified by the decree-holder or judgment-debtor; and in this case the only certification which was made was by the decree-holder, by his petition of the 11th January 1881, which was in respect of a temporary arrangement under which the decree remained in force. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the agreement of the 11th January 1881 was intended by the parties as a performance of the obligation created by the decree, by substituting a fresh obligation founded upon contract, but that the deed could not be regarded as such an adjustment of the decree as satisfied the requirements of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, because the creditors, whilst admitting the creation of a separate contract, took care to say that the decree was to be kept alive, and the attachment thereunder was to subsist; and that, therefore, the certification of the adjustment was inadequate and could not be recognized in executing the decree. L. R., 6 Bom., 146,* overruled. A suit will not lie to enforce an uncertified agreement of adjustment of a decree against a judgment-debtor, the consideration for which is, that it shall operate in satisfaction of the decree; as there is, in that case, no consideration which the Court can recognize, and therefore no valid consideration for the judgment-debtor's agreement. The plaintiff was the assignee of a decree obtained by one O K against the defendants on the 5th May 1883. By that decree, O K was declared entitled to recover ₹9,961-5-6, with interest at nine per cent. from the defendants; and payment was ordered to be made to him of the said sum by weekly instalments of ₹200. In order to secure the payment of the said instalments, the defendants were required to execute a mortgage to O K of certain property, with power to him to sell the same and to execute the decree for the whole amount, in case of default, for six months. O K assigned the decree to the plaintiff in the present suit, and subsequently to the assignment (viz., on the 21st July 1883) the defendants executed to the plaintiff the mortgage on which the present suit was brought. The mortgage-deed, after reciting the above facts, stated that the defendants had agreed to satisfy the amount of the decree, and it contained a covenant by the defendants that they would pay ₹9,961-5-6, with interest at six per cent. by monthly instalments of ₹400 from the 21st August 1883.

69. ——— Decree payable by instalments—Limitation—Waiver by decree-holder—Payment out of Court—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), sch. II, art. 179 (6).—An application for execution of a decree payable by instalments was resisted by the judgment-debtor as barred by limitation on the ground that nothing had been paid under the decree, and that the application was made more than three years after the first instalment fell due. The decree-holder pleaded that he had waived the default in payment of the first instalment by accepting such payment shortly afterwards, and that the application was in time, having been made within three years from the date when the second instalment was due. Held that the decree-holder could not raise this plea, as the payment in question had not been certified to the Court executing the decree, and therefore could not, under s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, be recognized. *Sham Lal v. The prohibition to take cognizance of adjustments and payments referred to in s. 258 above-mentioned relates only to the Court executing the decree. KALYAN SINGH v. KAMTA PRASAD . . I. L. 71. ——— Landlord and tenant—Mirasi tenure declared in decree—Subsequent payment of rent by defendants not a payment under decree, but under the tenure—Payment not certified to Court.—The plaintiff sued the defendants to recover possession of certain land. The defendants pleaded they were mirasi tenants and entitled to possession as long as they paid the rent. The suit was compromised, and by a consent decree it was declared that the defendants held by mirasi tenure, and they were directed to pay rent "as before," or in default the plaintiff should take possession. The plaintiff afterwards applied in execution for possession, alleging that the rent had not been paid. The defendants pleaded that it had been paid, and the plaintiff rejoined that, even if it had been paid, the Court could not recognize the payment, as it had not been certified under s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that, under the circumstances, the rent, when paid, was to be deemed as paid under the mirasi tenure and not under the decree, and, therefore, s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply, and payment need not be certified. The plaintiff subsequently applied to have his name registered in the Collectorate, but was opposed by the defendant, who, it appeared, also allowed the amlahs of the estate to continue to use his sole name. Held that the Court had under the circumstances jurisdiction under s. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code to attach the defendant's property until he had obeyed the decree by having the joint names of himself and the plaintiff inserted in all documents belonging to the estate. The ground of their application was that D had recovered a decree on certain hundis which had been fraudulently transferred to him by K and P. The Munsif, holding that the question of the ownership of the decree could not be determined in the miscellaneous department, referred the applicants to regular suits. These were accordingly instituted, and the transfer to D declared to be fraudulent and colourable. Held that the question of the title of the plaintiffs as against D to have their debt paid out of the money in deposit ought to have been decided in the Court in which the money was in deposit. In 1879, by an order under s. 326 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the immoveable property of the judgment-debtor was placed under the management of the Collector. Before this order was made, and during the period when the judgment-debtor's property was in charge of the Collector, various applications for execution were made by the decree-holders. Finally, in 1896, about ten years after the last preceding application, the decree-holders applied for execution of their decree shortly after the property had been released by the Collector. Held that, as regards the immoveable property of the judgment-debtors, against which execution was sought, the application was not barred by limitation, inasmuch as the decree-holders had no remedy by execution against that property until the Collector's management had ceased. 1. ——— Suit against public officer—Notice of action, Form of.—In a suit against the Deputy Magistrate of A and the Deputy Magistrate of B for damages for having in bad faith and maliciously caused the plaintiff to be confined in hajut, the plaintiff served a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code on the defendants, to the effect that the Deputy Magistrate, acting in concert with the intention of oppressing the plaintiff, had wilfully, improperly, and illegally kept him in hajut and thereby caused him injury. Held that the notice sufficiently stated the cause of action within the terms of s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, it not being necessary that a notice under that section should be read with the strictness with which a plaint should be read in regard to the statement of the cause of action. PARBUTTI CHURUN MOZOOMDAR v. NOBIN CHUNDER SEN . . . . . 13 C. L. R., 195

2.——— Suit against an officer of Government—Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869), s. 32—Suit ex contractu—Notice of suit.—S. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), which requires notice to be given to a public officer two months before the institution of a suit against him, does not apply where the suit is one ex contractu. Shahunshah Begum v. *Fergusson, I. 3.——— Suit against public officer in respect of acts done by him in his official capacity—Notice of suit—Suit for damages against a public officer—Trespass—Misjoinder of causes of action—Amendment of plaint.—The plaintiff sued the defendant, a public officer, to recover damages for two distinct acts (viz., wrongful arrest and trespass) alleged to have been illegally and maliciously done by the defendant on two different occasions, and claimed one lump sum as damages for both the acts; no permission to amend the plaint was asked for in the lower Court. On the 21st of October 1895, the plaintiff instituted this suit, having on the 18th of September 1895 served the defendant with a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held that the former act (viz., the plaintiff's arrest) was an act done by the defendant in his official capacity and was clearly of the kind contemplated by s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, under which two months' notice to the defendant would be necessary previous to the institution of the suit; and that the suit was rightly dismissed by the lower Court for want of such notice. Shahunshah Begum v. Fergusson, I. L. R., 7 Calc., 499, distinguished. Quære—Whether the latter act (viz., the trespass into the plaintiff's house), on the allegations in the plaint, was an act done by the Magistrate in his official capacity, and whether a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code would be necessary previous to suing for damages for such an act. Held, further, that as the two acts were mixed up together in the plaint and one lump sum claimed as damages for both, and as no permission to amend the plaint was asked for in the lower Court so as to convert the suit into one for damages with reference to the trespass only, the plaint ought not to be allowed to be amended on appeal to the High Court. JOGENDRA NATH ROY v. PRICE [I. L. R., 24 Calc., 584

4.——— Suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council—Notice—Public Demands Recovery Act (Bengal Act VII of 1880), ss. 8, 9, 20—Sale for default in payment of costs of realizing Government revenue.—S. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code provides that "No suit shall be instituted against the Secretary of State in Council, or against a public officer in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity, until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been, in the case of the Secretary of State in Council, delivered to, or left at the office of, a Secretary to the Local Government or the Collector of the District," etc. The plaintiff had instituted a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council to set aside a certain sale of the plaintiff's property (possession of which had been given to the purchaser), but had not given him the notice prescribed by s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code. The first Court (AMEER ALI, J.) gave the plaintiff a decree. Held on appeal (reversing the decision of AMEER ALI, J.) that whether or not the words "in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity" relate only to a public officer and not to the Secretary of State, no suit whatever is maintainable against the Secretary of State, unless the notice prescribed by s. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure has been given; and that therefore the present suit could not be maintained. 20. ——— Main ground of decree affecting all defendants.—The plaintiff sued on a mortgage bond executed by the first defendant. The second defendant, who claimed the property under a mortgage from the first defendant, was admitted a defendant on his own application, but afterwards excluded from the suit. Before this was done, he had incurred certain costs, which, by the Munsif's decree, he was ordered to bear himself. Upon appeal by the first defendant the Civil Judge found that the mortgage bond sued upon was not proved, dismissed the suit, and ordered the plaintiff to pay all costs, those of the second defendant included. Held that, under s. 337 of the Civil Procedure Code, it was competent to the Civil Judge so to modify the Munsif's decree, as the main ground of the whole decision —viz., the validity of the mortgage bond—affected all the defendants in common, and the appeal of the first defendant and the decision of the Appellate Court had reference to that common ground. 26. ——— Persons not parties to proceedings in appeal not bound by the result of those proceedings.—Decrees in three separate suits for the partition of a certain estate having been referred to the Collector of Ratnagiri for execution under the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 265, B and R (brothers of the first appellant), who were parties to the suits, objected to the Collector's mode of partition, and applied to the Court to set aside the Collector's scheme, and to direct a fresh partition. The Subordinate Judge of Vengurla granted the application and set aside the partition ordered by the Collector. Against this order V, who was plaintiff in one of the suits, appealed to the District Court, and in the appeal he made B alone the respondent. The District Court reversed the order of the Subordinate Judge, and upheld the order of the Collector. Thereupon B preferred a second appeal to the High Court against the decision of the District Court. To this appeal neither R nor his brother, the present appellant, were made parties. The High Court having confirmed the decision of the District Court, proceedings were taken to carry out the partition according to the Collector's original scheme. The appellant objected, on the ground that the Collector's scheme had been set aside by the Subordinate Judge, and that the appellant had not been a party to the proceedings in either of the Appellate Courts. He contended that he was, therefore, not bound by the decisions of the Appellate Courts, and that the order of the Subordinate Judge, setting aside the partition ordered by the Collector, was still in force so far as he was concerned. He therefore applied that the property should be divided in accordance with that order. His application was rejected by the Court of first instance as time-barred, inasmuch as more than a year had elapsed since the date of the order of the Subordinate Judge, and during that time the applicant had taken no steps to enforce the order. On appeal the Acting District Judge confirmed the order of the lower Court, holding that the order of the Subordinate Judge was no longer in force, having been set aside by the High Court. On second appeal to the High Court,—Held that the appellant was not bound by the final decision of the High Court. The original order being in his favour, he could not be deprived of the benefit of that order without having the opportunity to defend it. Not having been a party to the proceedings in appeal, he was not affected by the result of those proceedings. Where there are several respondents before the Court of first appeal, though one of them may represent his fellows in a further appeal, he cannot represent a person who was not his co-respondent, and against whom therefore no decree could have been made on a point common to the two, or on any point at all. The defendant did not appeal or file cross-objections. The lower Appellate Court remanded the whole case to the first Court under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff not appealing under s. 588 (28) from the order of remand. The first Court then dismissed the whole suit, and on appeal by the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court confirmed the decree. On a second appeal to the High Court,—Held (i) that the High Court was competent to consider the validity or propriety of the order or remand, though it had not been specifically appealed against; (ii) that the order of remand was ultra vires, so far as it related to that part of the first Court's decree, which was favourable to the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court not having jurisdiction, in the absence of any appeal or objections by the defendant, to disturb that part of the decree.

Against this decree the tenants appealed. The Subordinate Judge, finding that the subject-matter of the suit, the land of which partition was claimed, exceeded the jurisdiction of the Munsif, reversed the decree of the Munsif, and directed the plaint to be returned for presentation in the proper Court. It was contended, on appeal to the High Court, that the Subordinate Judge could not set aside the decree against the tenants for mesne profits. Held that, as the Munsif's Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit for partition, it could make no decree for mesne profits, and, therefore, the Subordinate Judge had power to set it aside. It is only when the decree appealed against has proceeded upon a ground common to all the defendants, that is, when the Court below has made a decree against several defendants upon a finding which applies equally to all of them, that under s. 544 any one of the defendants may appeal against the whole decree, and the Appellate Court may reverse or modify that decree in favour of all the defendants. Protap Chunder Dutt v. *Koorbanissa Bibee, 14 W. 1. ——— Hearing of appeal ex-parte.—The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain immoveable property sold to him by the first defendant, a Hindu widow. The second defendant answered that his father and the first defendant's husband were undivided brothers, and that, as a childless widow, she had no right to sell the property. Both the lower Courts upheld the sale as absolute, on the ground that she was competent to make it as widow of a separate Hindu. The High Court, on second appeal, held that the decrees of the lower Courts were unsustainable, as they did not contain the limitation pointed out above, and remanded the case for the trial of the issue, whether there were any such special circumstances as would justify the absolute sale by the first defendant to the plaintiff. Subsequently, the appellant applied to the Court, under s. 558 of the Civil Procedure Code, to re-admit the appeal, explaining her absence when the appeal was called on for hearing. The Court rejected the application on the ground that the appeal had been decided on the merits, and reasons had been recorded for its dismissal which there were no apparent grounds for setting aside. Held that the Court should have dismissed the appeal for default, and it was illegal

6. ——— Practice—Appeal—Difference of opinion on Division Bench regarding preliminary objection as to limitation—Letters Patent, N.-W. P., s. 827.—S. 27 of the Letters Patent for the High Court of the N.-W. Provinces has been superseded in those cases only to which s. 575 of the Civil Procedure Code properly and without straining language applies. There are many cases to which s. 575, even with the aid of s. 647, does not apply; and to these s. 27 of the Letters Patent is still applicable. One of the cases to which s. 575 of the Code does not apply is where a preliminary objection being taken to the hearing of a first appeal before the High Court on the ground that the appeal is time-barred, the Judges of the Division Bench differ in opinion as to whether the appellant has shown sufficient cause, within the meaning of s. 5 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), for not presenting the appeal within the prescribed period. The decision of such a preliminary objection is not a "hearing" of the appeal, but precedes the hearing or determines that there is no appeal which the Court can hear or decide. Where such a preliminary objection is allowed, it cannot be said that the Court which, by reason of the Limitation Act, has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, should nevertheless "affirm" the decree of the Court below. In the case of such a preliminary objection and such a difference of opinion (the Bench being equally divided), the opinion of the senior Judge should, under s. 27 of the Letters Patent, prevail. Appaji Bhivrav v. *Chirlal Khubchand, I. CLAIM TO ATTACHED PROPERTY —continued.

11. ——— Claim to a portion of property attached—Alienees of judgment-debtor—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 229, 230.—On the application of a decree-holder of a money-decree for the sale of immoveable property belonging to the judgment-debtor, certain parties objected that they had purchased the rights of the judgment-debtor therein. Subsequently some of the objectors who claimed a 14-anna share in the property compromised with the decree-holder, who then applied that the remaining 2-anna in possession of certain specified parties should be sold. The lower Court ordered that the sale of these 2 annas should not proceed if the objectors who claimed them paid to the decree-holder a sum equal, rateably, to that levied from the 14 annas. Held on appeal by the decree-holder against the original judgment-debtor that the provisions of s. 246, and not those of ss. 229 and 230, of Act VIII of 1859 applied to the application, which really sought to enforce a particular remedy against a third party named, and not against the original defendant. 17. ——— Attachment of fractional share of property—Right to have property released—Claim to share of property.—In execution of a decree against A, "the moiety or half share of A" in certain lands was attached. M filed a petition under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, in which he admitted that A had a one-eighth share in the lands, but alleged that A had only a one-eighth share, and that a two-eighths share belongs to himself, M. Held that this was a claim to property attached in execution under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, which the Court under that section was bound to investigate and adjudicate upon. In execution of a decree against A, the "right, title, and interest of A" in certain lands were attached. M filed a petition under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, in which he admitted that A had a one-twentieth share, but alleged that A was entitled to no more than a one-twentieth share; and that he, M, has a two-twentieths share. Held that, assuming the attachment of A's eighth title and interest to be an irregular attachment under s. 213, M, whose lands were included within such attachment, was entitled to come in and claim his own two-twentieths share, and the Court was bound to investigate his claim under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859. Held also, in both cases, that M was entitled to have the attachment removed so far as his share was concerned, Held also (per PHEAR, J.) that in the first case M was entitled to have the attachment removed so far as regards the margin in excess of A's actual share; and that in the second case he was entitled to have the whole attachment discharged. attachment.—A and B attached, in execution of their decree, property of C and his two brothers, their judgment-debtors. Subsequently D obtained a decree against C alone, and on the 11th January 1884 applied for attachment of the one-third share of C in the property attached by A and B, which belonged to C and his two brothers jointly. No order was on that date passed on the application. On the 14th January 1884, E purchased from C his one-third share in the attached properties, and the purchase-money was, by arrangement between the brothers, applied in satisfying the debt due to A and B. On the 28th January 1884, an order was passed on the application of the 11th January 1884, granting the attachment asked for by D; and on the 23rd April 1884 E preferred his claim to the one-third share purchased by him, and which had been since the purchase attached by D. The claim was disallowed on the ground that E had no title to the property, he having purchased whilst the property was under attachment. Held on appeal that the Judge should have, in accordance with s. 280 of the Code of Civil Procedure, confined himself to determining whether or no the property was in the possession of E on his own account at the time that D attached the property. The decree declared that execution should be taken out against the property of the mother, and not against any part of her (the mother's) deceased husband's estate. In execution, A attached and put up to sale certain property as belonging to the mother. B objected to the sale, alleging that the property was not her mother's, but was inherited by her from her father. The Munsif disallowed her objection on the ground that only the right, title, and interest of the defendant's mother was put up for sale. On appeal the Judge set aside the Munsif's order. Held that, for the purposes of her objection, B was a third party unconnected with the decree, and that her objection should have been disposed of under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859. S. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 did not apply, and there was no appeal. HARIS CHANDRA GUPTO v. SHASHI MALA GUPTI [6 B. L. R., 721 : 15 W. R., 163

The petitioner having obtained a rule under s. 622 of the Code, Held that, the property having been transferred to the petitioner and being now admittedly his property, the lower Court had acted without jurisdiction in directing execution to issue against the property. Per AMEER ALI, J.—When a claim is preferred under s. 278, what the Court has to see is whether the property, though standing in the name of the claimant or of some other person, is in the possession of the judgment-debtor or not. The mere fact that the judgment-debtor has some beneficial interest in the income would not render the property liable under s. 281. If the claimant satisfies the Court that he has some interest in, or is possessed of, the property attached, and it does not appear that the possession of the claimant was in reality that of the judgment-debtor, the claim must be allowed. There is nothing in the provisions of ss. 278 to 283 of the Code limiting, in a suit under s. 283, a plaintiff's right to compensation for his loss or the defendant's responsibility for his wrongful act; and if the existence of the summary procedure (in ss. 278 to 282) leads to delay, and that delay to further loss, the consequences must fall upon the defendant. In 1888 he attached the mortgaged property in execution of the decree, whereupon the defendant intervened and applied to have the attachment removed, on the ground that prior to the attachment she had purchased the land under a registered deed of sale, dated the 23rd June 1888. Her application was rejected on the 27th September 1888. Subsequently the judgment-debtors applied and obtained the Court's permission to sell the land by private contract, and, on the 1st November 1888, the plaintiff purchased it and withdrew his application for execution on the 20th November 1888. In 1889 the plaintiff brought this suit against the defendant to obtain the removal of certain portions of a culvert erected by her on the land. The defendant pleaded that she was the owner of the property, having purchased it on the 23rd June 1888. The Subordinate Judge passed a decree for the plaintiff on the ground that, though the plaintiff's sale-deed was not entitled to preference over the defendant's, still, as she had taken no steps to establish her right to the property in a regular suit after application for the removal of the plaintiff's attachment had been rejected, effect could not be given to her purchase. On appeal by the defendant, the decree was reversed, and the plaintiff preferred a second appeal. Held, confirming the appellate decree, that when the plaintiff withdrew his attachment on the 20th November 1888, the parties were restored to the status quo ante. The object of the claim which was preferred by the defendant was, as contemplated by s. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), to obtain the removal of the attachment, and when that attachment was removed by the judgment-creditor's own act, there was no longer an attachment or any proceeding in execution of which the order could operate to the prejudice of the claimant, and therefore there was no necessity for her to bring a suit to set aside the order. The defendant's title to the property, having been acquired on the 23rd June 1888, was superior to the plaintiff's, which was not acquired before November 1888. GOPAL PURSHOTAM v. BAI DIVALI I. L. On the 13th August 1889, the plaintiff instituted this suit for a declaration that the property belonged to his judgment-debtor (I), and as such was liable to attachment and sale. The defendants pleaded that they had been in possession of the property for more than twelve years prior to the institution of the suit, and that the suit was therefore barred. The Judge rejected the plaintiff's claim. Held, reversing the decree, that the suit being brought under s. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), it was a suit to set aside the order of 11th August 1888, directing the removal of the attachment, and should be determined by ascertaining the rights of the parties at the date of that order. The goods were to be sold on arrival on P's account and the proceeds credited to him as against the advances made by the payment of the hundis. On the arrival of goods at Bombay, they were attached by B S & Co., who had obtained decrees against P. Held that V H. & Co. were entitled to the goods. They had made specific advances against the goods. B S & Co. as attaching creditors occupied the same position as P himself and had no better claim to the goods than he had; and if he had attempted to prevent the goods reaching the hands of V H & Co. who at his request had made specific advances against them, he would have been restrained by injunction. Held also that at the date of attachment the goods were in possession of P by the railway company "on account of or in trust for" V H & Co., in the sense in which that expression is used in s. 280 of the Civil Procedure Code. No claim or order was made in the case of the other twelve suits. R M now sued in pursuance of the above order to recover his property, and he included as defendants not merely those defendants (Nos. 1 and 2) who had been plaintiffs in suit No. 1548 of 1897, but also those who had been plaintiffs in the twelve other suits, and who had attached the property in execution of their decrees. It was objected that no suit would lie against the latter, as in their suits no claim had been made to the goods which they had attached, and no order made under s. 281, Civil Procedure Code. Held that the suit lay against the defendants (other than Nos. 1 and 2), although no claim had been made or order passed under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code. The summary remedy given by s. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code is alternative to the remedy by way of suit. 52. ——— Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 279, 280, 281—Attachment—Striking off—Execution-proceedings—Question of nature of possession in claim suit.—B instituted a suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court, Cuttack, on the 27th of November 1887, against R for possession of the Dakhin Paresh Muth at Puri, with the properties appertaining thereto, and obtained a decree on the 29th April 1889. Execution having been applied for by B, it was stayed, pending the appeal to the High Court, upon R giving security. The decree of the Subordinate Judge's Court was set aside by the High Court, but restored by the Privy Council, and B was put in possession of the Muth with its properties in execution of the last-mentioned decree between the 23rd of April and the 3rd of June 1895. Subsequent to the institution of the above suit, K instituted a suit for recovery of a certain sum of money against R and obtained a decree, and in execution thereof caused the attachment of the immoveable properties now in dispute on the 18th September 1890, and the application was dimissed for default, and subsequently, after the institution and dismissal of various proceedings in execution, an order for sale of the properties attached on the 18th of September 1890 was applied for and obtained by K on the 15th of April 1895; B then put in his claim on the 23rd of May 1895, and it was disallowed on the 9th of September following. B moved the High Court under s. 15 of the Charter Act (24 & 25 Vict., c. 104) and s. 622, Civil Procedure Code. Held that the striking an execution-proceeding off the file is an act which may admit of different interpretations according to the circumstances under which it is done, and no general rule can be laid down which would govern all cases of that kind; but having regard to the circumstances of the present case, viz., that the Court below had no opportunity of considering the circumstances under which the several execution-proceedings were dismissed, it could not be held that there was no subsisting attachment, and that the order of the Court below was bad in law. Held, further, that the lower Court was wrong in holding that the decree obtained by B in the Subordinate Judge's Court did not show that he had an interest in the attached property, merely because it was not final, but had been appealed against. To reconcile s. 279, Civil Procedure Code, with ss. 280 and 281, the words "some interest" must be taken to imply such interest as would make the possession of the judgment-debtor possession not on his own account, but on account of, or in trust for, the claimant. Held also that it cannot be said that the properties in dispute which were admittedly in the possession of the judgment-debtor at the date of the attachment were in his possession, not as his own property, but on account of the claimant, although the claimant obtained a decree against him, and execution of such decree was stayed upon his giving security. In the sections relating to claims to attached property, what the Code of Civil Procedure provides is a summary investigation into the question of possession, and the question of title is required to be gone into only so far as it may be necessary to determine whether the person in possession holds such possession as agent of, or as trustee for, another. Having regard to the facts that K, the creditor, brought her suit after the institution of the suit by B, the claimant, and also that the money covered by K's decree was borrowed by B for the purpose of paying Government revenue due on account of the properties of the muth, the questions that arise are whether the doctrine of lis pendens applies and whether the decree-holder can succeed upon the principle that a debt contracted for legal necessity by a mohunt de facto is recoverable from the endowed property in the hands of the mohunt de jure? These questions do not come within the scope of an investigation under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to claims to attached property. It was proved that, in considering G's conduct with reference to the publication of the pamphlet, the committee took into consideration certain letters which G had written to certain members of the committee, and that his expulsion was partly for printing the pamphlet and partly for writing the letters. Held that, as the decision of the committee was arrived at bonâ fide, the Court had no right to decide whether the pamphlet was or was not a libel. Held further that, as G had no opportunity of defending himself on the charge of writing the

The Mamlatdar, under the orders of the Collector, put up for sale certain immoveable property belonging to the judgment-debtors. The sale was confirmed by the Mamlatdar with the sanction of the Collector. Some time afterwards the auction-purchaser applied to the Collector for a certificate of sale, but the Collector refused the certificate and set aside the sale, on the ground that the purchaser was a relative of the decree-holder and had really purchased the property on his behalf without the permission of the Court. Against this proceeding of the Collector the purchaser made an application, first to the Subordinate Judge who had transferred the decree to the Collector for execution, and then to the District Court. But both Courts declined to entertain his application on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Held, on an application to the High Court, that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to deal with the application and to revise the Collector's proceedings in execution. Held also that the Collector, having through his subordinate put up for sale the judgment-debtor's property and confirmed the sale, had in that way completely executed the decree so far as he could, and was so far functus officio. His duty was to make a return to the Court of what he had done. After confirmation of the sale, he could not set it aside. Per WEST, J.—The Collector, like the Nazir in India, is a ministerial officer when he executes a decree. He, like the Nazir, must carry out the decree of a Civil Court in general subjection to the judicial direction of the Court on whose authority the coercive power exercised by him rests, and which alone can deal judicially with the questions that arise in execution. His proceedings and orders are subject accordingly to revision and correction on the application of a party aggrieved whenever he misconceives the decree or acts illegally in giving effect to it. He is limited strictly to the precise line of activity laid down for him in the Code and the orders under it; and in cases of error or doubt it is the Court that must determine whether he, as its ministerial officer, has or has not transgressed his powers. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—A sale made by a Collector under Ch. XIX of the Civil Procedure Code is subject to confirmation by the Civil Court under s. 312. As soon as the Collector has exercised or performed the power or duties conferred or imposed upon him by ss. 321 to 325 of the Code, he is functus officio. If he has sold the property or re-sold it under the power given by cl. (c) of s. 325, he has completed the execution of the decree so far as he can legally complete it, and it is then his duty to retransmit the decree to the Court, under rules prescribed in that behalf by Government under the second paragraph of s. 320. Where the property has been sold or re-sold, the sale or re-sale cannot be set aside by the Collector. Any application for setting it aside must be made to the Civil Court under s. 311 and dealt with by it under s. 312; and if no application is made to the Court, the sale must be confirmed by it under that section. The Subordinate Judge of Vengurla granted the application, and set aside the partition ordered by the Collector. Against this order, V, who was plaintiff in one of the suits, appealed to the District Court, and in the appeal he made B alone the respondent. The District Court reversed the order of the Subordinate Judge, and upheld the order of the Collector. Thereupon B preferred a second appeal to the High Cout against the decision of the District Court. To this appeal neither R nor his brother, the present appellant, were made parties. The High Court having confirmed the decision of the District Court, proceedings were taken to carry out the partition according to the Collector's original scheme. The appellant objected on the ground that the Collector's scheme had been set aside by the Subordinate Judge, and that he (the appellant) had not been a party to the proceedings in either of the Appellate Courts. He contended that he was therefore not bound by the decisions of the Appellate Courts, and that the order of the Subordinate Judge, setting aside the partition ordered by the Collector, was still in force so far as he was concerned. He therefore applied that the property should be divided in accordance with that order. His application was rejected by the Court of first instance as time-barred, inasmuch as more than a year had elapsed since the date of the order of the Subordinate Judge, and during that time the applicant had taken no steps to enforce the order. On appeal, the Acting District Judge confirmed the order of the lower Court, holding that the order of the Subordinate Judge was no longer in force, having been set aside by the High Court. On second appeal to the High Court,—Held that the appellant could not succeed in the present appeal, the object of which was to revive the order of the Subordinate Judge. That order was one which the Subordinate Judge had no power to make. It involved taking the execution of the decree for partition out of the Collector's hands into his own, in direct contradiction of the law. In case of partition of lands, s. 265 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) and s. 113 of the Bombay Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879) place the execution of the decree entirely in the Collector's hands. This does not deprive the Court of judicial control of its decree; as, for instance, if it should appear to have been obtained by fraud or surprise; but in the present case nothing of that kind was relied on. Nor was it asserted that the Collector had acted in bad faith, or contravened the command of the Court, or transgressed the law. What was alleged was that he had made an objectionable partition. This was not a ground on which the Subordinate Judge could interfere. DEV GOPAL SAVANT v. VASUDEV VITHAL SAVANT I. L. R., 12 Bom., 371

6. ——— Execution of decree for partition—Collector, Power of, to refuse execution—Ultra vires.—The plaintiffs obtained a decree against the defendants for partition and possession of their share in the lands in the village of Kasai. That decree was sent for execution to the Collector. In the meantime, a revision survey had been introduced into the village, under which the designation of some of the lands directed to be partitioned was changed from khoti to dhara lands. The Collector proposed to partition them, as described by the survey; but the plaintiffs having declined the proposal, he refused to partition the lands, and returned unexecuted the decree to the Court. On reference to the High Court,—Held that the Collector had acted ultra vires. The plaintiffs were entitled to have the lands partitioned, quite independent of the result of the new survey as regards the character of the lands. The proposal of the Collector was virtually to contravene the command of the Court, which as a purely ministerial officer, it was not in his power to do either directly or indirectly. 30. ——— Deputy Collector whether a "Court" under Land Acquisition Act—Judicial Officer—Revenue Court—Prosecution for false evidence—Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 476—Penal Code, s. 193.—The expression "the Court" in the Land Acquisition Act does not include a Collector, nor is there any authority given to the Collector to administer an oath or to require a verification. It is a false statement made under a verification that constitutes an offence under s. 193 of the Penal Code, not a verification oath or solemn affirmation. The Deputy Collector acting under the Land Acquisition Act is not a judicial officer, he cannot properly be regarded as a Revenue Court within the terms of s. 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, his proceedings under the former Act are not regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure, nor is he right in requiring a petition put in before him to be verified in accordance with that Code, so as to make any false statement punishable as perjury. The Deputy Collector is not in a position to pass any final order in the matter of value of the land or the right to claim the price fixed; a party dissatisfied can claim a reference to the Civil Court, whose duty it is to settle the matter in dispute judicially; therefore, to subject parties who claimed the right to such a reference to a criminal prosecution, when the matters on which the Deputy Collector had formed an opinion as a Revenue Officer under the Land Acquisition Act must be submitted to the determination of a Court, is obviously premature and improper, and is almost certain to operate very prejudicially towards them in the trial before the Civil Court of the same matter. It is to be taxed on the same scale and on the same principle as would be adopted in England, and, if the Taxing Master finds any difficulty, he must refer to England for information. Where an item is objected to in taxation, the Taxing Master should reconsider and review his taxation, and in doing so he should throw the onus of proof, as to the necessity of the item, upon such party as, having regard to its particular nature, he considers ought to bear it. As to the production of vouchers in case of commissions to England, no rule can be laid down. Upon objections being brought in, it is in the discretion of the Taxing Master, either on his own motion or on the application of the party objecting, to require vouchers for, or further proof of, all or any of the items objected to, and, failing the production of the vouchers or proof which he may require, to disallow the item. Quære—Whether in taxation as between party and party the costs of obtaining a transcript of the evidence given and of perusing it ought to be allowed. Payments made to witnesses are discretionary allowances, and the Court is averse to review such allowances. The Court, in appointing a commissioner to take evidence in England, expects that the fees of such commissioner will not exceed those which the Supreme Court in England would allow to a special examiner or commissioner acting in England under its orders. 31. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 503—Examination by commission—Personal appearance in Court.—A Hindu lady, having been summoned as a witness on behalf of an accused, applied under s. 503 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to be examined by commission on the ground (inter alia) that she was a "parda-nashin," and that her enforced appearance in a Criminal Court would entail a forfeiture of her dignity and position in Hindu society. Held that such application was properly made under the section, and that under the circumstance of the case the order prayed for could be made. 32. ——— Examination of parda-nashin lady—Code of Criminal Procedure (1882), ss. 6, 7, 503, 504, 505, 506, and 507—Presidency Magistrate, Power of.—It is doubtful if a Presidency Magistrate in the Town of Calcutta has power to issue a commission, under ss. 503 to 507 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, to examine a witness residing within his own jurisdiction; but there is nothing in the Code to prevent a Presidency Magistrate examining a witness within his jurisdiction at some place other than the Court-house. Where a Presidency Magistrate refused, on the ground of want of jurisdiction, to grant a commission for the examination of a parda-nashin lady, but offered to take her evidence in his Court when cleared for the purpose, or in his private room, and she applied to the High Court for a commission being granted, or for such other order as they might deem proper, the High Court on revision directed that, if the lady would take a house or suite of rooms not far from the Magistrate's Court, and pay all the costs which the Magistrate deemed reasonable and proper, he should not enforce her attendance in Court, but examine her in the place so appointed, in the presence of the parties concerned, and in the manner in which parda-nashin ladies are ordinarily examined. was charged and of his wife taken by commission during the enquiry, and the evidence of the servant of those persons taken at the enquiry, and also the evidence of the owner of the property taken during the trial under a commission issued by the Sessions Judge under s. 503 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The grounds upon which the Sessions Judge admitted the evidence taken during the enquiry were that the attendance of the witnesses could not be procured without an expense of R500, an amount which he considered unreasonable; that the witnesses would be inconvenienced; and that their evidence did not concern the accused personally, having reference only to the identification of the property in respect of which the accused was charged. Held that the Sessions Judge had improperly admitted such evidence. Inconvenience to witnesses is no ground allowed under s. 33 of the Evidence Act, and the question of identification was a most material one, and the evidence of the witnesses in question was of the utmost moment, the whole case resting on it; and as regards the ground of expense, it was impossible to consider the amount unreasonable, considering that the entire case rested on the evidence of those witnesses, and that the accused had not cross-examined those whose evidence had been taken by commission, nor, looking at his position, could he arrange for their cross-examination. Held that on these grounds the Sessions Judge was not justified in issuing a commission under s. 503 of the Criminal Procedure Code. 34. ——— Application by prisoner for commission to place out of the jurisdiction.—Previously to the trial at the Sessions, the prisoner had applied to the Court for commissions to Pondicherry and Mauritius to take evidence on his behalf. The application was refused on the ground that the High Court had no authority to issue a commission in such a case, but the learned Judge (WEST, J.) reserved the question for the full Court. Held that the High Court had no power to issue a commission out of the jurisdiction in a criminal case on an application by the accused. Code (Act X of 1882), may be admitted under s. 33 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) if the requirements of the proviso to that section have been complied with. The words "opportunity to cross-examine" in the proviso to s. 33 do not imply that the actual presence of the cross-examining party or his agent before the tribunal taking the evidence is necessary. To make evidence admissible against an accused person under s. 33 of the Evidence Act, the fact that he had full opportunity of cross-examination, if not admitted, must be proved. Quære—Whether the opportunity to administer cross-interrogatories under a commission is an "opportunity to cross-examine" within the meaning of the proviso to s. 33 of the Evidence Act so as to render the evidence taken on interrogatories admissible. 4. ——— Application for registration —Act X of 1866 (Indian Companies Act)—Application received while Act X of 1866 was in force—Delay in office of Registrar—Certificate purporting to be issued under Act X of 1866, but issued after repeal thereof by Act VI of 1882—General Clauses Consolidation Act (I of 1868), s. 6—"Proceedings commenced."—Prior to the 1st May 1882, the secretary and manager of a projected company (which was to be limited by shares) applied to the Registrar of joint-stock companies for a certificate of incorporation of the company, intending that it should be registered under Act X of 1866, the Indian Companies Act then in force, and forwarded the memorandum and articles of association with the necessary stamp-fees, and did everything that was required to be done by, or on behalf of, the company to obtain a certificate under that Act. No order was passed by the Registrar upon this application until 6th May, and owing to delay, for which the applicants were not responsible, registration was not effected, and the certificate was not issued until the 3rd July, when a certificate was given purporting to be granted in pursuance of Act X of 1866. Meanwhile, on the 1st May 1882, the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1822) repealing Act X of 1866 came into force, s. 28 of which provided that every share in any company should be deemed to have been taken and held subject to payment of the whole amount thereof in cash, unless the same had been otherwise determined by a contract in writing filed with the Registrar. No such provision existed in Act X of 1866. The shareholders of the company paid nothing upon their shares in cash, but had agreed (not in writing filed with the Registrar) that, in consideration of certain property conveyed by them to the company at the time of its formation, fully paid-up shares were to be allotted to them. Subsequently, the company having gone into liquidation, the official liquidator sought to make the shareholders contributories to the assets of the company as the holders of shares upon which nothing had been paid, with reference to s. 28 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). Held that the proceedings for obtaining registration of the company and a grant of a certificate of such registration commenced, within the meaning of s. 6 of the General Clauses Act, when the memorandum and articles of association were received in the Registrar's office in April 1882, while Act X of 1866 was in force; that therefore the repeal of that Act by Act VI of 1882 did not affect those proceedings; that consequently the company must be taken to have been incorporated under the former Act; and that the provisions of s. 28 of Act VI of 1882 not being applicable, the shareholders were not liable to be placed on the list of contributories as not having paid the full amount of their shares. 5. ——— Registration of association —Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 4—"Gain"—Mutual Assurance Society.—In 1870 a fund was formed by a number of persons over 20 in number, the object being, according to the prospectus and rules, to provide for the widows, children, and other relatives of the subscribers. The management was vested in a board of directors elected by the subscribers from amongst their own number. Subscriptions at fixed rates according to tables were paid by the subscribers to secure the provision of pensions for their widows, children, and relatives. The money so subscribed were invested in Government 4 per cent. securities, and in the course of management a large reserve fund was accumulated and so invested, the interest annually payable in respect of which amounted in the year 1888 to upwards of R46,000, but there was nothing to show that such reserve was larger than sound principles of management required. The rules provided for abatements of subscriptions according to a graduated scale, which might be granted or withheld from year to year by the directors according to their opinion as to the condition of the fund. A subscriber to the fund was under no obligation to continue his subscription, but might stop it at pleasure, subject in certain contingencies to forfeiture of the benefit of past payments. Fines were also provided for unpunctuality in payments of subscriptions. It was contended that the subscribers formed an association which required registration under s. 4 of the Indian Companies Act, inasmuch as they carried on business having for its object the acquisition of gain by the association, or the individual members thereof, as the subscribers must be taken to contemplate the ordinary consequences of their acts, and the forfeitures, fines, and large and increasing reserve fund constituted "gain." Semble—that these did not constitute gain. But held that, whether they did or not, no business was carried on, having for its object the acquisition of gain by the association or the individual members thereof. The subscribers to the General Family Pension Fund are not a company, association, or partnership formed for the purpose of carrying on business that has for its object the acquisition of gain by the company, association, or partnership, or by the individual members thereof, within the meaning of s. 4 of the Indian Companies Act. Where the substantial purpose of an association is not to carry on a business for gain, the fact that gain may accrue incidentally or may arise from merely subsidiary provisions does not make registration necessary. mensem for seven years from the date of admission, and that at the end of the seven years R250 should be paid in full discharge of each share. It was further provided that subscribers should be entitled to borrow money from the said fund at interest, that a reserve fund be formed and distributed once every five years to the subscribers, and that surplus collections be distributed among the subscribers annually. In 1868, defendants' father borrowed money on mortgage from the fund in accordance with the rules, and the amount was admittedly due at the time of suit. The fund was wound up under an order of the High Court, dated 15th September 1877, during the lifetime of defendants' father, who, however, took no active part in those proceedings. It further appeared that on the execution of the mortgage, the defendants' father (the mortgagor) took a lease from the mortgagees of the houses mortgaged, and retained possession of them as tenant. Held that the association had for its object the acquisition of gain, and that, as the association consisted of more than twenty members and was not registered, its formation was forbidden by the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866), s. 4, that the mortgage suit; having for its object the carrying out of the illegal purpose of the association, was an illegal transaction; and that the suit must fail. Held, further, that the defendants were not estopped from setting up the plea of illegality either by the order of 1877 or by reason of their predecessor in title having attorned to the fund. The bonds in question were executed in favour of the stakeholder and the subscribers. The business was not registered. A suit was brought on one of such bonds to recover the amount payable for subscription on account of the period subsequent to its execution. Held that the obligees carried on business which had for its object the acquisition of gain within the meaning of Companies Act, 1882, s. 4, and accordingly constituted an illegal association, and that the suit was not maintainable. Their names were also entered as such shareholders in the registration of the company under Act X of 1866. In January 1867 certain contributors (amongst whom appellants were not) and certain creditors applied to the Recorder of Rangoon, under cls. 4 and 5, s. 101, to have the company wound up, and an official liquidator appointed. A liquidator having been appointed, he applied to the Court to call upon each of the contributories, named in a list which he presented, to pay up his contribution. Accordingly, the Recorder declared the appellants to be contributories, and directed each of them to pay the amount appearing against his name. Held that this was a suit by the official liquidator to have appellants declared contributories, and an appeal therefore lay from the Recorder's decision so declaring them. Held that the liability, under ss. 6, 11, 18, 22, 36, and 37, of a registered shareholder, as member of a company, to contribute, is a primâ facie liability only; it being open to him to show that, although his name was on the register, yet he did not agree to become a member; and that, as appellants were not cognizant of (much less did they assent to) the registration of their names as shareholders, whilst they refused to receive any shares or pay up any calls or deposits, the sole step taken by them of joining others in putting forth the prospectus and affixing their names therein to a certain number of shares could not be said to be an agreement to become members of the company, and therefore they were not contributories. 16. ——— Constituting person a member of company—Companies Act, X of 1866, s. 22—Member of company—"Subscriber of the memorandum"—"Agreement to become a member"—Company not in existence—Rescission—Liability for calls.—The defendant, amongst others, subscribed (for 101 shares) a copy of the memorandum and articles of association of the plaintiff company then in process of formation, but subsequently, and before registration, gave notice to the persons most active in the promotion of the said company that he would withdraw his signature, and would have no connection thenceforth with the proposed company. His withdrawal, however, was not accepted. Subsequently to the receipt of the said notice, the memorandum and articles of association so signed by the defendant and others were presented for registration; but registration was refused, on the ground that the said documents were not printed. A printed copy of each was then procured and registered. The registered copies differed, in respect of the signatures subscribed thereto, from the copies signed by the defendant. The defendant's name was put upon the register of the company as the holder of 101 shares, but without the defendant's assent or knowledge, and two calls were made upon him in respect of the said shares. The defendant denied that he was a member of the said company or liable for calls. Held that the defendant was not a member of the plaintiff company, either (i) as a "subscriber of the memorandum of association" under the earlier part of s. 22 of the Indian Companies Act, inasmuch as the memorandum there referred to was the registered memorandum, of which the document signed by the defendant was not even a true copy, or (ii) by reason of an "agreement to take shares" under the latter part of that section, inasmuch as the agreement there alluded to was an agreement with the company, and the agreement (if any) entered into by the defendant was not, and could not have been, an agreement with the company, the company not being at that time in existence. Quære—Whether it is enough to constitute a person a member of a company under

On that day, viz., the 3rd August 1886, L received a notice from the secretary of the company, informing him that the company had been duly registered, and requesting him to pay R100 as the deposit on the shares subscribed by him. On the 5th August L replied, stating that he had decided not to take up the shares. On the 6th August the secretary wrote to L, stating that he had already become a shareholder, and could not withdraw. On the 25th September the directors held their first meeting, and resolved that the "shares applied for be allotted, and application and allotment money be called in." On the 1st October the secretary notified to L the allotment of ten shares, and requested him to pay the overdue deposit call of R10 per share and the allotment call of R15 per share. L refused to pay, and repudiated his liability in respect of the shares. He contended that he had never become a member of the company. Held that the defendant was not a member of the company, and was not liable to the plaintiff's claim. The fact that he had signed the proposed memorandum of association did not make him a member, inasmuch as the document which he had signed was not the document which was registered, nor even a true copy of it. Nor could the defendant be held bound as having agreed to become a member within the meaning of s. 45 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). The agreement which binds a party under this section must be an agreement with the company itself. The company not being in existence at the date of the defendant's signing the memorandum of association (viz., the 16th April 1886), that signature could amount, at the most, to an application for shares to the promoters, which by reason of its non-withdrawal before the registration of the company on the 3rd August became on that day an application to the company. There could be no acceptance of that application until the company was registered; and the defendant withdrew his application by his letter of the 5th August. The letter written by the company's agents on the 3rd August was not an acceptance. It was only a request for the payment of the deposit on the shares for which the defendant had applied, and which was required as a guarantee for the bonâ fides of the application. Further, the terms of the resolution of the board of directors of the 25th September made it clear that up to that date the defendant's application had not been made a binding agreement by acceptance. His repudiation, therefore, of the 5th August was in time, and he could not be held liable as a shareholder of the company. Held, also, that in no case could the defendant have been bound by the letter of the 3rd August written by the agents of the company. That letter was written, not by order of the directors at a meeting duly convened and composed of the proper quorum of four. It was written by the secretary after consulting separately three only of the directors. This was an irregular proceeding, which would not bind the company or the subscribers with regard to the application on the acceptance of shares. The directors did not act as a board, nor was the consent of a quorum obtained. IMPERIAL FLOUR MILLS COMPANY v. LAMB . I. L. R., 12 Bom., 647

into liquidation. Held that A was not liable in respect of the five shares for which he subscribed. A person signing a duplicate memorandum of association is not bound as one who has signed the original memorandum, although such duplicate is signed after the company has been registered. Such a signature cannot be binding, because it does not amount to a signing of the memorandum itself, and does not satisfy the requirements of s. 45 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). It does not create the positive agreement which the law has made the necessary consequence of the signature of the real memorandum before registration. It only amounts to a proposal to take shares. But in the present case there had been no acceptance by the company of the proposal. There had been no allotment and no placing on the register. Acceptance could not be legally inferred from the circumstances of the case. A's liability was only inchoate and never became complete. The company, while it was solvent, never accepted A's offer to become a shareholder, and after it went into liquidation it was too late. 21. ——— Liability of a signatory to the memorandum of association for a fully paid-up share given to him as a present— Shares available for allotment, but not allotted.—The Bombay Electrical Company having gone into liquidation, the official liquidator applied to have E placed on the list of contributories in respect of one share for which he had subscribed, and signed the memorandum and articles of association on the 26th February 1885. The company was registered on the 5th March 1885, and went into liquidation in July 1886. In his affidavit E stated that he had been induced to sign the memorandum and articles of association by one P, who was a promoter of the company, and who had promised to give him a fully paid-up share as the share he had signed for; that in March 1886, P had accordingly handed him the certificate of a fully paid-up share; that the said share was one out of a hundred fully paid-up shares which were given by the company to P in part payment of money due to him from the company, and that the said share was duly entered in the share register of the company as having been fully paid up on the 18th September 1885. He contended that the company was estopped from denying that the share was fully paid up; that no other share had been allotted to him, and that all the shares of the company had been allotted. Held that he was liable in respect of the share. The transaction between him and P did not bind or affect the company. The present of a paid-up share by a third party does not satisfy the obligation of a subscriber of the memorandum. The issue of the certificate does not estop the company so long as the certificate has not passed to a bonâ fide transferee for value. If E had not, in fact, paid money or money's worth for the one share subscribed for, the company was still entitled to prove the non-payment, and claim the value of the share. Held also that, as there were left shares available for allotment, the fact that none had been allotted to E made no difference, and that the liquidator was entitled to hold him to the contract which he had made with the company when he signed the memorandum. By the documents which he signed, he "agreed" to take the number of shares (ten) set opposite his name. He never cancelled that agreement. Ten shares were subsequently allotted to him; but the defendant did nothing amounting to an acceptance of this allotment, and on the 19th April 1888 definitely cancelled his previous agreement to take shares. Held that the defendant had never become a shareholder of the company. Whatever the signing by the defendant of the documents in February 1886 amounted to—whether to a contract or to a mere proposal—the defendant in signing them addressed, not the company, which was not then in existence, but the promoters. If a contract, the company was not then in existence, and could not therefore ratify it: if a proposal, it was not a proposal to the company, or an agent for the company, and the company could not therefore accept it. S. 23, cl. (h), and s. 27, cl. At the time he accepted the shares, the account of his commission as broker had not been settled, and no demand had been made by him for payment of any specified sum. When the Company was wound up under the orders of the Court, the liquidators placed his name on list A of the contributories for the value of the two shares. his services could not be pleaded as a payment of the calls on shares, as no definite sum had been found due when the shares were accepted by him. Where the circumstances relied on would, in an action for money due on the shares, be evidence only in support of a plea of accord and satisfaction, it would not be a good defence of "a payment in cash" within the meaning of s. 28 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882), but otherwise, if the circumstances would support a plea of payment. 24. ——— Shares issued as fully paid up—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 28—Rights of a purchaser with notice taking from a purchaser without notice—Contributory.—Twenty shares of the Beyla Spinning, Weaving, and Manufacturing Company, Limited, were originally allotted to A as fully paid-up shares partly for work done and partly for work to be done for the Company. The agreement under which the shares were so allotted was not registered as required by s. 28 of Act VI of 1882. A sold three of these shares to D, who had no notice that they were not fully paid up. D sold the three shares to G, who was the Managing Director of the Company. The Company was wound up by the Court. At the date of the winding up, G was holder of the three shares. In settling the list of contributories, the Court ordered G's name to be placed on the list in respect of the three shares. Held that G was not liable as a contributory. Though G was a Managing Director of the Company, and as such must have known that the shares had been issued as fully paid-up shares without complying with s. 28 of Act VI of 1882, he was not on that account estopped from taking advantage of the equitable rule which protects a purchaser with notice taking from a purchaser without notice. 25. ——— Contributory—Increase of capital—Illegal issue of shares—Reduction of capital—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 13.—The Nawab of the Beyla Spinning, Weaving, and Manufacturing Company, Limited, was registered under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866). The original capital of the company consisted of ₹4,00,000 divided into 1,600 shares of ₹250 each. In 1882 the capital of the company was increased by ₹1,00,000, divided into 1,600 shares of ₹62-8. The resolution to increase the capital was not passed in accordance with the articles of association, i.e., "with the sanction of a special resolution of the company passed at a general meeting." On the 5th November 1884, a resolution was passed at a general meeting of the company that the shareholders should take up 459 shares of the original capital and 1,027 shares of the increased capital, which were then in the hands of the company, in the proportion of one share to every two shares already held by them. In pursuance of this resolution, the appellants took up several shares of the original capital as well as of the new capital. On 19th October 1885, a general meeting of the company was held, at which it was resolved that the resolution of the 5th November 1884, and all acts done in connection with it, should be set aside, that the shares taken by the shareholders in pursuance of that resolution should be taken back by the company, and such amounts as had been paid by them on those shares should be credited to their names in the company's books. This was accordingly done, and the shares were transferred to the name of the company. In October 1886, the company was wound up by order of the Court. In settling the list of contributories, the District Judge of Surat held that the appellants were liable, as contributories, in respect of all the shares which they had taken up in pursuance of the resolution of 5th November 1884. On appeal from this decision,—Held that, with respect to the shares of the original capital, the resolution of the 19th October 1885 was illegal and invalid. It operated, not as an investment by the company of its funds in its own shares, but as an extinguishment of the shares, and such extinguishment was virtually a reduction of the capital, which could not be done without complying with the provisions of s. 13 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). The holders of such shares were therefore properly placed on the list of contributories. Held, also, that the issue of the shares of the new capital was illegal, as the resolution to increase the capital had not been come to in accordance with the articles of association. It was therefore open to the Company to set aside the resolution of 5th November 1884. When it was set aside, the persons who held the new shares ceased to be shareholders, and could not, therefore, be held liable as contributories. BHIMBHAI v. ISHWARDAS JUGJIWANDAS . . I. L. The Official Liquidator need not take out letters of administration to the estate of a deceased shareholder before settling the list of contributories. There is nothing in ss. 126 and 144 requiring the Official Liquidator to place on the list all the persons who may as representatives be liable to contribute in discharge of the liability of a deceased shareholder as contemplated by s. 126. Nor can the liability, under that section, of a person who has been placed on the list as his representative be affected by omission of the Official Liquidator to do so. Directors have no power to cancel shares duly issued to a shareholder at his request and so reduce the capital of the company. Bhimbhai v. Ishwardas Jugjiwandas, I. L. R., 18

The plaint set forth the particulars of demand, one of which was R250, being the amount of deposit payable before allotment on 15th July 1886, and another a sum of R250 payable on allotment on 15th July 1886. This suit was brought on 10th September 1889, and the defendant contended that the above two items of claim were barred by limitation. The lower Courts, notwithstanding the statement in the plaint, found, as a fact, that the allotment of the shares was really made in November 1886. Held, therefore, assuming three years to be the period of limitation, that the claim was not barred. was also agreed that in consideration of the transfer, he and "his executors or administrators shall be entitled, so long as they hold the said hundred shares, to an extra or preferential dividend." On this agreement the parties acted, and the shareholder held the shares till he died in England in 1888, having by will directed that his executors or administrators should hold the hundred shares in trust for his surviving brothers, of whom the executor, who proved the will, was one. Administration with the will annexed was granted in India to the plaintiff in this suit as the attorney of the executor. A note of this was made in the register of the company, leaving the hundred shares still in the name of the testator. The company then discontinued to pay the preferential dividend, and contended that it was no longer payable, inasmuch as the testator's estate had been administered, and that the executor no longer held the shares as executor, but as trustee for the beneficiaries under the will. Held that the contract was still in operation, the executor still "holding" the shares within its meaning; and that the preferential dividend continued payable to the estate of the testator, the company being only concerned with the legal title to the shares, and not with any claims if there were any, that might be made by beneficiaries under the will against the executor as trustee. 32. ——— Suit to compel Directors to register transfer—Persons entitled to require registration of transfer—Insolvency of shareholder—Official Assignee, right of, to sell shares and obtain transfer.—One of the Articles of Association of the Coorla Spinning and Weaving Company provided that the Board of Directors might decline to register any transfer of shares, unless the transferee were approved by the Board. A shareholder, holding 423 shares, became insolvent, and his shares thereupon vested in the Official Assignee, who sold them. The purchaser required the Official Assignee to transfer the shares into the names of two nominees, viz., 200 shares to the name of one nominee, and 223 shares to the name of the other. The Official Assignee executed the necessary transfer deeds and sent them to the company, with a request that the shares might be transferred accordingly. The proposed nominees were already members of the company and registered holders of shares in it, and no objection was taken to them in their personal capacity. The Directors, however, declined to approve of the transferees and to register the transfer, unless the transferees would pledge themselves not to approve a certain change in the mode of remunerating the agents of the company, which the Directors desired to effect, and which they believed would be very advantageous to the company. The transferees refused to pledge themselves in any way as to their future action and brought this suit to enforce registration of the transfer. Held, following Moffatt v. Farquhar, L. R., 7 Ch. D., 591, that the Directors were bound to register the transfers. It was contended that neither the Official Assignee nor the transferees had any legal right to call on the company to register the transfers. Held that, having regard to the provision of the Articles of Association of the company, the Official Assignee was entitled to have the shares registered in the names of his vendees. The power conferred on the directors by the articles of association was a fiduciary power to be exercised for the benefit of the company, and could not be exercised until the question of each transfer together with the names of the transferor and the transferee was before them and they had an opportunity of considering each case. (2) Where it was found that there was a defect in the constitution of the board of directors, which was not cured by the Articles of association,—Held that the Court was not bound to dismiss the application under s. 58 on the ground of its being premature, there having been no refusal to register by a properly constituted Board, but might treat the defence set up as a refusal, and deal with the application on the merits. (3) Where it was found that the real objections entertained by the directors to the various transferees were (1) their connection as employés of the Cawnpore Woollen Mills with M (the managing director of the Cawnpore Woollen Mills) and the personal animosity existing between J (the managing director of the Muir Mills) and M, and (2) the desire of the directors (of the Muir Mills) that M should not add to his voting power at the meetings of the company, and (3) that therefore the objections were not personal to the applicants themselves. Held that, where the articles of association give a discretionary power to the directors to refuse to register a transfer, and it appears that the directors have bonâ fide considered the matter, the Courts will not compel them to disclose their reasons, but if they do disclose their reasons, or evidence is produced as to their reasons, the Courts will consider whether those reasons proceeded on a right or wrong principle. Held further, applying the principle of English cases, that objections not personal to the transferees do not constitute legitimate reasons. Poole v. *Middleton, 29 Beav., 646, In re Bell Bros., 7 L. 36. ——— Meeting of shareholders— Power of chairman—Poll—Time for taking a poll—Right of shareholder to vote at meeting—Articles of association.—At common law, and where the taking of a poll is not governed by statute or special rule, the chairman of a meeting is the proper authority to fix the time and place for the taking of a poll; and a poll is properly and correctly taken immediately after the termination of the meeting. The same rule applies to meetings of registered companies, unless their articles prescribe some other procedure. The object of a poll in the case of a meeting of members of a registered company, as of other meetings, is to ascertain the true sense of the meeting, and is not to give absent members a further opportunity of voting, unless a contrary intention is expressly or impliedly to be gathered from the articles of the company. There is no presumption in construing a doubtful article in the latter sense. Clause 98 of the articles provided that the said firm, as such agents, should have full power and authority (inter alia) to appoint and employ, in or for the purposes of the transaction and management of the affairs and business of the company, such solicitors as they should think proper. An agreement, dated 26th August 1874, was also entered into between the company and the partners in the firm of M F & Co., their executors, administrators, and assigns, for the time being constituting the partnership firm of M F & Co., whereby it was agreed that the said firm should be agents to the company for twenty-five years to buy and sell, etc., and particularly to exercise all the powers contained in cl. 98 of the articles of association. *Messrs. and on the 8th August 1881 procured the passing of a resolution at a board meeting to the effect that, as Messrs. C and B, the company's solicitors, were also the solicitors of the agents, it was desirable, for the interests of the company, that a change should be made, and that Messrs. H, C, and L, be appointed solicitors of the company. The plaintiffs alleged that the only object of passing the said resolution was to facilitate the design of G, of ousting the plaintiffs from their agency, and getting the management of the company for himself; that Messrs. H, C, and L had been for a long time the solicitors of G, and had been advising him in his designs upon the company and upon the plaintiffs, and they contended that the resolution was a breach of the contract between the company and the plaintiffs, and a violation of the articles of association of the company. The plaintiffs sued G and two other directors of the company, and the company itself, and prayed for an injunction against the defendants to restrain them from committing any breach of the agreement of 26th August 1874, and in particular from carrying into effect the resolution appointing Messrs. H, C, and L as solicitors for the company, and to restrain them from doing anything inconsistent with the memorandum and articles of association. The defendants contended that the contract of the 26th August 1874 had been determined by the death of Merwanji Framji, and that the powers conferred on the agents by cl. 98 of the articles were, subject to the general powers of management, vested in the directors by the articles, and that the case was not one in which an injunction could be granted. Held that, having regard to the memorandum and articles of association, the contract was that the firm of M F & Co. for the time being should be the agents of the company for twenty-five years, and that the right to sue on the contract by its nature survived to the plaintiffs after the death of Merwanji Framji. Held, also, that there being no provision either in the articles of association or the agreement of 26th August 1874, that the power thereby conferred on the agents should be subject to the control or assent of the directors, there was no right in the directors to interfere with the agents in the exercise of their powers otherwise than as representing the company in virtue of their general powers of management. This was repealed by 20 & 21 Vic., c. 160, which authorized the company to extend their operations and also their capital, etc. This Act by s. 3 declared the Companies' Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, to be incorporated with it. By s. 18 the company have a "seal for use in India in lieu of the common seal of the company, and from time to time may vary and renew it, and make regulations for its use; and except as by this Act otherwise expressly provided, every document sealed with such seal, in conformity with such regulations, or in pursuance of any order of the directors, or of any authority given by the company under their common seal, shall be as valid and effectual as if the common seal were affixed thereto." By s. 54, "the company from time to time may appoint and remove such committees, persons or person as the company think fit to act on behalf of the company in India or elsewhere, with respect to the making, maintaining, managing, working, and using of the railways and other works of the company, and the control and conduct of any of the affairs in India or elsewhere of the company; and may delegate to any such committee, persons and person respectively all or any of the powers of the company and of the directors and officers thereof, which the company thinks it expedient that such committee, persons, and person respectively should possess for the purposes of his or their respective appointment." In January 1867, E was the agent of the company in India, and he entered, it was alleged on their behalf, into a contract with the plaintiffs for sixty sets of iron-work for low-sided waggons. The plaintiffs' firm did not deal in iron-work, and they had to get the goods manufactured for them in England. The Board of Directors were at the time supplying iron-work for the company. There was nothing to show that E had been appointed under the provisions of s. 54 of the Act, 20 & 21 Vic., c. 160, nor was there any evidence of the extent of his power or authority. A specification of the contract differed from it, in that it stated the waggons to be covered waggons, and not low-sided waggons. The contract was not made under seal of the company, nor was the iron-work, the subject of the contract, ever accepted by the company. The defendants admitted that at the date of the alleged contract E was the agent of the company in India, but denied that his power extended to the making of such contract; they further stated that the contract, if entered into, had been afterwards cancelled. Held by PHEAR, J., that there was no evidence to show that E had authority to make the contract. The dividend of 10 per cent. per annum for two years is guaranteed to the shareholders." The prospectus was signed by A and M and another as directors, but the last took no active part. On the same day an agreement was signed by B, whereby he agreed, in consideration of R4,00,000 paid by A and M as therein mentioned,—viz., R1,50,000 in paid-up shares of the company,—to transfer to them, or Spence's Hotel Company, Limited, all his right, title, and interest in Spence's Hotel, the good-will, furniture, outstandings, etc. The articles of association were dated 7th September 1863. A and M with two others formed the first board of directors. These directors, at an extraordinary meeting on August 1st, presented a report, which was adopted by the meeting, in which they said, "B has deposited with M and A security sufficient to ensure the payment of the 10 per cent. dividend guaranteed to him by the company." On the 5th December 1863 a deed was executed, with the approval of the company's solicitors, by B on the one part and A and M on the other, which, after reciting that as security for the guarantee of the 10 per cent. dividend B had deposited with A and M 400 fully paid-up shares in the company, witnessed "that B would pay to A and M such sums as would be necessary to make up and pay half-yearly a dividend of 10 per cent. per annum: and that he constituted A and M his attorneys to sell the 400 shares and out of the proceeds to make good the yearly dividend of 10 per cent., and after such payment towards the guaranteed dividend, to hold the remaining shares or balance of money in trust for B absolutely." On the same day another deed, prepared by A's private solicitor, was executed by B on one part and A and M on the other, which, after reciting an agreement by B with A and M in April, that if they would assist him in forming such company, for the purchase of Spence's Hotel, and as they had in fact since formed, "he, B, would pay or secure to them, A and M, such fitting and proper remuneration for their trouble and risk as might be ultimately arranged;" and after reciting the first deed of 5th December 1865, witnessed "that B covenanted with A and M that, notwithstanding the trust contained in the before-mentioned indenture whereby the surplus mentioned was declared to belong to B absolutely, the same surplus should belong to, and be the exclusive property of, A and M in equal shares: and that, if the net profits of the Hotel Company should prove sufficient to pay the whole 10 per cent., then the whole of the 400 shares deposited with A and M should be retained by them for their own benefit in equal shares." This deed was undisclosed until the filing of their written statement by A and M in the present suit. There was no actual deposit of the 400 shares by B, but A and M respectively took 200 shares in their own names. R10,947-9-6 were paid by A and M to make up the deficit on the guaranteed dividend up to December 1864. Also, on the 5th December 1863, B executed another deed, in which, after reciting that he had guaranteed that the outstanding debts of the Hotel should realize, before May 1865, R50,000 at least, and that he had deposited with the company 50 fully paid-up shares as security for this guarantee, he, B, covenanted to pay any deficit, and appointed the company his attorneys to realize these shares, and out of the proceeds to pay themselves the deficit, and, subject to this, to hold the shares or the proceeds in trust for him, B. Fifty shares were received from B by A under the trusts of this deed. The outstandings fell short of the guaranteed amount by R19,255. In a suit by the company to recover the 400 shares and for an account of the profits of the same,—Held, in the Court below and on appeal, that the suit was rightly brought by the company as plaintiffs. That A and M were the agents of the company to effect the purchase, and, as such, were bound to make for the company the best bargain which they reasonably could, and forbidden to obtain personal profit or benefit out of the matter. A and M, as regards the beneficial interest in the 400 shares, were trustees thereof for the benefit of the company from the date when that interest arose, and A and M were jointly as well as severally responsible for the 400 shares after satisfying the trust of the guarantee. In the lower Court it was decreed that A should make over the 50 shares or their value to the company, and account for the interim receipts and profits. A and M to account for the 400 shares at par value at least, and for dividends and profits thereon, including profits, if any, made by sale at a premium. A to account similarly for the 50 shares. B to make good his two guarantees after being allowed the benefit of the trust of the 400 shares. 43.——— Liability of directors for negligence in management—Employment of agent by directors—Acquiescence of shareholders—Liability of estate of deceased director—Banker, Who is a.—The plaintiffs' company went into liquidation early in the year 1879, in consequence of losses sustained by the failure of Nursey Kessowji & Co., which firm had been the bankers of the said company. The said firm had stopped payment on the 26th December 1878, having then in its hands the sum of R8,80,250-14-1, belonging to the company. In this suit the official liquidators of the company sought to recover that sum from the defendants, who had been directors of the company, and a further sum of R2,48,670-14-0 as damages sustained by the company through the fraud and gross negligence of the defendants in permitting Nursey Kessowji, the agent of the company, to deal with certain shares for his own purposes. The first four defendants were the directors of the company; the fifth defendant was the assignee of the estate of Nursey Kessowji, whose firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co. had become insolvent. The plaintiffs' company was registered on the 31st July 1878, and by the memorandum and articles of association the said Nursey Kessowji was appointed secretary, treasurer, and agent of the company for a period of twenty-five years, upon the terms and conditions contained in an agreement annexed to the articles of association, whereby it was (inter alia) provided that Nursey Kessowji should deposit with such banker or bankers as the directors for the time being should appoint all the moneys due from him to the said company and exceeding in amount at any one time the sum of R5,000. On the 6th August 1878, the directors of the company appointed the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co. to be the bankers of the company. It was further alleged by the plaintiffs that, immediately after the registration of the company, the directors and Nursey Kessowji began to borrow money upon the credit of the company far in excess of the legitimate wants of the company, and to pay over the money so borrowed to the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co., to be used by that firm in speculative business; that the said loans were obtained by the directors, not bonâ fide for the purposes of the company, but for the purposes of supplying funds to the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co., to enable it to carry on its business. At the end of the year 1878 the sum paid over by the directors to the firm of Nursey Kessowji had, by reason of such borrowing, amounted to the sum of R8,80,250. The plaintiffs alleged that the said loans were wholly unnecessary; and they charged the directors with gross negligence in raising the said loans or permitting them to be raised; and in permitting the moneys so borrowed to remain in the hands of the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co., to be applied by that firm to its own purposes. As to the R2,48,670-14-0, the plaintiffs alleged that certain unallotted shares of the total value of R3,93,750 had been left in the hands of the directors to be disposed of, the proceeds of which were to be applied in making certain payments due by the company; that instead of applying these shares to such purposes, the directors had filled up the said shares in the name of Nursey Kessowji, and authorized him to mortgage the same, in order to raise funds; that the said Nursey Kessowji had accordingly dealt with the said shares, and had applied the proceeds thereof to his own purposes. The plaintiffs charged the directors with fraud and gross negligence as to these shares, and claimed to recover R2,48,670-14-0 in respect thereof from the defendants. The defendants alleged that they had acted bonâ fide in all matters connected with the company; that they had always believed the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co. to be in a solvent condition; and had no reason to mistrust its management of the affairs of the company. One of the defendants (No. 3) died after the institution of the suit, and his sons were made parties. His representatives and Kessowji Naik (defendant No. 1) also claimed to set off against the plaintiffs' claim certain payments made by them as guarantors for the company. Held (1) that one of the directors knew as a fact that the agent was not in a solvent condition; and that the other directors, in the circumstances of the case, ought to have ascertained his financial condition. (2) Directors are responsible for the management of their company where, by the articles of association, the business is to be conducted by the board with the assistance of an agent. They cannot divest themselves of their responsibility by delegating the whole management to the agent, and abstaining from all enquiry. If he proves unfaithful under such circumstances, the liability is theirs, just as much as if they themselves had been unfaithful. (3) That the directors had not used fair and reasonable diligence in the management of the company's affairs, and were liable to refund the money entrusted by them to the agent, Nursey Kessowji, without proper knowledge as to whether it was needed, and without any subsequent investigation of a serious character with respect to its disposal. Such conduct amounted to gross negligence. All the directors were equally responsible, as all attended the directors' meetings, and all gave the same blind sanction to every act and proposal of the agent. Held, also, that the estate of the deceased director was liable on the ground that the misfeasance of a director is a breach of trust, and not a mere personal default. A separate debt cannot be set off against a joint and several debt, and directors cannot set off money due from the company to them against sums which they may be ordered to refund to the liquidators. 44. ——— Power of directors to deal with profits either by declaring a dividend or by appropriating to reserve fund—Power of shareholders to interfere with declaration of dividend.—The articles of association of the B Co. provided (a) that the directors might, with the sanction of the company in general meeting, declare a dividend; (b) that the directors might, before recommending any dividend, set aside out of the profits of the company such sum as they thought proper as a reserve fund to meet contingencies or for equalizing dividends, etc. The directors of the company added to the existing reserve fund a certain portion of the profits of the company for the year 1885, and thereby diminished the amount of dividend which they could otherwise have declared. Some of the shareholders disapproved of the course taken by the directors, and contended (1) that the shareholders of the company had a right by resolution to withdraw from the reserve fund a sum sufficient to enable the directors to declare a suitable dividend; (2) that they had the right to direct the directors to declare a dividend greater or less than that recommended by the directors out of the amount standing to profit and loss, including the amount so withdrawn. Held that under the articles of association the contention of the shareholders could not be sustained. The reserve fund consisted of profits, and by the articles the disposal of profits was expressly entrusted to the directors. To allow the shareholders to deal with it would be a direct contravention of the articles, which entrusted to the management of the directors all the business of the company. Nor could the shareholders decide the question as to the amount of dividend. By the articles they agreed that the directors should declare the dividend and only reserved to themselves the power to vote a dividend to which they objected. The remedy of the shareholders, if they were dissatisfied with the directors, was to remove them from office, or to alter the articles of association. the same 2,000 shares at 29½ per cent. premium. The contracts for the re-purchase were signed by three directors of the defendants' company, and on each was a memorandum, initialled by two of them, referring to a list of the "Share Receipts," delivered with the words "we are duly to examine and receive the same at the fixed time." One hundred and ninety letters of allotment in the names of several persons, and for various numbers of shares, endorsed by the original allottees, and initialled by one of the three directors, were, together with receipts for the first call, handed over to the persons who acted for the plaintiffs by the three directors of the defendants' company who made the contracts. In April the defendants' company made a fresh call, payable on the 4th May. A list of the names and addresses of the original allottees of what were called "shares in the market" (i.e., other than those purchased by the company itself for cash, or held by it on mortgage) was made out from the date of settlement, and notices of forfeiture for non-payment of the call were sent by post. The original holders of the 190 letters of allotment were included in the list, but no notice was sent to the plaintiffs. On the 27th of May all shares upon which the second call was not paid were declared to be forfeited for the benefit of the company. The defendants' company, as stated in the memorandum of association, was established among other objects for the purchase and sale of debentures, stocks, shares of joint-stock companies (including the shares of this company), and other securities, the making loans and advances on such securities as the directors of the company might think fit. Held that the contracts for the purchase of the 2,000 shares being within the scope of the authority of the directors, the defendants were bound by them; that the defendants were bound to treat the plaintiffs as the holders of those shares, and to give them the notice required by the articles of association; and that they were not at liberty to give that notice to the original allottees, who, by the admission of the defendants, testified by the acts of their agents in making the contracts, had parted with the shares; that the shares were, consequently, not legally forfeited, and the defendants having refused to accept them, and they being then unsaleable, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the full price as damages. and subsequently divided among themselves; B P taking for himself two-fifths of the whole, including the 25 shares of J S. The fact of the joint purchase was not communicated to the other directors of the company, nor was there any evidence to show that their attention had been called to certain entries in the books of the company relating to B P having paid the second call on his two-fifths of the joint purchase. J S got no notice to pay the second call, and never applied for or obtained a certificate for the 25 shares; but such a certificate was obtained by B P on the 10th of October 1864, certifying that J S was the shareholder. J S had signed a blank form of transfer and a blank form of request to the directors to transfer, which were undated and without particulars; but B P never executed the transfer as transferee, and the shares never were transferred to his name on the register, nor was the sale to him ever brought to the notice of the directors as a board, or to any of his partners, of any portion of the 2,800 shares; and the articles of association required the consent in writing of the directors to every transfer. On application by J S that his name should be removed from the list of contributories as framed by the official liquidator, and the names of B P's trustees under Act XXVIII of 1865 substituted therein in respect of the 25 shares, —Held that J S was not exonerated, under the circumstances, from the duty of obeying the articles of association and the provision of Act XIX of 1857; that the act of an individual director in his private capacity ought not to bind the board, which had never authorized or ratified his conduct; and that the official liquidator, as representing the body of shareholders, rightly insisted upon keeping J S's name on the list of shareholders. The letters of allotment indorsed by the allottees and receipts for the first call were made over, at the time of purchase, to the company. No transfers, however, were executed by the allottees, nor were the shares registered by the company in their own name, but they continued to stand in the names of the allottees. Two thousand of the seven thousand shares had been re-sold by the company; and the remaining five thousand were mentioned in a list, kept by the company, of shares purchased by them. On application to the allottees to have their names removed from the list of contributories, as framed by the official liquidator,—Held that the company, through its directors, having, as well by the act of purchase as by their subsequent conduct, treated themselves as the owners of the shares, could not be permitted to take advantage of their own neglect, or

48. ——— Purchase of shares in other companies and their own shares—Trustee shareholders—Parties—Acquiescence.—The purchase by the directors of a joint-stock company, on behalf of the company, of shares in other joint-stock companies unless expressly authorized by the memorandum of association, is ultra vires. A joint-stock company, even though it be empowered by its memorandum of association to deal in the shares of other companies, is not thereby empowered to deal in its own shares, and a purchase by the directors of the company of its own shares, on behalf of the company, is therefore, under such circumstances, ultra vires. A sharer in a joint-stock company can maintain an action against the directors of such company to compel them to restore to the company funds of the company that have by them been employed in transactions that the directors have no authority to enter into, without making the company a party to the suit. Where a shareholder purchased shares in a joint-stock company, knowing at the time that similar companies were in the habit of dealing in their own shares and those of other companies, and believing that the company in question adopted the same practice, but made no enquiry to ascertain whether or not such was the case, nor made any objections to such dealings of the company until it was discovered they had resulted in loss, it was held that he had, by his own conduct, lost his right to hold the directors personally liable in respect of such dealing, and the result was held to be the same whether the said shareholder was beneficially entitled to his shares, or merely a trustee of them for others. England, but the operations of the company will not be delayed until they can be sent home and taken up." On 18th July 1865, the company advertised that "all the Indian shares being subscribed for, the share list is now closed, and the letters of allotment will be issued at an early date." In truth, not half the number of "Indian shares" were at any time subscribed for. On the 22nd November 1895, the directors resolved that "a call of R100 per share be made upon the shareholders, payable at the National Bank of India on the 15th December proximo." R G received notice of the call, but did not pay it. On 18th April 1866, the directors desired the secretary to write to shareholders who had not paid their first call in full, asking them to do so at once. R G, who had not signed the articles of association, on receipt of notice from the secretary, requested to be allowed to withdraw his money, forfeiting one-fifth, or to be allowed to hold five shares instead of fifty. The request was refused by the directors, who on 18th July 1866 passed a further resolution that the defaulters, among whom R G was named, "have notice sent them that unless the amount of the calls due on their respective shares, together with interest thereon at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum from the 15th December 1865, be paid into the National Bank of India, Calcutta, on or before the 7th August 1866, legal proceedings will be adopted against them for the recovery without further notice." R G, on receiving notice of this resolution, wrote, through his attorneys, informing the directors that he would apply to the High Court to have his name removed from the register of shareholders. The directors thereupon declared the shares to be forfeited. On 25th September 1866, a resolution to wind up the company voluntarily was passed at a general meeting of the shareholders, and was afterwards confirmed. In the course of the winding up, the liquidator applied to the Court, under s. 154, Act X of 1866, to determine whether R G was entitled to a refund of the deposit money paid by him on the fifty shares allotted to him in the company, or whether he was liable to pay, as a contributory, the call in respect of his shares made before the shares were forfeited. It was not until the hearing of this application that R G became aware of the facts which proved that the directors had published material statements which they knew to be untrue. Held that the issuing of a prospectus is an act comprised within the term "management and conduct of the company's business." The statements made in the prospectus were the representations of the company. R G was entitled to have his contract to take 50 shares set aside, and to be repaid the amount of his deposit money. At the trial he also sought to rely upon a misrepresentation in the prospectus of the company. Held that the defendant ought to be pinned down to the misrepresentations alleged in his pleadings and upon the faith of which he says he acted. It is not open to him to go into the question of misrepresentation in the prospectus. That the prospectus, although issued by the promoters before the formation of the company, was the basis of the contract between the company and the defendant for the allotment of the shares, and if the misstatements therein alleged by the defendant were relied upon by him and were material to the contract, the defendant would be entitled to rescind the contract and to repudiate the shares in the absence of laches or conduct on his part which would deprive him of that right. *In re Metropolitan Coal Consumers' Association. Three of the directors of the above company, one of whom was also the secretary, treasurer, and agent of the company, drew a bill in favour of S in the following form: "Sixty days after the date of this first of exchange (second and third of the same tenor and date not being paid) pay to the order of S the sum of rupees two lakhs only, value received, and place to account of G P, K N, N K, secretary, treasurer, and agent, The New Fleming

Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited directors." The bill was endorsed by S to the bank of Bombay, was duly presented for payment to the drawee, and protested for non-payment. Subsequently to the date of the drawing of the bill, the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, went into liquidation. The Bank of Bombay claimed as endorsees of the bill to prove against the company as drawers. Held that, assuming that companies under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) are by s. 47 liable on bills of exchange drawn on their behalf, or on account of persons acting under their authority, the bill in question was not such a bill. Whether or not a note or bill must, on the face of it, express that it is made, accepted, or endorsed, "by or on behalf or on account of" the company, yet there must be on the face of it that which shows that it was so made, accepted, or endorsed, and which excludes the inference that it was made, accepted, or endorsed by or on behalf or on account of any other person. A bill or note may be in a certain sense on behalf of or on account of a company, though there is upon its face no reference to the company, even in the form of a description of the persons who actually make, accept, or endorse as being directors or secretary. As between such persons and the company, such a bill or note may well be on behalf or on account of the company, but it is not therefore so between the company and third parties. So far as third parties are concerned, a company under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) can be made liable on a bill or note only when such bill or note on the face of it expresses that it was made, accepted, or endorsed by, or on behalf or on account of, the company, or where that fact appears by necessary inference from what the face of the instrument itself shows. The addition to the signatures of individuals as makers, drawers, acceptors, or endorsers of notes or bills, of their description as director or directors, secretary, treasurer, and agent of a certain company, is not considered to raise such inference, as it does not exclude the supposition that, though described as directors, etc., they intended to make themselves personally liable to holders of the instrument, though as between themselves and the company they may be entitled to be indemnified for anything they may have paid on account of the company in respect of such notes or bills. Dutton v. Marsh, L. R., 6 Q. B., 361, followed. Rule No. 24 of the Rules dated the 3rd of August 1866, made by the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, under the powers given by s. 189 of the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866), is ultra vires so far as it allows interest on debts or claims subsequent to the debt of the order to wind up a company to creditors whose debts or claims do not carry interest. 53.——— Trading by a company under its memorandum of association—Memorandum of association — Ultra vires.—The doctrine that a company can do nothing which is not expressly or impliedly warranted by its memorandum of association or other instrument of incorporation, must be reasonably understood and applied. A company, therefore, in carrying on the trade for which it is constituted, and in whatever may be fairly regarded as incidental to, or consequential upon, that trade, is free to enter into any transaction not expressly prohibited by its memorandum of association. 54.——— Liability of directors for funds of company applied in transactions—"Ultra vires"—Dealing in shares of other companies.—The plaintiff company was formed in 1864. By its memorandum of association its object was declared to be commission agency and general trading in cotton and also in goods and commodities suited for the market in the interior of India. The memorandum contained the following words:—"If found desirable, the company may effect purchases of cotton and produce in Bombay and ship to England and carry on such local trade as may seem profitable." The company went into liquidation in 1867. In April 1890 the present suit was filed against the defendant, who had been one of the directors of the company, and it was alleged that after the formation of the company the defendant and his co-directors had carried on speculative dealings in shares of other companies and had used the funds of the company for this purpose, which was not warranted by the memorandum of association. The plaintiffs alleged that their dealings, which were duly set forth in their plaint, had resulted in a heavy loss to the company, and they now sought to recover from the defendant the sum of R3,37,700-13-5. There had been originally five directors of the company, but at the date of suit two of them were dead, and two had become insolvent. The plaint was filed in April 1890. Held (affirming the decision of PARSONS, J.) (1) that the memorandum of association did not justify the directors of the company in dealing in shares of other companies, and that the transactions complained of by the plaintiffs were ultra vires; (2) that the directors were liable to replace the moneys of the company which they had misapplied by applying them to a purpose which was ultra vires. Soon after the establishment of the company, the directors were induced to take a share in, and become liable for the cost of, a mill for husking rice, which it was intended to establish by a separate company; and a considerable sum was advanced out of the funds of the company for the building of the mill and for machinery, etc. The undertaking failed, and the directors, to avoid losing the advances of the company, resolved to take over the mill, and carry it on as the property of the company. They accordingly purchased a large quantity of rice which was husked at the mill, and consigned to several firms in England. P M & Co. were appointed agents of the company in Calcutta for the purpose of shipping the rice, under letters from the directors guaranteeing that the company would pay at maturity any re-drafts which might be drawn on P M & Co. as their agents in respect of the shipments. Bills of exchange were drawn by P M & Co. on the firms to which the respective consignments were made, and these bills were sold in the ordinary course of business in Calcutta, P M & Co. realizing the proceeds for the benefit of the company. Those bills were honoured by the respective consignees. The rice was sold in England at a considerable loss, and re-drafts for the deficiency were drawn on P M & Co. or on the company. The company went into liquidation during these transactions. Some of these re-drafts had been accepted by the company, and others merely registered by the liquidators as claims against the company. Claims were now made on the company by the drawees or endorsees of these re-drafts, but the liquidators declined to pay them, stating that the proceedings in connection with the consignments of rice were not authorized by the memorandum and articles of association of the company, and that therefore the company was not liable for any losses in respect of such consignments. Held that trading in rice was a transaction ultra vires of the company; the directors therefore could not bind the company, and the consignees could not recover in respect of the shipments. The company was not liable on the re-drafts; it had no power to issue bills of exchange or to accept the re-drafts, and therefore the holders of those which had been in fact accepted were in no better position than the holders of those which had not been accepted. Where a note, which had been taken by the company as a security from two judgment-debtors of the company, was endorsed by the company to a third party, and discounted by him, and was on the due date, not having been taken up by the makers, renewed by the company,—Held that such negotiation of the note by the company was within the ordinary course of the business of the company. 57. ——— Liability of company for loan to secretary, treasurer, and agent—Principal and agent—Undisclosed principal—Election—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 230, 233, 234.—By the memorandum and articles of association of the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company N K was appointed secretary, treasurer, and agent of the company, with power to raise or borrow from time to time, in the name or otherwise on behalf of the company, such sums of money as he might think expedient by bonds, debentures, or promissory notes, or in such other manner as he might deem best; and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any money so borrowed, to make any arrangement which he might deem expedient by conveying or assigning away property of the company to trustees or otherwise. N K was also secretary, treasurer and agent of three other mill companies in Bombay. On the 31st October 1878 the directors passed the following resolution:—"That the unallotted shares be filled up in the name of Nursey Kessowji, Esq., secretary, treasurer, and agent, who is empowered to mortgage them at a fair rate of interest to enable him to obtain funds for the use of the company." On the 11th November 1878 P advanced a sum of ₹1,00,500 upon the terms contained in a Gujarati writing of that date, and signed by N K. In this document N K acknowledged the receipt of the money, for which 335 shares in the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company were duly handed over as security, and he agreed to repay it within three months. The last clause in the agreement stated that it was "duly agreed to and approved by him (N K) and his heirs and representatives." As an additional security, P, when advancing the loan, obtained from K N (father of N K) a guarantee in the following terms:—"To Thuker Purmanundass Jivandass. Written by Sha Kessowji Naik. To wit,—This day Sha Nursey Kessowji has received from you ₹1,00,500, namely, one lakh and five hundred, having deposited by way of security 335, namely, three hundred and thirty-five 'shares' of 'The New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited.' As to that, I am not to raise any obstacle or objection. In case it should be necessary, I am to fill up and duly deliver to you an 'indemnity bond' on stamped paper through your vakeel (solicitor). This writing is duly agreed to and approved by me and my heirs and representatives. Bombay, the 11th of November in the English year 1878." On the evening of the day on which the loan was made,—viz., 11th November 1878,—but without the knowledge of K N, it was agreed between N K and P that the time for the repayment of the loan should be extended to six months. In December 1878 N K became insolvent, and on 28th December 1878 a petition was presented to the High Court to wind up the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company. On the 30th December P, through his solicitors, wrote a letter to the company, stating that N K had obtained a loan from him of ₹1,00,500 on behalf of the company, and enquiring whether the fact appeared in the company's books. To this letter he received a reply signed by "K N, director," stating that the loan appeared in the books in P's name. On the 17th January 1879, an order was made for the winding up of the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, and on the 4th February 1879 P gave notice on the official liquidators of the company of his claim against the company for the money advanced by him on the 11th November 1878. In March 1869 he filed a suit against K N to enforce his guarantee, but was unsuccessful, the Court holding that, by extending the period of the loan to six months, the agreement of the 11th November 1878 had been materially varied without K N's knowledge, and that K N was consequently discharged. On the 24th April 1879 P filed his affidavit in support of his claim against the company. The company resisted the claim. Held (1) that the directors had power, under the memorandum and articles of association, to authorize N K to borrow money on behalf of the company, and that they had done so, and with that object had entrusted him with the unallotted shares. (2) That when P advanced the loan to N K, he was led to believe that N K was obtaining it on behalf of the four mill companies of which he was secretary, treasurer, and agent, but that P was not aware and was not informed for which of the said companies the loan was obtained, and that the money was in fact advanced to N as to an agent acting on behalf of an undisclosed principal. (3) That P, when he discovered that the money was obtained for the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, was entitled to claim against the company and to rank as a creditor of the company for the amount advanced to N K with interest from the date of the loan,—viz., 11th November 1878,—to the date of the presentation of the petition to wind up the company. No previous sanction was given to any of these advances. On the 4th October 1879, an extraordinary general meeting of shareholders was held, at which a resolution was passed sanctioning a mortgage to K of the whole of the company's property, except a certain garden, to secure the payment of a sum, not exceeding ₹1,00,000, for advances already made and to be made, with interest at 7 per cent. This resolution was confirmed on the 16th of October, and the mortgage was executed on the 22nd of December 1879. Subsequently the company was ordered to be wound up, and K advanced a claim for ₹1,20,787. Held that there is a distinction between loans which a company is empowered to raise under its borrowing powers, and debts which, in meeting its current liabilities and in the actual carrying on of its affairs, the company, or its agents on its behalf, have contracted; and that the advances made by K did not amount to a borrowing within the meaning of the articles of association. *In re Cefn Cilcen Mining Company, L. 66. ——— Winding up under supervision of Court—Order for dissolution of company—Voluntary winding up—Official liquidator—Companies Act, VI of 1882.—As a general rule, a winding-up of a company under supervision of the Court should be terminated in the same way as a purely voluntary winding-up,—i.e., under ss. 186 and 187 of the Companies Act, VI of 1882. Although, under s. 195 of the Companies Act, VI of 1882, the Court has power to make an order dissolving a company in the course of winding-up, subject to its supervision, such cases must be exceptional and can only occur when the Court has deemed it proper to carry on the winding-up under supervision in a manner such as clearly to approximate to a winding-up by the Court. The ordinary rule is the other way, and it is reasonable that it should be so; as generally, a winding-up under supervision is not conducted under so intimate a control of the Court as to put the Court in a position to judge of the correctness of the liquidators' action and the completeness of the winding-up. So far as the Court does not interfere, a winding-up under supervision remains essentially a voluntary winding-up; but the Court in a winding-up under supervision has full authority to interfere and to exercise to any extent the power which it might have exercised if an order had been made for winding up the company by the Court. The words "official liquidator" in s. 160 of the Companies Act, VI of 1882, do not include the liquidators in a winding-up under supervision. The defendant denied that he had ever held shares in the plaintiffs' bank, or that he ever had notice of any of the proceedings in the winding-up. At the trial it appeared that all the various orders and notices to shareholders made in the winding-up of the bank prior to the balance order of the 5th June 1879 had been sent by post to the defendant, addressed to him at No. 36, Fanasvadi, and were all returned undelivered. It was proved that he had never resided there; but that his brother had a place of business there, and that the defendant used occasionally to go there for the purpose of attending to his brother's business. It further appeared that the residence of the defendant, as given in the register of shareholders, was Loharchall, and not 36, Fanasvadi. Held that the notices, orders, etc., prior to the order of 5th June 1879, were not so served as to make the defendant subject to that final order; that the obligation to obey the command of the Court of Chancery contained therein had not arisen as against the defendant, and that, consequently, the present suit must fail. It is a leading principle of English law, always understood except when expressly excluded, that a person proceeded against in a Court must have due notice of the proceeding; failing such notice, he is entitled to protection if the judgment or order obtained in his absence is made the ground of a suit in any Court governed by English principles. The Court of Chancery in England had not in this case so called the defendant before it as to enable it in his absence to pronounce a definitive order against him or to bind him in the Court of his domicile, although he was included in the order of the Court of Chancery. The fact that the defendant frequently attended his brother's place of business at No. 36, Fanasvadi, was not sufficient to make that place his "last known address." If there had been evidence that he had used No. 36, Fanasvadi, as an address for receiving letters, that might probably have been sufficient. It would then have been known as his address at least as an address. The address or residence of a member of a company entered in the register of shareholders, although sufficiently ascertained for the purpose of communication from the company, is not, therefore, ascertained for a service of legal proceedings. For the purpose of such service, care must be taken to find out the last known place of abode of the alleged contributory, and to effect the substituted service there. Companies Act, 1862, and the winding-up order was made by the Court of Chancery in England on the 20th July 1866. By a subsequent order made on the winding up it was ordered by the said Court that service of notices, etc., of the various proceedings might be effected on contributories, being past members, by posting the same either in England or in Bombay duly addressed to the last known address or place of abode of such contributories. The Court of Chancery, on the 16th December 1878, made an order for a call of £10 per share upon the contributories, and, on the 5th June 1879, the final balance order was made by the Court. This suit was brought to recover the sum of R754-7-0 alleged to be due by the defendant as a contributory in the B list under the said balance order. The plaintiff was an assignee of the bank. The defendant who resided at Sumari, in the Surat District, denied that he was a shareholder in the bank, and alleged that he had had no notice of the various proceedings in the winding up. At the hearing it was proved that one of the notices, which had been posted in Bombay addressed to the defendant at Sumari, in the Surat District, viz., a notice of the intended application for a call of £10 per share, dated the 27th August 1878, had been returned undelivered to the Dead Letter Office, having been carelessly addressed. No further steps were taken to serve it on the defendant. Held that the defendant, not having received any summons or notice to attend the hearing of the application for a call of £10 per share, was not liable to the call made in his absence. Courts in British India, when called upon to give effect to a foreign judgment, should insist upon a strict proof of the validity and service of summonses and other processes alleged to have emanated from a foreign Court, and made a foundation for a liability to be enforced here by Courts that have no cognizance of the case on its merits. Rousillon v. Rousillon, L. I, Table A (97).—Upon the settlement of the list of contributories to the assets of a company in course of liquidation under the Indian Companies Act, one of the persons named in the list denied that he had agreed to become a member of the company or was liable as a contributory. The District Court admitted as evidence on behalf of the official liquidator a press-copy of a letter addressed to the objector for the purpose of proving that a notice of allotment of shares was duly communicated. No notice to the objector to produce the original letter appeared on the record; but at the hearing of the appeal it was alleged by the official liquidator and denied by the objector that such notice had been in fact given. There was no evidence as to the posting of the original letter or of the address which it bore; but the press-copy was contained in the press-copy letter-book of the company, and was proved to be in the handwriting of a deceased secretary of the company, whose duty it was to despatch letters after they had been copied in the letter-book. The objector denied having received the letter or any notice of allotment. Held that the Court should not draw the inference that the original letter was properly addressed or posted; that the press-copy letter was inadmissible in evidence; and that there was no proof of the communication of any notice of allotment. The evidence adduced by the official liquidator to show that the defendant was a member of the company and so liable as a contributory consisted of the register of members, a letter written by the objector, a reply thereto written by a managing director of the company, and the oral testimony of the director himself. The objector adduced no evidence at all. Held that the official liquidator might, if he had chosen to do so, have put the register in evidence, and waited, before giving any further evidence, until the objector had given some to displace the primâ facie evidence afforded by the register, or to impugn the character of the register; but his case must be looked at as a whole, and having taken the line which he did, he must take the consequences of his other evidence contradicting or impugning the primâ facie evidence of the register, and notwithstanding that the objector gave no evidence, the register was not conclusive. 81. ——— Transfer of assets to new company—Companies Act (X of 1866), ss. 149, 154, and 175—Right of creditors of transferring company—Dissentient shareholders—Sanction of Court.—By special resolutions passed on the 3rd July 1878 and confirmed on 31st July 1878, the shareholders of the Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company (Limited) resolved that the company should be wound up voluntarily, and that all the assets of the said company should be transferred by the liquidators to a new company then intended shortly to be formed and registered in Bombay, called the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, and that the liquidators should receive as the consideration for such transfer certain fully paid-up shares in the new company for distribution among the shareholders of the old company. The said transfer was to be made subject to a covenant on the part of the new company to perform all the agreements and to discharge all the debts and liabilities of the old company. The new company was duly formed and registered on the same day (31st July 1878), and the specified number of shares was delivered to the liquidators of the old company for distribution among the shareholders of the old company. Two of the said shareholders J and H, the holders of 50 and 20 shares respectively, dissented from the special resolutions in the manner provided by s. 175 of the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866), and required the liquidators to purchase their interests. The matter was thereupon referred to arbitration. In the case of H an award was made and filed, but further proceedings were stayed by order of Court. In the case of J no award was made, and he brought a suit which was still pending against both the old and new companies and the liquidators to recover ₹75,000, the alleged value of his shares. In pursuance of the resolution, the liquidators of the old company handed over the assets to the new company, but no formal grant or assignment, in writing, of the said assets was executed. They remained in its possession until the 17th January 1879, on which day the said new company was ordered to be wound up by the Court. The petitioners were appointed official liquidators, and as such were in possession of the assets at the date of the petition. No property whatever remained in the hands of the old company, except the shares remaining to be distributed among the dissentient shareholders. The new company had discharged debts of the old company to the amount of six lakhs of rupees, and there remained debts of over three lakhs due by the old company. Until after the new company had become insolvent, no creditor of the old company had expressed his dissent from the above special resolution, or had refused to accept the new company as his debtor. On 1st March 1879 the voluntary winding-up of the old company was directed to be continued as a winding-up under the supervision of the Court. The official liquidators of the new company now presented a petition, praying that the above special resolutions might be sanctioned by the Court. Certain unsatisfied creditors of the old company opposed the petition, insisting that the sanction should be refused, except upon the condition that they should be paid in full out of the property of the old company. The two dissentient shareholders, J and H, also objected to the sanction being given unless provisions were made for the satisfaction of their claims as soon as they should be ascertained. Held that, under the special circumstances of the case, the sanction of the Court should be given to the resolutions, but subject to the value of the interest of the two dissenting shareholders being paid or adequately secured. Such order to be without prejudice to any question between the creditors of the old company and the dissenting shareholders. IN RE FLEMING SPINNING AND WEAVING COMPANY [I. L. R., 3 Bom., 299

S. & W. Co. (Ld.)*, in the course of being wound up, voluntarily proposed to transfer its business and property to another company to be called the New F. S. & W. Co., and passed a special resolution on the 3rd July, confirmed on the 31st July 1878, under s. 175 of the Indian Companies Act, X of 1866, empowering the liquidators to carry out the transfer. J, a dissentient member of the old company, sent on the 5th August, and, therefore, within the seven days provided by that section, a notice expressing his dissent from such resolution; but the notice did not contain the requisition provided for by the latter part of that section, requiring the liquidators either to abstain from carrying the resolution into effect or to purchase his interest in the company. The liquidators, however, replied on the 23rd August by offering to purchase J's shares, which offer being refused, they and J entered into an agreement on the 12th October, "in pursuance of the provisions in that behalf contained in the Indian Companies Act, X of 1866," for the reference of "the dispute as to the price to be paid to the said J for his shares in the F. S. & W. Co. (Ld.)" to two arbitrators and an umpire to be named by them. The agreement fixed a short date for the making of the award. The arbitration was entered on, but the time limited for the award having expired without any award being made, J filed a suit, on the 28th of December, to recover the value of his shares.

On the 1st March 1879, the winding-up of the F. S. & W. Co. was ordered to be continued under the supervision of the Court, and J's suit was at the same time stayed. J then endeavoured to have the arbitration revived. In this he was unsuccessful, the submission not having been filed in Court, and the arbitration being held to be already dead and past revival. The suit subsequently came on to be heard and was dismissed, on the ground that s. 175 of the Act made an arbitration and an award a condition precedent to any suit. J then called on the liquidators to nominate an arbitrator, and enter on a fresh arbitration. This the liquidators doubted whether they could legally do, and therefore they now petitioned the Court for its order and direction in the matter. They submitted that J had never acquired the rights of a dissentient shareholder under s. 175 by reason of the insufficiency of his notice, and that, in any case, one arbitration having been already entered upon and determined, J could not now call upon them to enter on a fresh arbitration. Held, following In re Union Bank of Kingston-upon-Hull, L. R., 13 Ch. D., 808, that J's notice of dissent of the 5th August was in itself an insufficient notice under the provisions of s. 175 of the Indian Companies Act, 1866, inasmuch as it did not contain the requisition to the liquidators required by the latter part of that section, and that, consequently, it was open to the liquidators to have treated J as disentitled to the rights of a dissentient shareholder under that section. Held, further, that it was within the power of the liquidators to waive such informality in the notice on behalf of the company, and that they had in fact done so, and that J was consequently entitled to the rights of a dissentient shareholder under that section. Held, further, that the rights of a dissentient shareholder, under that and the following sections, who had elected to have the value of his interest in the company decided by arbitration, were not limited to a single reference to arbitration, and were not extinguished by the expiry, without an award being made, of the time fixed by such reference for making an award; that in such a case, unless otherwise disentitled, the dissentient shareholder was entitled to a second reference to arbitration for the purpose of arriving at a definite result by means of an award, which was the object contemplated by those sections of the Act. Under similar circumstances, a judgment-debt due to the Secretary of State in Council for India is in Bombay entitled to the like precedence, and the reason is that such debt is vested in the Crown, and when realized falls into the State treasury. The nature of the cause of action in respect of which the judgment was recovered does not affect the right of the Crown or of the Secretary of State in Council for India to priority. As the Crown is not, either expressly or by implication, bound by the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866), and as an order made under that Act for the winding-up of a company does not work any alteration of property, such an order does not enable the Court to stay the execution of a judgment-debt due to the Crown or to the Secretary of State in Council for India. On the facts it was not a case of "illegal seizure and detention" of cattle, but rather one of theft, as all the elements of that offence were present, and the accused should have been charged with and tried for that offence. Held, further, that the sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of the compensation was not warranted by law. 52. ——— Amount of compensation—Criminal Procedure Code, 1869, s. 270.—Since the passing of Act VIII of 1869, a Magistrate may, under s. 270, in a case in which more than one person has been accused, award compensation not exceeding R50 to each person. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF BHYROO LALL [14 W. R., Cr., 75

53. ——— Alteration of charge to bring offence under Ch. XV of Code—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 270.—When on a complaint being preferred to a Magistrate of an offence not coming within Ch. XV of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Magistrate alters it so as to bring it under Ch. XV, he cannot award compensation to the accused under s. 270 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the offence originally complained of not being one for which compensation can be awarded. REG. v. GURNINGAPA 7 Bom., Cr., 58

54. ——— Alteration of charge to bring offence under Ch. XV of Code.—Held that, where a Magistrate is dealing with a charge which he has the power to dispose of finally under Ch. XV of the Code of Criminal Procedure, although the charge, as originally laid, fell under Ch. XIV, he has a discretion to inflict a fine under s. 270 of that Code. HOTHOOR LALOONG v. HINDOO SINGH MOUZ . . . 10 W. R., Cr., 49

55. ——— Cattle Trespass Act, 1871, s. 20—False complaint.—A complaint was made against certain persons under s. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act of 1871, charging them with having illegally seized and detained the complainant's cattle. The Assistant Magistrate who heard the complaint found it to be false, and he ordered the complainant to pay R20 compensation to the accused and in default to suffer simple imprisonment for 21 days. On application to the High Court,—Held that the order was illegal, and must be set aside. IN THE MATTER OF KALA CHAND v. GUDADHUR BISWAS [I. L. R., 13 Calc., 304

56. ——— *Cattle Trespass Act, 1871, s. 20—Frivolous complaint—Compensation—Cattle Trespass Act, Ch. 21. ——— Co-accused—Punishment of some, if sufficient ground for refusal to try others who did not appear at the first trial—Further enquiry—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), ss. 190, 437.—If several persons commit an offence, a Magistrate cannot consider the punishment of some of them to be sufficient in regard to others and refuse to summon the rest of the accused. A Magistrate having taken cognizance of an offence has jurisdiction to hold judicial proceedings in respect of all persons who, the evidence discloses, are the offenders. 24. ——— Report of police officer—Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV of 1861), s. 68—Act X of 1872, s. 142—Knowledge—Report of police—Interference of High Court.—S. 68 of the Criminal Procedure Code applies only to cases in which the private individual injured or aggrieved does not come forward to make a formal complaint. That section is intended for the purpose of enabling a Magistrate to take care that justice may be vindicated, notwithstanding that the persons individually aggrieved are unwilling or unable to prosecute; and even in such cases the jurisdiction to arrest requires, for its foundation, knowledge of the fact of an offence having been committed, and that knowledge must be either personal or derived from testimony legally given. The report of the police, or any statement which falls short of an actual formal complaint, or of a statement made on oath, is not sufficient in law to give a Magistrate jurisdiction to issue his warrant. In this case, although the Magistrate had acted illegally before evidence was recorded, and had shown a want of discretion in some of the stages, the High Court refused to quash the Magistrate's order directing the prisoners to be put upon their defence, on the ground that the order had been made by a competent officer after hearing evidence which was judicially received and recorded. 25. ——— Power of Court to act on police report—Subordinate Magistrate—District Magistrate.—A Subordinate Magistrate is competent to act on a police-report, but it is not proper for a District Magistrate to pass an order directing proceedings to be taken on the police-report unless he has withdrawn the whole matter from the Court of such Subordinate Magistrate. (c)—Proceedings against one not originally accused without investigation or evidence on acquittal of accused—Deputy Commissioner as Magistrate and Revenue Officer—Judicial and executive functions, distinction between—Magistrate, orders by, to his subordinate on judicial matters, validity of—High Court, power of, to revise such orders.*—On information received and police investigation, the Deputy Commissioner, as Magistrate, instituted proceedings against the informant for having himself put opium in a parcel consigned by rail by another and made him over to a Subordinate Magistrate for trial, and on the failure of the prosecution the Deputy Commissioner directed proceedings to be taken against the consignor. Held that this order of the Deputy Commissioner against the consignor, without further information or investigation, was without jurisdiction.

The Deputy Commissioner, who is also a Revenue Officer, did not act in his latter capacity as a mere complainant, but as a Magistrate acting under s. 190, cl. (c), Criminal Procedure Code, and as such his order is subject to revision by the High Court. SHAHIRAM v. QUEEN-EMPRESS

27. ——— Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 191—Cognizance of an offence on suspicion—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 211—Police report—False charge, prosecution for, without first enquiring into truth of original complaint.—A person having laid an information before the police, the police reported the case as false; the informant then appeared before a Magistrate, asking that his case might be investigated, and his witnesses summoned. This application was refused, and the Magistrate, after perusing the police report, passed an order directing him to be prosecuted under s. 211 of the Penal Code. Held that the application to the Magistrate was "a complaint" within the meaning of s. 191 of the Criminal Procedure Code into which the Magistrate was bound to have enquired. A Magistrate may take cognisance under s. 191 of the Criminal Procedure Code of an offence brought to his notice by a police report which affords ground for a suspicion that an offence has been committed; but as a matter of sound judicial discretion, a Magistrate should not so proceed and direct that the person suspected be tried until some person aggrieved has complained, or until he has before him a police report on the subject based on an investigation directed to the offence to be tried, and in cases of alleged false charges, until it is clear that the original charge has been either heard and dismissed or abandoned. And before the order to prosecute for the false charge is made, the person who made the original charge should be offered an opportunity of supporting it or abandoning it.
